Daladier Pledges Colonial Defense By 'Every Means'

Premier Will Visit Corsica and Tunisia; Calls Riots There 'Answer' to Rome

By the Associated Press.

Paris, Dec. 5.—Premier Daladier said today France was resolved to demand respect for "the absolute integrity" of all French territory by "every means."

This was his answer to the Italian clamor over French Corsica and Tunisia. Informed quarters read into it an additional message to Germany—France intends to keep her colonies despite Germany's demands.

His declaration as it affected Germany was held significant in view of the arrival here tomorrow of Joachim von Ribbentrop, German foreign minister, to sign a no-war pact and to discuss the political situation.

Will Visit Colonies

Daladier's remarks were in a communique announcing his intention to visit Corsica and Tunisia shortly after January 1. He urged inhabitants there to remain calm. The plea followed yesterday's riotous demonstrations against Italy and professing loyalty to France.

Of the Italian press campaign and Chamber of Deputies' demonstration regarding France and French possessions, Daladier said:

"There is no need to state that these manifestations will meet strong opposition against the cession of any territory over which the national flag floats."

He said the loyalty demonstrations in Tunisia and Corsica were "the best response that could be made" to Italian cries for French territory. He noted the Italian government had answered a French protest by stating the Fascist colonial claims were not formulated by the government.

London Reassured

(British Prime Minister Chamberlain announced in London he had received assurances the Italian government "did not associate" itself with Fascist territorial demonstrations against France and he therefore saw no reason to change his plans to visit Rome January 11 to 14.

(In Alexandria, Egypt, Frederic Megret, French editor, formally complained to authorities over stoning of his home by a mob of 40 Italian youths shouting "Down with France.")

As French diplomats hastened preparations for tomorrow's signing of the good neighbor pact with Germany they allowed the Italian colonies claims to rest with Daladier's statement.

Foreign office sources declared Von Ribbentrop and Foreign Minister Georges Bonnet were not contemplating specific talks on the Italo-French issue. It was expected, however, the subject would come up at least in references to the general European situation and its complications.

Chamberlain Gets Word

London, Dec. 5 (A.P.).—Prime Minister Chamberlain told the House of Commons Italian assurances had been received after the Earl of Perth, British Ambassador to Rome, had told the Italian foreign minister, Count Galeazzo Ciano, that territorial demonstrations "must have a detrimental effect on the prospects of collaboration between the four Munich powers" unless "steps are taken to correct the impression created."

Chamberlain, countering numerous opposition questions, indicated French sovereignty over Tunisia, Corsica and Nice was covered by an annex to the Anglo-Italian agreement of April 16 which placed Britain and Italy on record as having no desire to modify the territorial situation in the Mediterranean. This accord came into force November 16.

He implied Britain would back French resistance to Italian clamor for French territory by stating:

"Nothing in the Anglo-Italian agreement of April 16 affects in any way our obligations to France."

Rumania Retires Minister to Britain

Bucharest, Dec. 5 (A.P.).—A royal decree today disclosed Basile de Grigorcea, Rumanian minister to Britain, had been recalled from London and retired from the public service.

The decree caused speculation here as to whether something had gone wrong with King Carol's state visit to England November 15 to 18. It was indicated a charge d'affaires would represent Rumania in London for some time.

The Foreign Situation

PREMIER Daladier answered Italian clamor over French Corsica and Tunisia by declaring France would use "every means" to keep her lands.

FRENCH naval detachments were ordered to Le Havre to break up the maritime strike as the government ignored labor overtures for peace.—Page 9.

ITALIAN press accused France of "provocative attitude" and indicated demands for French colonies would be pressed.—Page 9.

GERMAN pressure was reported to have caused Lithuanian cabinet reshuffle that placed B. K. Balutis, former Chicagoan, in office as deputy premier.—Page 9.

Pirow Fears War by Spring If Drift Goes On

Sure to Come Unless Tension Relaxes in Month or So, He Says

By Frank R. Kelley.
Special Cable to The Post.

London, Dec. 5.—Europe is drifting into a war which will break out next spring unless the present international tension is relaxed within a month or two, Oswald Pirow, minister of defense in the Union of South Africa, declared in a formal statement issued here tonight.

Purely psychological factors are making for war, according to Pirow, who added:

"The tragedy of the situation is that since the settlement of the Czecho-Slovakian issue there is no principle at stake which would excuse a war, let alone make it inevitable."

Italy Warned by England

Pirow's statement followed his return from a two-week swing around Europe, during which he studied the international situation at first hand and interviewed Reichsfuehrer Hitler and Premier Mussolini after the bloodless victory at Munich. In the course of his tour Pirow also visited Belgium and Holland and before setting out from London he had long talks with Prime Minister Chamberlain and Foreign Secretary Halifax.

Diplomatic quarters attached the greatest significance to Pirow's outburst of pessimism, reading it in conjunction with Prime Minister Chamberlain's disclosure in the House of Commons today that Italy had been warned over the deepening quarrel with France.

Point to De La Warr Talk

Observers also called attention to the disillusionment expressed last night by a member of Chamberlain's cabinet, Earl De La Warr, president of the board of education. In a speech, he said:

"There is a deep and growing feeling that there is nothing we can do that can satisfy Germany . . . ."

In most quarters it is believed that Earl De La Warr spoke with Chamberlain's full approval. Tonight the question is asked whether Pirow's declaration also was sanctioned by the prime minister, al-

Burke Leads Protest on Persecutions

Urges 'United Front' For Racial Tolerance; Mass Meeting Draws 2,000 Despite Rain

Senator Burke, Nebraska Democrat, joined Washington religious leaders in urging a united front against racial and religious prejudice and intolerance at a mass meeting at Constitution Hall last night.

It was the fourth annual mass meeting arranged by the Committee on Religious Life in the Nation's Capital and was held at this time because of Nazi outrages against Jews. Nearly 2,000 persons attended, despite continuous rain.

The Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington, and the Rev. Edmund A. Walsh, vice president of Georgetown University, issued a call for "moral rearmament"—a spiritual revival throughout the Nation—to strengthen the constitutional guarantee of religious freedom as well as the defense of all religious groups against the twin menace of Fascism and Communism.

Moral Duty Stressed

"With all the advances made in the world," Burke said, "it is disheartening that deep-seated racial and religious prejudices still have so strong a hold.

"Our duty to express moral indignation is heightened by the realization that failure to do so will give a form of approval to intolerance."

A responsibility rests upon the United States, he said, to make sure that free political institutions shall be preserved.

"Not often in recorded history," he declared, "has the world had greater occasion to weep because of the misery and suffering heaped upon helpless individuals whose chief offense has been to differ from the prevailing dominant group in race, language or religion."

He quoted Daniel Webster as saying "the aroused indignation of the civilized world" was greater than arbitrary or despotic power.

Virginia Statutes Cited

The Virginia statutes for religious freedom, of which Thomas Jefferson was author, "should be studied in every school, church and home," he declared.

Urging all religious groups to join in the fight to preserve religious freedom and to oppose the appearance in this country of the brand of sentiment and belief which has stirred up racial and religious persecution abroad, Bishop Freeman declared "the time has come for a new line-up."

"No one faith can fight this battle alone," he declared.

He said he would put himself "in line with the ancient church"—the Hebrew—as well as with the Catholic faith, "in the earnest determi-

Export-Import Bank to Give Cuba $50,000,000 Credit

Havana, Dec. 5 (U.P.).—The Export-Import Bank of Washington will provide credit of $50,000,000 for Cuba simultaneously with the projected revision of the Cuban-United States reciprocal trade agreement, Pedro Martinez Fraga, Cuban Ambassador to Washington, said tonight.

Martinez Fraga said he had not heard any reports that the Cuban foreign debt would be consolidated.

Ships and Planes Fogbound All Along Coast; 1 Local Victim

Misty rain and a thick fog, which blanketed the Atlantic Seaboard, brought death to a motorist last night and disrupted air travel and shipping into Washington, will give way to clearing skies today, the Weather Bureau reported last night.

Scores were hurt in accidents attributed to low visibility in Washington and on the highways nearby.

A woman motorist struck a colored man as he was walking back to his car after it had collided with another machine on the fog-obscured Washington-Richmond highway about four miles south of Alexandria last night.

The victim, Frank Minor, 25, of 522 North Pitt street, Alexandria, escaped injury in the first accident but died of injuries suffered in the second about 40 minutes after being taken to Alexandria Hospital.

Police said the car that hit him was driven by Mrs. Chanler Guckkert, of Route No. 1, Alexandria. The name of the driver of the car involved in the first accident was given as Elmer Harbrower, of Alexandria.

A Washington bus driver for Pan-American Trailways and 21 passengers were injured when the bus overturned on U. S. Route 1 at the city limits of Philadelphia. The driver, Earl Fuller, 32, of 623 East Capitol street, was released in bail on a charge of assault and battery by automobile. He suffered a fractured arm and shoulder.

Planes of the three main commercial lines at Washington Airport began operating yesterday afternoon on irregular schedules as visibility improved. Traffic on the Potomac moved cautiously and the Norfolk line was operating from 15 minutes to an hour behind schedule.

The temperature reached a maximum of 59 degrees yesterday at 2 p. m., the Weather Bureau reported, while the low was 44 degrees at 12:05 a. m. The forecast

Kidnapers Got Wrong Girl, Sleuths Hold

Intended Victim Takes Same Route To Her Home

Possibility that the kidnaping of Mary Brown, 18-year-old Oxon Hill (Md.) schoolgirl, was a case of mistaken identity was being studied last night by private investigators.

The investigators, brought into the case by the father of the girl, William Brown, a government employe, last night admitted they had several clews which led them to believe the kidnapers meant to seize the daughter of a neighboring well-to-do gentleman farmer.

The private detectives pointed out that their story fitted in with the fact that the three men who grabbed Mary as she and her sister, Lucy, 15, were walking along Box road near their home last Wednesday afternoon, released her 30 hours later, pushing her out of a black car on a farm adjacent to the Brown homestead.

Other Girl Walked on Road

It also was disclosed that the girl who may have been the abductors' intended victim was accustomed to walk daily past the spot at which Mary was seized and thrown into a black-bodied truck, while Lucy escaped by running into the woods.

Meanwhile, a Washington cabman's tip yesterday aroused hopes that the first definite clew to the kidnapers' hideout had been found. The taxi driver reported to Maryland State police at the Waldorf substation that he had seen a black-bodied truck—similar to the one

Man Half Buries Self in Fatal Leap Off Calvert Bridge

A man identified by papers in his pockets as Peter Di Donato, 36 New York avenue northeast, about 35, leaped 100 feet to his death from the Calvert Street Bridge last night.

Before horror-struck witnesses could reach him, he climbed the parapet at a point where the distance from the bridge to the ground is the greatest. He stood for a minute on the edge and then dived over.

The terrific force of the fall buried more than half the body in the soft earth.

Two Navy Fliers Die in Flames

Coronado, Calif., Dec. 5 (U.P.).—Two Navy fliers were burned to death today when their scout bomber crashed into an unoccupied garage in the residential section of Coronado. The plane narrowly missed several homes when it hurtled down out of control.

Those killed were Aviation Cadet Francis P. Kerr, 27, of Coronado, a member of Bombing Squadron 3 attached to the U. S. Saratoga, and Carleton Hargraves, 25, of Los Angeles, aviation machinist's mate.

Warring Case Mistrial; Jury Out 4 Days

7-5 for Conviction; Over 400 Ballots; Mrs. Sadur Faints; Retrial Set Jan. 23

After 82 hours and 3 minutes of deliberation, the Warring conspiracy trial was ended in a mistrial last night, when a jury of 11 men and one woman reported at 10:03 p. m. it was hopelessly deadlocked.

Mrs. Gordon L. R. Sadur, wife of one of the defendants, fainted as Justice Bolitha Laws, after discharging the jury, set a retrial date tentatively for January 23.

It was reported that the jurors took more than 400 ballots—"counting was halted after the four-hundredth ballot"—in their four-day deliberation, and that the count stood 7 to 5 for conviction at the final poll.

The Warring brothers, Emmitt, Leo Paul, and Charles (Rags)—who with Sadur are charged with a plot to conceal the profits of a $2,000,000-a-year numbers racket—were silent and appeared crestfallen as the jury returned with its verdict.

Foreman Anticipates Question

Appearing twice before Justice Laws earlier in the day—once to be admonished that the minority must do everything reasonable to reconcile its conviction with that of the majority, and a second time to hear the jurist reread his instructions—the jurors entered the courtroom again shortly after 10 p. m. There were about 20 persons in the chamber, including the defendants, their counsel, United States attorneys and several friends of the Warrings.

Even before Justice Laws could complete his opening question, "I assume the jury is still deadlocked?" the foreman of the jury, A. Malcolm Duvall, replied: "Yes, we are, your honor."

"As to all the defendants?" asked Laws.

"Yes, your honor."

Then, pointing out that he could see no purpose in holding the jurors any longer, Justice Laws discharged them.

At this point District Attorney Pine urged the court "in view of the great public interest of the case" to set it for retrial as soon after the first of the year as possible.

Ask Long Delay

Asked by Justice Laws whether he planned to have the retrial before him, Pine replied that he did. Asked to present his view on the question of a retrial date, Leo A. Rover, counsel for Sadur, urged that retrial be delayed until February because of pressing business. Attorneys Harry T. Whalen and William B. O'Connell, who represented the Warrings, also favored a later date.

Laws then set January 23 as the tentative date, and suggested that if the date proved to be too much of a hardship for the defense lawyers, they should present a formal motion for continuance.

Just as Laws arose to leave, Mrs. Sadur—who has been emotionally wrought up all during the trial and who had been sitting between her two sons, Marvin, 12, and Hillard, 16—screamed and collapsed. Sadur rushed up to her and took her in

James Roosevelt Laughs at $50,000 As Movie Salary

Hollywood, Dec. 5 (A.P.).—James Roosevelt, eldest son of the President, is not quite sure what his motion picture duties will be.

In a press conference this morning the new vice president of Samuel Goldwyn, Inc., was asked what he expected to do in his new job. He answered, "I'll do whatever Mr. Goldwyn says."

And that, said Goldwyn, will be, "The best he can."

Roosevelt laughed at Hollywood reports his salary would be $50,000 a year. He said that was "a little too high."

Plot Reported To Kill Prince Paul

New York, Dec. 5 (U.P.).—Despite official denials, it was persistently reported here tonight that New York City police, acting on request of the United States State Department, had notified Scotland Yard assassins were en route to London to kill Prince Paul, Yugoslav regent, now visiting there.

The assassins, reportedly hired by Macedonian revolutionaries, were expected to land at Southampton. The British liner Queen Mary is due there tomorrow.

World Looks to U. S. To Save Democracies, Roosevelt Declares

By the Associated Press.

Chapel Hill, N. C., Dec. 5.—President Roosevelt warned the world's dictatorships by implication here today that the United States, while wholeheartedly for peace, is "not only the largest and most powerful democracy in the whole world, but many other democracies look to us for leadership that world democracy may survive."

In another reference to totalitarian regimes, he said:

"There may be those in the world who believe that a regimented people, whose every thought and action is directed by one man, may give some people a type of security which is pleasing to them.

"But whatever convictions I have, none is stronger than my abiding belief that the security and well-being of the American people can best be served by the democratic processes which have made this country strong and great."

Urges Liberals "Onward"

In his first speech since the Congressional election, the Chief Executive declared that "liberal" forces must move onward and not wait for the "evolution of future decades" to meet social and economic needs.

Speaking before a student forum of the University of North Carolina, whose liberal teachings he praised, the Chief Executive made it clear that Republican gains in the new Congress would not deter him from pressing forward with reform measures.

"It is only the unthinking liberals in this world who see nothing but tragedy in the slowing up or temporary stopping of liberal progress," he said.

"It is only the unthinking conservatives who rejoice when a social or economic reform falls to be 100 per cent successful."

Denies Liberalism Is Dead

At another point, in commenting on the elections, he said pointedly:

"You have read that as a result of balloting last November, the liberal forces in the United States are on their way to the cemetery—yet I ask you to remember that liberal forces in the United States have often been killed and buried—with the inevitable result that in short order they have come to life again with more strength than they had before."

Devoting the major part of his speech to domestic affairs, the President, after praising the "democratic process" that has operated in this country, continued:

"The future, however, rests not on chance alone, not on mere conservatism, mere smugness, mere fatalism, but on the affirmative action which we take in America.

"What America does or fails to do in the next few years has a far greater bearing and influence on the history of the human race for centuries to come than most of us who are here today can ever conceive."

10,000 Hear Address

The President spoke from a flag-decorated rostrum in the university gymnasium, a heavy rain forcing transfer of the ceremonies from Keenan Stadium. The gym was filled to its capacity of 7,000.

Amplifiers carried the address to four other buildings on the campus seating 3,000 more. As the school band played "Hail to the Chief," Thomas J. Wilson, dean of admissions and registrar of the university, met the President at the door and attired him in cap and gown.

The President went to the platform accompanied by members of his party, including William C. Bullitt, Ambassador to France. Among

Court Denies NLRB Right to Void Contract

Green Is Jubilant As Hughes' Ruling Bulwarks the A. F. L.

The Supreme Court ruled yesterday that the National Labor Relations board lacked power to invalidate a contract between Consolidated Edison Co. and an American Federation of Labor union.

The A. F. L. union contract was permitted to stand, but other portions of the board's order in the Consolidated Edison case were upheld in a decision dealing the NLRB its first partial setback before the high tribunal.

Chief Justice Hughes declared the national labor relations act "gives no express authority to the board to invalidate contracts with independent labor organizations," and said the board failed to give the A. F. L. union notice that validity of its contracts was in dispute.

William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, was

Ford Disliked Patent Pools, Edsel Says

Preferred to Give Use; Other Magnates Testify At Monopoly Inquiry

By Robert C. Albright.

How Henry Ford was denied an automobile patent 35 years ago because he might be a "fly-by-nighter" and how he now grants patents freely to all who ask use of them was related yesterday to the President's Monopoly Committee.

Ford's rise from the bottom to a place near the top of the industry, and the rise and fall of patents as a factor in a stiffly competitive business, was described under friendly questioning by three big names in the trade.

Packard Keeps Patents

Dapper Edsel Ford, president of the Ford Motor Co., told how his father broke into the automobile business in 1903 and remained strictly outside of all pooling agreements, but granted free use of Ford patents to any concern that wanted them.

Alfred Reeves, graying vice president of the Automobile Manufacturers Association, related how that group started pooling patents of members in 1915, but has discontinued the practice on patents issued in the last eight years.

Macauley Testifies

And from big, red-faced Alvan Macauley, president of the Packard Motor Car Co., the committee heard how his concern held on to its patents, paid royalties for the use of others and expects to continue the practice.

But from the standpoint of development of the industry as a whole, Macauley said he thought the Ford policy of granting licenses

2 Families With Bright Futures Need $190 to Tide Them Over

The Washington Post Christmas Fund this year will once again be devoted to the District's neediest families selected from the "unemployed employables"—decent families, deserving, honest, willing to work—but desperately in need of a helping hand. Each day, between now and Christmas, stories of these families—selected with the cooperation of member agencies of the District of Columbia Council of Social Agencies—will be printed. Read these stories. And then decide if you can help.

A total of 31 individual contributions and anonymous sums totaling $7.69, left in the Neediest Families Fund Box at The Post Building, start this year's Neediest Families Fund off with $202.32.

Early contributions ranged from 50 cents to $35.

One contributor writes:

"I send herewith a small check and best wishes for the success of your effort to help needy families.

"There is a sense of satisfaction in being able to direct one's small, poor efforts toward a known object.

"You are to be congratulated on a simple and direct approach to one of our deepest problems."

Another contributor, remaining anonymous, sent in one-half of her Christmas savings account to the fund, with the explanation that "yours is a better use for this money than I had originally in mind."

Bell System Brands Phone Report 'Unfair'

A. T. & T. Sees Attempt To Paint It as Greedy, Menacing Monopoly

By the United Press.

The proposed report of the Federal Communications Commission on its investigation into the activities of the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. was criticized by the company tonight as "unfair," "incomplete," "unsound," "distorted" and "flagrantly biased."

The $5,000,000,000 corporation submitted a 280-page answer to the report which delves deeply into the A. T. & T. financial structure and made more than 100 findings.

The report was prepared by FCC Commissioner Paul C. Walker last spring in conformance with an inquiry ordered by Congress three years ago. It was made public by Chairman Frank McNinch, who emphasized that it is preliminary to a final report which will be submitted to Congress.

Insinuations Resented

The A. T. & T. charged that the report seeks to present the Bell System as "something menacing, as an institution built by sharp practices and in disregard to public interest, and as an organization motivated by greed and as a business functioning as a monopoly—in the odious sense of that term."

In some cases, it said, the statement of "half truths and innuendo is relied upon to accomplish this end." It added that the report ignores the fact that this Nation has the "best telephone service in the world."

Declaring that the facts in the case do not fit the pattern which the report has presented, the company said that authors of the report "should have been frank enough to accept and state the indisputable fact that public opinion and the statutes of the States and Nation have looked for many years toward a regulated, unified service rather than toward competition in the telephone field."

Regulation Held "Fantastic"

The company branded as "fantastic" that portion of the report which proposed drastic Federal regulation of the telephone industry. The report proposed that the Government review, approve or disapprove all Bell policies promulgated by the A. T. and T.; Federal regulation of the costs and prices of telephone apparatus and equipment; Federal regulation of Bell system financing and Federal review of intercompany contracts.

A $24,000,000 annual saving in the Nation's telephone bill.

[The company replied that it had effected substantial rate cuts prior to the opening of the investigation and that it consulted the commission only on reductions totaling $13,000,000.]

A reduction of $5,000,000 per year in extra charges for so-called hand telephone sets. [The company repled that improved business conditions enabled it to expedite reductions which it was making constantly under its policies.]

A cut of $530,000 annually in wire service charges to radio stations. [The company said the changes in these rates were not proposed or discussed with the commission representatives in advance of filing of tariffs.]

A change in A. T. & T. policy with respect to toll rates, including a "willingness to make indicated rate reductions and negotiations and to negotiate thereon." [The company professed to be unable to understand this claim, saying that it consistently has cooperated with Government agencies on rate problems.]

A reduction in the interest rate charged by the A. T. & T. on temporary loans to associated companies. [The company replied that these reductions were effected before it knew that the subject was to be investigated.]

Travel Falling, Railroads Study Fare Cut

Eastern Lines Consider Return to 2-Cent Rate of Last July

By the Associated Press.

New York, Dec. 5—Railroad circles heard today that managements of Eastern roads have considered a voluntary cut in passenger fares, now 2½ cents a mile in coaches, and may establish a new tariff early in 1939.

Sentiment in favor of a permanent slash in passenger rates was reported to have manifested itself when traffic executives of the major systems took up the question of reduced rates for the New York World's Fair opening next spring. It also expressed itself, according to some rail executives, when the roads more recently decided to reduce fares to 2 cents a mile on roundtrip tickets for Christmas holiday travelers.

That the roads have given some thought to a cheaper fare was confirmed by an official of a leading Eastern trunk line, who said: "It is in the wind, but nothing has been decided yet and probably will not be until after the first of the year, or possibly until after the World's Fair is in progress."

Informed sources expressed the opinion that if anything came of the discussion it probably would mean re-establishment of the 2-cent-a-mile tariff in effect prior to July 25. On this date the fare was boosted to 2½ cents under authority granted by the Interstate Commerce Commission, but with the increase passenger travel on Eastern railroads suffered a slump, while bus travel was reported to have shown corresponding expansion.

Two years ago the commerce commission ordered the railroads to cut the passenger coach rate to 2 cents a mile from 3.6 cents a mile.

He declared the Wagner act and tax laws must be revised in addressing the Republican Luncheon Club of Southeastern Pennsylvania.

"The National Labor Relations Board has been an economic irritant at the very moment when the Nation needed a soothing syrup," he said. "It is being administered in a spirit of class suspicion, if not hatred."

He declared that "the power to tax is becoming the power to destroy" and called for a "complete revision of our tax laws."

Senator McGill (Democrat), of Kansas, reported his unsuccessful campaign cost $7,247 and that he had received contributions of $8,202.

Senator Thomas (Democrat), of Oklahoma, reported his successful campaign for re-election cost him $250 and that he had received $250 in contributions. Harry O. Glasser, Republican who ran against Thomas, reported contributions totaling $3,522 and said he spent $4,311.

Court Extends Compensation Liability Here

To Cover Medical Costs Plus $7,500 Payment In Appeals Verdict

Employers are liable for medical expenses over and above the $7,500 maximum compensation set by the District employes' compensation act on payments for death or injury of workers, the court of appeals ruled yesterday.

In a decision reversing the findings of the District Court, Associate Justice Henry E. Edgerton held that benefits for medical, surgical or similar treatment are not affected by the provision of the law that states: "The total compensation payable under this act for injury or death shall in no event exceed the sum of $7,500."

Justice Edgerton, joined by Chief Justice D. Lawrence roner and Associate Justice Fred M. Vinson, maintained that the word "compensation" does not include payment for medical services, and that therefore the employer is liable for doctors' bills in addition to the $7,500 maximum compensation payment. Total monetary cost to the employer for the injury or death could thus amount to a sum considerably greater than $7,500.

The court held that its conclusion was in agreement with the principle that compensation acts "are to be 'construed liberally in furtherance of the purpose for which they were enacted.'"

The decision arose from a suit by Frank Cardillo, deputy commissioner of the United States Employes Compensation Commission, and Julius H. Cobb, former employe of a local hardware firm, against the Liberty Mutual Insurance Co.

Attorneys for Cobb argued that he had contracted tuberculosis from using an allegedly faulty gas mask in repairing a refrigerator, from which sulphur dioxide gas was escaping. The insurance company, after paying compensation and medical benefits in excess of $7,500, declined to continue the compensation payments.

The appellate court held that medical benefits seem to be "clearly" excluded from the meaning of "compensation."

Court Awards Indians' Lawyers Fees of $809,000

By the Associated Press.

The Court of Claims awarded attorneys for four Western Indian tribes fees and expenses yesterday totaling $809,000.

Daniel B. Henderson, Washington attorney who won a $5,466,480 judgment against the Government in June, 1937, for the Klamoth and Moadoc tribes and the Yahooskin band of Snake Indians of Oregon, was awarded $350,000. Attorneys for the Shoshone tribe of Wyoming, who won a judgment of $4,494,906 against the Government in 1937, were awarded $449,496 in fees and $10,000 for expenses. Both cases involved lands claims. The court did not say who were the attorneys for the Shoshone tribe.

Judges Williams and Whaley dissented in the Klamoth and Shoshone cases, respectively.

FCC Decides Against Action In 'Mars' Case

Holds Station's Promise Not to Let It Happen Again Sufficient

Reversing its previous policy of indirect censorship of radio programs, the Federal Communications Commission yesterday decided to do nothing regarding the Orson Welles "Men From Mars" broadcast which on October 30 stirred up listeners to a point of mass hysteria by its realism.

The commission announced that it believed the steps already taken by the Columbia Broadcasting System to prevent a repetition of the incident were sufficient to protect public interest.

Hence C. B. S. stations who carried the program will not be held to account when they ask for license renewals as were National Broadcasting System stations following the broadcast of the "Adam and Eve" episode with Mae West and Charlie McCarthy.

372 Protests Received

The F. C. C. disclosed that it had received 372 protests against the Orson Welles dramatization of E. G. Wells' 30-year-old novel and 255 letters approving it. The commissioners, who failed to hear the original broadcast, listened to a transcription of the program.

Twice before the commission has called radio stations to account for broadcasting programs about which there had been complaints, although it pointed out that the communications act specifically bars it from exercising censorship over what it carried over the air.

No Stations Punished

In the Mae West case, Chairman Frank R. McNinch sent a formal rebuke to Lenox Lohr, president of N. B. C., and announced that the program would be taken into account when the network stations applied for license renewals. No station was punished, however, by having its license revoked.

Following the receipt of a complaint that profanity was broadcast in connection with a radio presentation of Eugene O'Neill's "Beyond the Horizon," the commission first called the N. B. C. stations involved to account and set their licenses for hearing.

When public reaction proved unfavorable, however, the commission reversed its action and renewed all licenses without a hearing.

Monopoly

to anybody who wanted to use them was the "best."

In simple, crisp phrases Ford told the story of his father's clash with the famous "Selden patent" at the turn of the century, how the patent was finally upset through Ford litigation, and how the pioneer manufacturer has since remained aloof from group action with other producers.

Describes Selden Case

Asked "what happened" when Ford applied for a license from the then Licensed Automobile Manufacturers Association, Edsel said:

"I can't recall exactly the date this took place, but it was at one time during the course of the early days of the Ford Motor Co. when we were a small manufacturer and getting started. The association had been started and had acquired numerous motor companies as members. These members paid a license fee to the association under the Selden patent.

"My father inquired of one of the officers of the association if it were possible to join their association and become a member as the other motor car companies were.

Ford Needed a Reputation

"He was told, I understand, he had best go out and manufacture some motor cars and gain a reputation and prove that he wasn't a fly-by-night producer, before he should ask for a membership in this association."

Ford said that if the patent had been sustained "I think the Ford Motor Co. would have been put out of business or would have become a member of the association, one or the other."

Hugh Cox, special assistant to the Attorney General, examining the witnesses, remarked that "of course it would be rather difficult, assuming that that patent was valid, for your father to make a reputation manufacturing motor cars without a license."

Arnold Cites Ford Fight

Assistant Attorney General Thurman Arnold, head of the Justice Department anti-trust division, said no one except the Ford Motor Co. had the resources to fight the Selden patent to a court showdown or "at least no one else did." He asked Ford if he did not think free interchange of patents encouraged competition in the industry, and the witness replied: "I feel so." He said his company felt a patent "should be worked" rather than held by one producer.

Specifically, Ford proposed only two changes in the patent laws—limitation of the length of time an application for a patent is permitted to remain in the Patent Office, and provision that notice of patent infringement be served on accused companies.

The witness said his company never pays royalties for use of a patent, but frequently aids inventors in the independent production of their own device "and we buy it" rather than try to gain control of an invention.

Question Patent Counsel

Appearing with Ford was Joseph I. Farley, patent counsel for the Ford Motor Co. Farley was questioned by Herman Oliphant on whether he thought inventive genius is a "bottleneck" as opposed to necessary capital.

"I wouldn't say that inventive genius is a bottleneck, but there may be a bottleneck on the part of men who are rather more patent-minded than they are seeking to make a real contribution which they can develop and give to the general public.

"I have said that the patent system seems to me to have sort of degenerated into the fact that a great many people to whom patents are granted, and a great many people who seek to obtain patents, do it in possibly the same attitude that a person goes out and buys a ticket to the sweepstakes."

Patent Pools Explained

Reeves on the stand told how the Licensed Automobile Manufacturers Association later became the Automobile Chamber of Commerce and after the NRA codes changed its name again to the National Automobile Manufacturers Association.

He explained how a cross-licensing pool was launched within the organization in 1915 partly as a result of Ford's successful fight against the Selden patent. Producers, he said, felt that their chief interest was to produce the best automobile possible unhampered by patent litigation. The pool, he said, started with 547 patents, with provision for inclusion of all patents developed by members in a ten-year period. When the agreement was renewed in 1925, with 1,066 patents, it failed to cover patents developed in the future. Again in 1930, the agreement was renewed. Including devices developed in the previous five years, patents reached a peak of 1,687. But in 1935, when the agreement under which the pool is now operating was approved, it included only those patents held as of January 1, 1930.

Number Declines

Through expiration of patents, and failure to extend those in the pool, Reeves said the number of patents cross-licensed declined to 1,285 in 1935 and to 1,058 at the present time, and these are of little value. He said that, beginning in 1935, members of the pool who were spending huge sums in developing patents they thought might prove valuable, "did not wish to put them in the cross-licensing agreement." He said the original pool was designed to interchange patents that were basically necessary in production of automobiles, and this necessity no longer exists.

Representative Summers asked if it would not be valuable to have "compulsory interchange" of patents in all industries, and Reeves said he was no judge of industrial requirements outside of the automobile industry.

Cites Trade Restrictions

Arnold asked if patents could not be used for unreasonable restrictions on trade, just as combinations and mergers are sometimes used in restraint of trade. Arnold said he thought an unreasonable restriction might exist where a monopoly was created by a patent. Reeves replied that this was a "legal question."

"Conceivably," said Arnold, "machinery might be set up to treat the patent problem much as you treat the merger problem. That is merely a suggestion of where these hearings might be leading us."

Supreme Court Denies Labor Board's Power To Void Contract in Ruling Hailed by A.F.L.

Court

swift to predict in a statement that the court's finding will force the board to reverse itself in all other cases in which it has "illegally abrogated contracts entered into between employers and A. F. of L. unions."

Green, who frequently has charged the board with C. I. O. leanings, said the Supreme Court "has knocked the props out from under the board's arbitrary, prejudicial and grossly unfair position toward the A. F. of L. with regard to union contracts."

In affirming the remainder of the NLRB Consolidated Edison Co. order, Chief Justice Hughes upheld the board's broad jurisdiction over utilities which are local in nature, but which service and sell to other concerns engaged in interstate commerce.

Court Split Three Ways

The court divided three ways on the ruling. Justices Reed and Black, President Roosevelt's appointees to the high bench, argued in a partial dissent that the board's entire order should have been upheld. They took issue with the majority finding that the board was "without authority to require the companies to desist from giving effect to the contracts."

Justices Butler and McReynolds, at the other extreme, approved the majority's modification of the NLRB order, but declared the court should have gone further and "set aside" the entire order, because the board lacked jurisdiction.

In his majority opinion, Hughes said the board's contention that the A. F. L. union contracts were illegal fruit of company efforts were without proof and "left as a matter of mere conjecture."

Could Solicit Members

"The Brotherhood was entitled to form its locals and their organization was not assailed," said Hughes. "The Brotherhood and its locals were entitled to solicit members and the employes were entitled to join. These rights cannot be brushed aside as immaterial, for they are of the very essence of the rights which the labor relations act was passed to protect, and the board could not ignore or override them in professing to effectuate the policies of the act.

"To say that of the 30,000 (employes) who did join there were not those who joined voluntarily or that the brotherhood did not have members whom it could properly represent in making these contracts would be to indulge an extravagant and unwarranted assumption. The employers' practices, which were complained of, could be stopped without imperiling the interests of those who for all that appears had exercised freely their right of choice.

"We conclude that the board was without authority to require the petitioning companies to desist from giving effect to the brotherhood contracts . . ."

Background of the Case

The case centered on agreements entered in the spring of 1937 under which the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, the A. F. of L. affiliate, and its local unions obtained recognition as the collective bargaining agency for those employes who were its members.

The United Electoral and Radio Workers of America, C. I. O. affiliate, complained to the board that the Consolidated Edison Co. was interfering with the right of employes to form a union of their own choosing, and charged the company was aiding the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers.

In the ensuing Labor Relations Board order, the company was told to cease and desist discrimination against members of the C. I. O. affiliate, to reinstate six employes found to have been illegally discharged, to terminate its contract with the A. F. of L. affiliate.

Charles Fahy, general counsel of the Labor Board, in a statement to reporters, said "a careful reading of the opinion will show that the question of the contracts was decided on an extremely narrow ground, was one of procedure and does not affect the board's right to act on such contracts."

C. I. O.-A. F. of L. hostilities were projected into the comment following the ruling.

While Green lauded the court's action as "reasonable, just and highly commendable," Lee Pressman, general counsel of the C. I. O., declared the finding "can give but cold comfort to labor organizations seeking to advance themselves at the cost of the workers by obtaining preferential treatment from employers."

Pressman declared that "by implication the court holds that if the board had specified its charges clearly in the complaint it could properly have declared the contract invalid in its entirety as it attempted to do."

He said that following the procedural" lines of the decision, "the C. I. O. will continue to seek relief under the national labor relations act against collusion between employers and A. F. of L. unions which denies workers their right to choose their representatives freely for the purpose of collective bargaining."

Sees Other Reversals

Green, on the other hand, said the decision "is so sweeping that in conformance with it, the board will have to reverse itself in all such cases in which it has illegally abrogated contracts entered into between employers and A. F. of L. unions."

Hailing the decision as "not only a great victory for the American Federation of Labor," but a "great boon to the Nation," Green concluded:

"It serves notice on the National Labor Relations Board that law and justice will not sanction its policy of prejudice against the A. F. of L. and favoritism to the C. I. O. It clears the national labor relations act of doubts and uncertainties created by the board's rulings which have interfered with the negotiation of new union contracts, and it should restore the act in this important respect as a powerful instrumentality for collective bargaining and industrial peace."

The court meanwhile refused to permit counsel for Tom Mooney to file a petition for a writ of habeas corpus intended to free Mooney from San Quentin penetentiary, where he is serving a life sentence for complicity in the 1916 Preparedness Day bombing. A decision on constitutionality of the TVA was postponed at least until next Monday.

In the audience were Representative Doughton (Democrat), North Carolina, chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, and Senator Bailey (Democrat), North Carolina, a frequent critic of New Deal policies.

The speech, carried by radio over the Nation and short wave to many foreign lands, followed the conferring of a degree on Mr. Roosevelt by President Graham.

The President, en route to Washington from a Warm Springs, Ga., vacation, came here from Columbia, S. C., where this morning he had breakfast at the Governor's mansion with Gov. Olin D. Johnston, Gov.-elect Burnet R. Maybank, Senator Byrnes and a score of other prominent South Carolinians.

Senator Smith, reelected conservative Democrat who won over New Deal-supported Johnston in the primary, did not attend.

The President made a brief informal speech in the rain in front of the State capital building, then reboarded his train for Sanford, N. C., where he was met by Gov. Hoey for a 40-mile drive here by motor.

After his university address he motored 12 miles to Durham and entrained for Washington, where he is due tomorrow morning.

London Sees Partnership

London (Tuesday), Dec. 6 (U.P.).—President Roosevelt's speech Monday at Chapel Hill, N. C., was headlined in London morning newspapers, with stress placed on his statement that other democracies look to the United States for leadership.

The Daily Mail, in an editorial, said that "the President's words were restrained but do show British-American policy are in harness, however America's policy of isolation stands . . ."

"Certainly the people of this country can be no surer than the people of America just how Roosevelt will move next, but we can be sure of this—that in him Britain has a warm friend and that during his Presidency America's friendship toward Britain will keep on growing," the Daily Mail added.

The Daily Herald said that "President Roosevelt is determined that neither Europe nor other continents, nor the United States itself, shall ever forget America is the greatest and strongest democracy and as such capable of playing a decisive part in the future of the world . . .

"It is inevitable that a challenge is rising not merely to democracy as a political system, but to all such qualities as tolerance, mercy and kindness, which should make democrats everywhere wish to stand closer together.

"It is in that spirit of friendship based on common faith that opinion here welcomes the remarkable declaration by the President of the United States yesterday."

T.W.A. Abandons 'Lindbergh Line' As Its Slogan

Kansas City, Dec. 5 (AP).—Literature of Transcontinental & Western Air, Inc., appeared today without the slogan, "The Lindbergh Line" and airline officials met with a blunt "No comment" all questions regarding the deletion.

Although Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, former technical adviser for T. W. A., has not been associated with the airline since 1934, the company had continued to use his name in the slogan.

The Kansas City Star says, "It is known that the reason for the dropping of the Lindbergh identity is mounting complaints against the heroic Atlantic flier of 1927 because of his decision to live in Germany."

New York Outlaws 10-Cent Hotel Phones

New York, Dec. 5 (U.P.).—The 10-cent hotel telephone will be a thing of the past beginning January 1, 1939, according to a ruling handed down by the State public service commission today.

The commission ruled that hotels, which regularly charge a dime for 5-cent calls, will have to stick to the outside rate, and also may not charge patrons for overtime unless the hotel is charged for such overtime by the telephone company.

Fisher Union Votes End of Strike Involving 20,000

By the Associated Press.

Flint, Mich., Dec. 5.—Striking C. I. O. unionists voted tonight to return to work tomorrow at Fisher Body Plant No. 1, where a walkout has been followed by idleness for more than 20,000 automobile factory workers, but only upon threat of a new strike if their demands fail to be satisfied within 48 hours.

Members of Flint Local 581 were called to vote on ratification of settlement terms agreed to shortly after Sunday midnight by General Motors Corporation officials and U. A. W. representatives in conference at Detroit.

The strike, centering on a piecework-day rates wage issue, began last Friday. Originally the strike left 6,400 idle in the Fisher plant.

Shutdown of the General Motors Buick plant here, halting work for 14,000 men, and stoppage of the final assembly line at the Fisher Plant in Pontiac, sending 650 men home, followed as a consequence of a shortage in materials.

Third Division Veterans To Meet Tomorrow

The Washington branch of the Third Division, A. E. F., will hold its last meeting of the year tomorrow night in Duff's Grill, 1508 Fourteenth street northwest.

Among those invited are Maj. Gen. Hanson E. Ely, Maj. Gen. Fred W. Sladen, Maj. Gen. Peter C. Harris, Gen. Edwin B. Winans, Patrick J. Hurley and Maj. Henry O. Swindler.

Warring Jury Is Discharged; Argued 4 Days

Warring

his arms as the two boys tried to revive her.

After five minutes Mrs. Sadur recovered and was helped outside.

The jury had started deliberation at 11:58 a. m. Friday. When brought before the court the first time yesterday Justice Laws asked if any further instruction was desired.

"No, your honor," Duvall said, "I don't believe there is any question of law involved."

This was the first clew to the situation in the jury room. It appeared from Duvall's report that the three and a half days of deliberation have been directed toward what the Warrings and Sadur were thinking about when they drew up the income-tax returns showing a few thousand dollars' profit from the mammoth gambling enterprise which handled millions, paid scores of henchmen and maintained a fleet of motor vehicles.

Laws Invokes Authority

If fraud was the idea, the Court said, those intending it were guilty. But if there was an honest intention to report the income correctly they ought to be acquitted.

District Attorney Pine and Assistant District Attorney Wilson watched the proceedings carefully, but made no comment. Justice Laws then invoked the rarely used authority of a Federal judge to advise the minority to try to follow the reasoning of their associates.

"I am sure," Justice Laws said, "that all of you members of the jury will appreciate that you have been kept on this case since Friday because of the great importance of this case to the parties concerned, as well as to the public. Sometimes 12 persons cannot reconcile their minds. Yet it is their duty to do so if it is at all possible without sacrifice of conscience."

Quotes Supreme Court

The justice quoted the opinion of the Supreme Court that a minority of jurors ought to examine their minds carefully to determine whether they were holding out because of honest conviction or because of stubbornness.

As he has done frequently since ascending the bench in the autumn, Justice Laws departed from the rigid wording of the "Allen instruction," as the charge is known to lawyers, and used crisp, everyday language.

The jurors returned to their arguments about 10 a. m. Less than two hours later the 11 men and woman were back in court to ask for instructions. Justice Laws spent 50 minutes reading from the transcript the instruction he gave last Friday. They then retired, went to lunch, argued all afternoon, went to dinner and then returned to wrangle during the evening.

Profit-Sharing Might Halt Strikes, Herring Asserts

Senator Herring (Democrat), of Iowa, said last night that widespread adoption of profit-sharing systems might eliminate labor strife and save the country enough money to pay the entire public debt in less than 10 years.

The Iowan, speaking over the N. B. C. system said:

"We boast of the fruits and benefits of the capitalistic order but we leave to the comparative few the task of defending private capitalism. We could win large support by extending its benefits and increasing the numbers of men and women who are direct beneficiaries of the system through a boarder and more equitable distribution of wealth at the source of its creation, shared in by those workers who help to create it."

Morgan's Ouster In TVA Defended

Knoxville, Tenn., Dec. 5 (U.P.).—James L. Fly, general counsel of Tennessee Valley Authority, today told a Federal District Court that the TVA Act is unconstitutional insofar as it limits the removal powers of the Nation's President.

Fly was arguing before United States District Judge George Taylor that President Roosevelt acted within his authority in discharging Dr. Arthur E. Morgan as chairman of TVA last March for "contumacy." Morgan had filed suit for reinstatement.

Heil, Who Upset La Follette, Sees No Need for Progressives

'Two Parties Plenty,' Says Industrialist, Here To Confer With HOLC

JULIUS P. HEIL

"Two parties are plenty for this country," says Julius Heil, Governor-elect of Wisconsin, who unseated Gov. Philip La Follette and his Progressive followers in one of the most spectacular Republican triumphs of the November elections.

Asked if last month's balloting means "the La Follettes are washed up," the 62-year-old industrialist said, "I certainly hope so. Republicans and Democrats are all we need."

Heil paid a flying visit to the Capital yesterday for a conference with HOLC officials.

When he takes office January 2, the German-born pump manufacturer says he will "reduce taxes, modify labor laws and bring industry back to Wisconsin."

The State labor relations law, like the Wagner act, is "too one-sided," he contends. With elimination of "duplicating and unnecessary" services, he believes important economies can be effected in the State.

"The most important issues between the Republicans and Democrats is the protective tariff versus free trade," Heil declared. "It's all right to let in things we can't make or grow here, but we're never going to put the unemployed to work without protecting a lot of products."

Ruddy cheeks set off by a robin's egg blue double-breasted suit, the Governor-elect spoke heatedly of "Government interference with business."

Heil declined to "go out on the limb" with a prediction on the next Presidential election, but said "There is going to be a tremendous change of sentiment by 1940."

Kindler to Conduct School Concert Next Monday

The first concert in the National Symphony Orchestra's annual series of student programs will be given in the auditorium of Woodrow Wilson High School, Nebraska avenue and Chesapeake street northwest. The program, under the direction of Dr. Hans Kindler, conductor of the National Symphony, will be played next Monday at 3:30 p. m.

The award of the concert to Woodrow Wilson High School was made as a result of a competition in which schools were entitled to votes on the basis of the number of tickets sold.

The concert will open with "The Entrance of the Gods Into Valhalla" from Wagner's "Das Rheingold." Other works to be heard include the overture to Mozart's "The Marriage of Figaro," four excerpts from Bach's "Suite in B Minor," Pierne's "School of the Fauns" from "Cydalise" and Borodin's "Polovetzian Dances."

Two other concerts in Washington high schools will be given on December 15 and 16, repeating the above program.

for today is fair and somewhat colder. The minimum temperature for today will be 42, it was predicted.

The fog spread from Halifax, Nova Scotia, where visibility was at times less than 10 feet, as far south as Atlanta. Sixteen steamers were fogbound in Chesapeake Bay and were forced to anchor and keep running lights burning and foghorns booming.

One man was in Providence Hospital yesterday in serious condition as the result of an auto accident on the Edmonston road near Bladensburg.

Blair Hamell, of Riverdale, was on the hospital with a possible skull fracture after the automobile he was driving left the road in the fog and overturned several times.

An Eastern Airlines transport, forced down in a cornfield Saturday night with 21 passengers and a crew of three in nearby Maryland, was unable to take off yesterday because of zero ceiling. A Pennsylvania Central airliner, forced to turn back at Washington and land at Dahlgren, Va., was brought into the local airport yesterday and routed to Detroit.

New York harbor was hard hit by fog, and the Holland-American liner Noordam was forced to anchor temporarily off Ambrose Channel. All shipping was halted in Delaware Bay.

Weather Bureau officials blamed the mist on warm, moist winds blowing from the south and east over cold land surfaces. The fog was expected to continue through the night.

6th Avenue 'L' Brings $80,000

New York, Dec. 5 (AP).—The Sixth Avenue elevated structure, symbolic 60 years ago of modernity in transportation, was sold at auction today for scrap metal—for $80,000.

George L. Weissbaum, of the Portland Mill Wrecking Co., of San Francisco, bought the structure which is doomed to demolition. It was expected the structure would yield about 19,800 tons of scrap—17,000 tons of structural steel, and 2,800 tons of steel rails. The terms of the purchase specify demolition within 90 days.

Kidnapers Got Wrong Girl, Sleuths Hold

which carried Mary off—near a shack in the vicinity of Clifton Beach, Charles County, a point some 50 miles from Oxon Hill, Prince Georges County.

Early last night Corpl. W. A. Rogers and Officer J. R. Disharon were dispatched to the scene. The shack, however, proved to be one used by fishermen, and did not appear to be involved in the kidnaping. Mary had told police she believed she was held captive in a shack.

Beaten, Denied Water

Mary, a student at Notre Dame Academy here, was returning home when the abduction took place. After having been beaten and kept without food and water, she was released 30 hours later near her home. Exhausted and with her clothes partially torn from her body, she managed to find her way back to the Brown home.

Maj. Elmer F. Munshower, superintendent of Maryland State Police, who is heading the investigation and hunt for the kidnapers, yesterday postponed further questioning of Mary, who is slowly recovering from her experience.

He added, however, that he would have to have another talk with the girl if the cab driver's clew failed to develop. The police head said he would wait until the schoolgirl was released from the care of her physician, Dr. Roman Sanderson. Dr. Sanderson, after a visit yesterday, told the girl's father that Mary was slowly improving, but that she would have to remain in bed for a few more days.

Officers yesterday completely covered a criss-cross chain of small roads and paths near the Brown home, but found no clews.

Scores of motorists drove along narrow Box road yesterday in order to view the scene of the kidnaping and to catch a view of the Brown farm, about a quarter-mile off the road.

D. C. Tax Bill May Set Limit On Realty Levy

$1.75 Ceiling to Protect Home-Owners Favored By Special Investigator

By James D. Secrest

A ceiling of $1.75 on the District real estate tax and a floor of $1.50 may be written into the next revenue bill, it was learned yesterday, because of the fear of Washington home-owners that they again may be forced to make up the municipal deficit.

Dr. Chester Pond, special tax investigator, said that the proposal, advanced at last week's public hearings and indorsed by the Federation of Citizens Associations, is being given favorable consideration. He indicated it would be incorporated in his report to the joint committee on internal revenue taxation.

The suggestion that the 25-cent realty levy range be written into the law will be one topic to be considered by the tax advisory committee tomorrow afternoon.

Revenue Uncertain

Dr. Pond pointed out that the realty tax probably would remain at $1.75 next year because of the uncertainty of revenue that will be derived from the dual tax plan or whatever scheme is adopted by Congress to balance the District's budget.

Should the new taxes raise more revenue than anticipated, however, the surplus could be applied the following year to a realty rate cut.

The advantage of the range, he added, is that the District would have approximately $3,000,000 in annual revenue that could be made flexible to the municipal needs. Moreover, it would forestall the imposition of an additional burden on property owners should the new taxes fail to produce expected returns, he said.

Renew "Temporary" Tax

Under the present law the District Commissioners are required to raise the real estate tax whenever it appears that anticipated revenue will not be sufficient to finance Congressional appropriations for the District.

Two years ago the House, smarting under criticism of its refusal to accept a District tax on the salaries of members, formed the District committee to substitute a 25-cent realty tax increase for an income levy before voting on the local revenue bill. This "temporary" tax was renewed last year.

All investigators of the District tax system in recent years have agreed that real property is bearing its full share, and perhaps more, of the local tax burden and that there is a need for a broader base in future revenue bills.

Collins Plan Failed

Last year Representative Collins (Democrat), of Mississippi, tried to place a limitation on the District realty tax by means of a rider on the local supply bill. His rider would have kept the tax at $1.60 or below. The rider was stricken off, however, in the House on a point of order.

A question has been raised as to the constitutionality of the present law which empowers the Commissioners to adjust the realty tax rate each year, and it was for this reason that the $1.75 rate was written into the 1938 and 1939 revenue acts.

through the shattered clapboards of which the early rays of daylight and the cool breezes of winter never fail to penetrate.

Mr. X had a good job for several years. About a year and a half ago—involved in an accident, the blame for which fell upon him—he lost his job and has depended upon odd jobs and WPA assignments since then.

At the moment, however, there is a distinct ray of hope for the X family. Mr. X has been assured of a full-time position, paying $25 per week—in about three months.

Assistance at this time might rid year-old baby Peter of the cold he has had since early last month, build little Susan up to the weight of the average 7-year-old child and prevent David from spending another large portion of the winter in the hospital with pneumonia—as was the case last year. Amount needed, $90.

FAMILY Y presents an unusual type of problem—the problem of a family that appears, on the surface, to be in excellent shape, but actually needs assistance that can come in no other way than that offered by the Neediest Family Fund.

Mr. Y has a job that pays him $20 a week, regularly.

But before he got this regular work—and for several years previous to this winter—he suffered from a rare form of malarial infection. Because of this he has been forced to leave former jobs, but now doctors say that the disease is well on the way to permanent cure, that he will be able to work regularly from now on.

But, just as Mr. Y finds himself making real strides toward the status of self-support and self-respect that he and his wife and their six children hope to attain, he is told that a 10-year-old daughter and a 12-year-old son must have special medical attention and a particular diet in order that they may not fall prey to a type of tuberculosis common to undernourished adolescents.

The present dilemma of Mr. Y is this:

If the expenses of the special diet must come out of his small salary for the next four months, the end of the winter may find his other four children—at present scarcely better in physical shape than tubercular Sarah and James — undernourished, ill, threatened with the same malady.

All of the Y children are alert, active, intelligent—making real strides in their school, according to the report of the agency in charge of the case. The amount that will keep them so and materially assist in making them useful, self-supporting citizens is $100.

Parley Tonight On PanAmerica Trade of U. S.

U.S. Experts, Professors And Journalists to Take Part in G.W.U. Forums

The winter conference of the Inter-American Center of George Washington University will open tonight at the auditorium of the United States Chamber of Commerce, continuing tomorrow and Thursday evenings with speeches and panel discussions on the question, "Can the United States Retain Latin American Trade and Cultural Relations Against German, Italian and Japanese Competition"

Participating will be leaders in educational, governmental, and economic organizations active in the inter-American field, and journalists who specialize in international relations. More than 2,000 requests for cards of admission have been made.

George Howland Cox, director of the Inter-American Center, is general chairman. Students who are members of the International Students Society will act as ushers, under Prof. Alan T. Deibert.

Speakers are Listed

Speakers at tonight's session will be:

G. Grant Mason, jr., member of the Civil Aeronautics Authority; Max O'Rell Truitt, member of the Maritime Commission, and Senator Theodore Francis Green, of Rhode Island, a member of the Foreign Relations Committee.

Taking part in the panel discussion will be Albert W. Atwood, financial writer; James Christopher Corliss, associate professor of inter-American economics at the university; Roy T. Davis, president of National Park College and former Minister to Panama, and Frederic William Wile, journalist.

Dean Elmer Louis Kayser will preside as chairman.

Program Announced

The program tomorrow and Thursday follows:

Tomorrow—Speakers: William R. Castle, former Undersecretary of States; the Rev. Edmund A. Walsh, regent of the School of Foreign Service of Georgetown University, and Arthur Deerin Call, permanent executive secretary of the United States of America Group of the Interparliamentary Union. Panel: Harry Frantz, of the United Press; Franklyn Waltman, director of publicity of the Republican National Committee; Barnet Nover, of The Washington Post; Delbert Clark, of the New York Times. Dr. Morgan Urges Drastic Reorganization Of TVA With Control Centered in One Man

By Sidney Olson.

The deposed head of the Tennessee Valley Authority, Dr. A. E. Morgan, yesterday presented the Congressional investigating committee with his most detailed and complete attack yet on administration and objectives of the TVA Board as now constituted, and then proposed a far-reaching congressional reorganization of the entire authority.

Morgan, concluding a statement of more than 200 pages, said that the TVA "can and must be saved," but that the rescue "must be open and above board."

He asked that the TVA be reorganized under a single administrator, and that many of its functions be shifted to other agencies.

Concentrates on "Yardstick"

In scores of apparently damaging and heavily fact-buttressed charges against the TVA, the elderly engineer concentrated his barrage on the "yardstick" rates of the TVA and on what he called "irresponsible management."

In what was held in some quarters to be a move to meet the recent critical testimony of utility spokesmen and Dr. Morgan, the committee members announced that the next witnesses will include Senator George W. Norris (Independent), Nebraska, white-haired "Father of the TVA," and Representative John E. Rankin (Democrat), Mississippi, House fighter for public power ownership.

While Morgan's charges featured the forenoon testimony, a lengthy examination in the afternoon of Sherman M. Woodward, chief, TVA water control division, by Representative Wolverton (Republican), New Jersey, developed the fact that complete flood control for the Tennessee Valley area would cost about $100,000,000 more than has now been projected.

Wolverton Grows Impatient

Wolverton, examining Woodward closely, expressed impatience at Woodward's admissions that he could not furnish accurate figures of the past, present and future cost of flood control in the TVA area.

Woodward explained that TVA accountants could best furnish such data. Wolverton snapped:

"Throughout these hearings, it has always been remarked that some future witness would supply the figures. No one ever seems to know of his own knowledge. Surely you, as head of the water control division, must know or have some idea of how much is spent on flood control."

"Sorry," smiled Woodward, "but I have to answer I don't know."

Wolverton characterized the figures Woodward did submit as "nothing but pure guesses," and added:

"What disturbs me is that witnesses come before us and speak glibly but have no basic accurate information, of which there is an awful lack. You head flood control, and that and navigation have been cited throughout all legal proceedings involving the TVA as a justification of its constitutional basis, but when I ask you for concrete information you give me generalities."

He extracted from Woodward the admission that despite all TVA flood control measures thus far, only about 4,000 square miles of the Valley are insured against flood ravages, while the total area that should be protected is about 21,000 square miles in extent.

Dr. Morgan, in attacking the management of the TVA in his final appearance before the committee prepares its report for the coming Congress, estimated at one point that the TVA's annual loss would amount to $3,456,852 in power sales if present rates are continued, and would be more if rates declined "as they must decline."

He made this computation on the basis of full operation of all seven dams when completed, and said he had shaded his figures in every doubtful instance substantially in the favor of the agency.

In particularizing his attack as a case history, Dr. Morgan concentrated on the 11 Mississippi communities which have acted as yardstick towns for the TVA, and wherein, under cession by the Commonwealth & Southern Corporation, there has been no litigation or other outside costs beyond TVA control.

Had Loss, Not a Profit

Reporting the situation in each town in the completest detail, Dr. Morgan summed up his conclusion as: Instead of the profit of $300,000 reported on TVA operations in the 11 communities for the three-year period ending June 30 of this year, the townships suffered a $167,237 loss.

He hit at what he termed hidden subsidies by TVA to the towns, and insisted the yardstick rates did not accurately measure the true cost of power generation.

Under the TVA Act the agency was supposed to establish a yardstick with which the Government could measure the fairness or unfairness of private utilities' rates.

Repeatedly he returned to his long-standing charge that the prospective revenues to come from TVA had been "wholly misrepresented" to the public and to Congress, using quotations from testimony and speeches by TVA Director David E. Lilienthal as his basis, in comparison with his own computations.

Oversold on Appliances

He further charged that high-pressure salesmanship "beyond the bounds of propriety" in the TVA had oversold farmers in the area more appliances than they could afford; that special surcharges on power sales raised the actual rates to consumers considerably above published TVA rates; that instead of paying prevailing wages, TVA paid actual wages in some communities "which are the lowest in America in that field," and that "while claiming loss of large sums through litigation, the TVA actually showed a preference for disruption and conflict."

He closed with an outline of methods under which, he asserted, TVA did not charge to operating expense adequate amounts for administration, water control, contributions of other Federal agencies, or interest on working capital.

Club Here to Fete Famed Founder Of Boys Town

Father Flanagan, famous founder of the child reclamation project, Boys Town, Nebr., will come to Washington December 13 to be honor guest at a Calvert Club reception, James E. Colliflower, president, announced yesterday.

The reception will be preceded by a dinner limited to the 100 members of the club. The two-reel film, "City of Little Men," in which Father Flanagan portrays the role he plays in actual life as founder and head of the community of boys of all denominations and races, will be shown at the reception.

The Rev. Maurice S. Sheehy, professor at Catholic University and an old friend of Father Flanagan, assisted Colliflower in planning the reception.

Reich Seizes Control of All Jewish Wealth

Realty, Other Property Made Subject to Sale By Nazi Authorities

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, Dec. 5.—The Nazi regime took a strangle hold today on the remaining resources of German Jews in a sweeping decree issued by Economics Minister Walther Funk.

The decree contains "the legal basis for the full Aryanization of German economics, German real estate and other important parts of the national wealth," an official explanation said.

Proper authorities were empowered to carry out the Aryanization wherever, according to the explanation, it is necessary economically for the good of the nation.

Propaganda Drive Launched

How far and within what period of time this power will be used is left to discretion of the economics minister.

Announcement of the decree did not say when it becomes effective, a point that may not be clarified until it appears in the official gazette Monday.

The decree, which applies only to German Jews and stateless Jews, further affects them in that henceforth they must have governmental approval in liquidating their fortunes or properties or in using their capital. This means a Jew virtually must accept the government dictate on prices. Transactions are made subject to special government assessment.

Jewish-owned securities also must be deposited with banks where they will be under the government's thumb.

Coincidentally, the propaganda ministry embarked today upon a large-scale program of "enlightenment" on the Jewish issue by movie, radio and press.

Funk's decree:

Empowered the higher administrative officers to order Jews to sell or liquidate their businesses, real estate and other possessions. Trustees to be appointed by these officers may carry out the task in special cases where a Jew does not obey an order or is absent.

Forbade Jews hereafter to acquire real estate or title thereto.

Ordered Jews to deposit all securities, whether stocks or bonds or any other paper of value, in a bank within one week after the law becomes effective. The deposits are to be labeled Jewish property and may be removed only with approval of government authorities.

Forbade Jews to acquire, pawn or sell without permits objects made of gold, platinum or silver, precious stones and pearls. Any dealings in such objects are to be handled exclusively through special state sales offices, one of which already has been established in Berlin.

The same ruling applies to art objects valued at more than 1,000 marks ($400).

Affects Owners Abroad

The drastic decree, enabling the compulsory Aryanization of all Jewish business in addition to retail, was found necessary, it was stated, because, in many cases, an owner or one of the owners in cases of partnerships was abroad or unwilling to sell.

Aryanization of retail shops already had been provided by a law of November 25. That work must be accomplished by January 1.

Jailed by Nazis, U. S. Cellist, Home, Accuses Consul

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, Dec. 5.—Harry Dick, 40, cellist and naturalized American citizen, released two weeks ago from a prison in Hamburg, Germany, after serving more than five months on what he insisted was a trumped-up charge, returned today and announced he would seek State Department investigation of the United States consulate in Hamburg.

He charged that from his arrest May 17, on a charge of attempting to buy gold for export from Germany, to his release November 22, he was unable to see the American consul in Hamburg, Wainwright Abbott, and the vice consul, Sabin Jean Dalferes, paid slight attention to him.

Dick, complaining he was disabled now as a musician by rheumatism contracted in prison, said that as a member of the orchestra on the liner Washington of the United States Line he made a number of trips to Germany.

Belgian Cabinet In Crisis on Franco nation that this Nation shall retain its religious faith."

Calls Nazis Fanatical

Characterizing Nazi actions as "brutal" and "fanatical," he warned that "we must take this thing seriously." He said he was irritated by the complacency of the American people that assumes "it can't happen here."

"We are witnessing a universal distemper that knows no bounds," he declared. "The situation is such as to appall and astound every right-minded person."

Nazi persecutions, Dr. Walsh said, reveal rulers who have become "drunk with power."

The twin menace to religious freedom of fascism and communism, he said, makes it necessary for "those who value civil and religious liberty to light new beacons on the watch towers of their freedom and to sound the alarm."

"Tyranny," he declared, "is a creeping paralysis, and hence resistance to tyranny is not only obedience to God, but a dictate of self-preservation.

"Dictatorships cannot stop dictating any more than water can stop being wet."

Church Won't Compromise

The Nazi movement against religion, he said, furnishes an example of "the inevitable course any government embarks upon when it arrogates to Caesar the things that are God's.

"The Catholic Church will not compromise on the basic issue with either the Caesar of the Right of the Left. It must perish first—if that were possible."

The Rev. Anson Phelps Stokes spoke briefly on purposes of the committee. The Rev. Albert J. McCartney presided. Dr. Abram Simon delivered the invocation and Bishop Freeman the benediction.

The Rev. Robert T. Workman, chief of chaplains of the Navy, led a responsive reading and the Very Rev. Mgr. William R. Arnold, chief of Army chaplains a special litany. The Rev. J. S. L. Holloman gave a scriptural reading. The Army Band played.

Pirow Fears War by Spring If Europe's Drift Continues

though the two men have not met in the 24 hours since Pirow's return from the continent.

No comment was available in government quarters beyond the remark that Pirow, as minister of a self-governing dominion, was free to say what he liked.

The text of his statement follows:

"Europe is drifting into a war: a war which no nation wants but against which every government is preparing. Unless there is complete change of outlook within the next month or two, the international tension will reach a breaking point during the spring of next year.

"The tragedy of the situation is that since the settlement of the Czecho-Slovakian issue there is no principle at stake which would excuse a war, let alone make it inevitable. The drift to war is caused by purely psychological factors.

"Even the refugees question—I call it that because it is more than a Jewish problem—is capable of comparatively easy settlement. Two things are necessary for such a solution:

"First, money to take the place of the assets the refugees are not allowed to take with them.

"Secondly, land for settling those who have no money or who, in spite of their money, are debarred by immigration laws.

"An international loan for which the countries who wish to get rid of their refugees would be responsible, but which would be guaranteed by the other great powers, would solve the first question.

"As to land, there is more than enough unoccupied, and suitable land which could form an entity either as a state or as a mandate to settle twice the number of refugees likely to be available.

"What is absent, however, is a willingness both on the part of the countries who wish to shed their refugees and of those who profess to feel sorry for them, to make any real sacrifice. The former are merely prepared to give them one-way passports; the latter to accord them sympathy.

"The international attitude on the refugee question is not by itself a reason for war, but it is symptomatic of the state of mind which is not prepared to make a substantial sacrifice for peace. As long as that state of mind persists the drift to war—a drift with an increasing momentum—will continue."

Absence of any mention of the colonial problem in the statement puzzled members of the House of Commons who eagerly discussed Pirow's remarks in the parliamentary lobbies tonight.

Carol Moves To Halt Reprisal By Terrorists

Students Searched for Arms as Shot Wounds Official of Tribunal

By the United Press.

Bucharest, Dec. 5.—King Carol II moved rapidly tonight to thwart "vengeance" assassinations by the outlawed Fascist Iron Guard after two young terrorists shot and wounded the president of one of the King-dictator's military tribunals.

All high school students throughout Rumania were ordered searched for arms before entering school buildings. Bucharest's largest cafe, a center for the exchange of political information, was closed by authorities.

The shooting today of Col. Cristescu, head of the military tribunal at Cernauti where Iron Guard terrorism against Jews has occurred in recent days, was believed to be in reprisal for the slayings by police of the guardists' "Little Fuehrer," Corneliu Zelea Codreanu, and 16 of his followers.

Military Tribunals Active

Military tribunals, under Carol's orders, have dealt sternly with the wave of terrorism.

Authorities, including district governors, have received death threats from Iron Guard "Battalion of Death" and Carol himself has been warned publicly he has his "last chance to make peace with the Rumanian people."

Cristescu was leaving court when two youths fired four shots at him. Only one took effect, entering his chest. The wound was not serious. One of the assailants was captured and identified as a college student.

Battalion's Order Quoted

He told police he acted in conformity with an order received this morning from the "Battalion of Death" and revealed his accomplice was a 19-year-old boy who was dismissed from high school last year as a member of the Iron Guard.

Police discovered a secret Iron Guard printing plant near here and found on the premises quantities of illegal literature and a large store of arms.

Codreanu and 13 other imprisoned Iron Guardists were killed last week in what the government described as a break for freedom. Saturday three others, accused of the shooting of the rector of Cluj University, similarly were shot to death.

The government announced 318 Guardists imprisoned at Vaslui in Moldavia "spontaneously recanted" the movement on learning of Codreanu's death.

Chiang Forms Base Adjacent to Russia For Spring Drive

Shanghai (Tuesday), Dec. 6 (U.P.)—Chinese government spokesmen in Chungking said today Gen. Chiang's new northwest defense area, adjacent to Soviet Russia, is being fortified rapidly and he expects to open a counterdrive against the Japanese from this region next spring.

Dispatches from Tehchow, Shantung Province, reported Japanese soldiers entered the American Board Mission Hospital there Saturday and removed five wounded Chinese. The Chinese were taken despite the protests of American mission workers.

The hospital superintendent, A. S. Hausske, of Chicago, and his assistant, Helen Disney, a Washington nurse, were not able to prevent the seizures.

London, Dec. 5 (U.P.).—A new and deadly incendiary bomb, so light and small that one bombing plane can carry 2,000 of them, has been acquired by Great Britain, it was revealed tonight by Arthur Ralph Astbury, technical adviser of the air raids precautions department of the home office.

Astbury told British scientists at Burlington House that a fleet of bombers flying low in formation could lay down a veritable blanket of searing flame over a wide area.

Mrs. Woodward Clashes With Dies on Reds

Denies All Charges of Communism in Writing And Theater Projects

By the United Press.

Assistant Works Progress Administrator Ellen S. Woodward told the House Committee on un-American Activities yesterday that it had violated American tradition in its handling of charges that Communists have filtered into the Federal writers and theater projects.

Mrs. Woodward, head of the WPA writers and theater division, clashed heatedly with Chairman Dies (Democrat), of Texas, at a tumultuous hearing.

She denied accusations that the writing and theater projects are the scene of Communist activities and political discrimination, as charged by other witnesses.

Dies informed Mrs. Woodward that he had invited Mrs. Hallie Flanagan, national director of theater projects, and Henry G. Alsberg, director of the writers project, who had been named in previous testimony, to give their versions of the charges.

Her criticism of the committee's procedure came after members questioned her closely and refused her permission to read a statement which they contended was prepared by her subordinates and did not reflect her personal activities covered by the program.

At one point, Representative Mosier (Democrat), Ohio, moved that Mrs. Woodward be dismissed because she "is disqualified by her background" to act as a witness. The discussion became heated and the motion was lost.

Later Mrs. Woodward reminded the committee that Congress had enacted a law barring WPA from asking questions on the political background of prospective workers. She added, however, that she never had appointed any Communists to supervisory posts.

Adding to the general confusion of the hearing, Representative Starnes (Democrat), Alabama, criticized a chapter of a book, "American Stuff," to which WPA writers contribute in spare time. Citing a chapter titled "The Ethics of Living Jim Crow," Starnes asked:

"Do you see anything rehabilitating in that?"

"No, I do not," Mrs. Woodward said.

Italian Press Accuses France Of Provocation

Gayda Hints Rome Will Present Her Colonial Demands Formally

By the Associated Press.

Rome, Dec. 5.—Italian clamor over Tunisia was intensified today with the press accusing France of taking a "provocative attitude" in allowing yesterday's anti-Italian demonstrations in the French North African protectorate and Corsica.

Virginia Gayda, authoritative Fascist editor, at the same time indicated Italy would present her demands on France at some future date.

Writing in Il Giornale D'Italia, Gayda denied Fodreign Minister Count Galeazzo Ciano, in last week's talks with the British and French envoys to Rome, had been forced to back down. Gayda said:

"He posed a problem. He will follow it up at the proper time, with that energy which is his, along the lines Il Duce has traced."

The writer failed, however, to say exactly what demands would be raised or when they would be presented.

Gayda, who often represents Premier Mussolini's views, ridiculed French suggestions Germany withhold support from Italian demands because of the German-French peace declaration to be signed tomorrow in Paris.

"The French reactions are in vain," he said. "History is going forward toward its fatal epilogues. Italy and Germany, which have common problems and common destinies, are marching together . . . with resolute will as well as an enlightened spirit of responsibility."

Il Lavoro Fascista, stating "Italian claims in the Mediterranean" were based on the session of Nice to France in 1861, said one only could marvel "that the Italian demonstrations after three years of acute tension with France were so moderate, and limited themselves to the shouting of names which are graven in the hearts of all Italians and which no hard necessity of political equilibrium can force them to forget."

This paper also charged that French "agitation threatens to bring Franco-Italian relations to the extreme."

Without defining Franco-Italian problems, the Fascist press republished London reports that Italian aspirations included use of Mallorca as a naval base, a share in the control of the Suez Canal company, settlement of questions concerning Italians in Tunisia, a share in control of the Djibouti-Addis Ababa railroad, control of the port of Carthagenia, nroth of Tunis, and belligerent rights for Spanish insurgents.

5 Generals Shifted By British Army In 3d Shake-up

London, Dec. 5 (AP).—War Minister Leslie Hore-Belisha named new officers to five key military jobs today in the third big turnover since he took control of Britain's army 18 months ago.

Lieut. Gen. W. K. Venning was appointed quartermaster general to the forces, replacing Gen. Sir Reginald May.

Lieut. Gen. W. D. S. Brownrigg was named director general of the territorial army, succeeding Gen. Sir Walter Kirke.

Lieut. Gen. R. H. Haining, now general officer commanding British forces in Palestine, was named general officer commanding the western command at Chester, replacing Lieut. Gen. Sir Henry C. Jackson.

Maj. Gen. M. G. H. Barker was appointed to succeed Haining in Palestine.

Maj. Gen. G. J. Giffard was named military secretary to the war minister to succeed Lieut. Gen. Brownrigg.

Hearing of Kin's Death, 2 Refugees End Lives

New York, Dec. 5 (AP).—A German refugee, Mrs. Sonja Lewis, 25, and her husband, Hudson, 23, an English Jew, were found dead in their apartment today from illuminating gas poisoning, in what police described as a suicide pact.

Officers learned the couple had been depressed since receiving word Saturday of the sudden death of the woman's grandmother in a home for the aged in Berlin. It was said she died when Nazis began to demolish the institution.

Tong to Parade Here in Funeral Of Its President

Officials of the On Leong, Chinese merchant tong, yesterday obtained a parade permit from police for the funeral of Charlie Lee Soo, president of the local tong, who died Saturday.

Funeral services for Mr. Soo will be held at the Calvary Baptist Church, Eighth and H streets northwest, tomorrow at 2 p. m. Burial will be at Congressional Cemetery.

A typical Chinese funeral parade will be staged after church, On Leong members stated yesterday. Two American and two Chinese bands will be in the line of march, which will start from Chinatown, 600 block H street northwest.

Distinguished Chinese merchants from all over the country will attend the services for the 69-year-old importer. Among the visitors will be Goon Bun Main, national president of the On Leongs.

Mr. Soo is survived by his widow, four sons and a daughter.

Attorneys to Discuss Lima Conference Friday

A meeting in connection with the opening of the Pan American Conference at Lima will be held by the section of international and comparative law of the American Bar Association on Friday, December 9, at the Mayflower Hotel.

David E. Grant, of New York, will set forth the difficulties experienced by American business concerns in Latin American countries because of the technical restricted interpretation given to powers of attorney issued to their agents in Pan American countries.

Nazi Hand Seen As Lithuania Revises Cabinet

Ex-Chicago Editor, Once Minister Here, Made Deputy Premier

By the Associated Press.

Kaunas, Lithuania, Dec. 5.—German pressure was reported unofficially today to have caused last night's reshuffle of the Lithuanian cabinet.

The change put into office Bronius K. Balutis, former newspaper editor in Chicago and diplomat, as deputy premier, and Juozas Urbsys as foreign minister in place of Stasys Lozoraitis, who resigned.

Unofficial sources asserted Germans felt Lozoraitis was too pro-Polish.

Balutis, as deputy premier, was expected to direct Lithuania's foreign policy through the new foreign minister.

Before and during the World War Balutis edited a Lithuanian-American newspaper in Chicago. He became Lithuania's minister to Washington and later her Ambassador to London.

Both Balutis and his post are new to the Lithuanian cabinet.

Officially, the change was ascribed to demands of "the domestic situation."

Political observers pointed out, however, Germany and Lithuania long have had serious differences over the former German Baltic territory of Memel, given to Lithuania by the League of Nations after the World War.

French Navy Mans Liner Paris To Crush Maritime Strike

By the Associated Press.

Paris, Dec. 5.—The government of Edouard Daladier ignored labor overtures for peace tonight and ordered naval detachments to Le Havre to break the strike that has tied up the huge liner Normandie and other shipping.

Three destroyers arrived at Le Havre tonight with 259 sailors from Cherbourg to man the liner Paris, which operates between Le Havre and New York.

The sailors were assigned to man the bridge and engine rooms of the ship. Stewards were sent aboard during the night on a requisition order to perform their services.

French Line officials said the Paris would leave Le Havre tomorrow, a day ahead of schedule, and would proceed to Cherbourg to pick up her passengers Wednesday.

Three naval lieutenants and 126 sailors were en route from Lorient to Le Havre to take the place of other strikers. Other detachments were sent to Le Havre from naval bases.

The merchant marine ministry refused to receive a delegation of the strikers, who sought a compromise by dismissal of charges against four of their leaders and the rehiring of 60 of their number who took part in the general strike last Thursday.

Approximately 1,500 of the Normandie crew, 2,000 workers on the liners Paris and Ile de France and 1,500 dock workers and port handlers refused to work at Le Havre in sympathy with the 60 discharged employes.

Military requisitions threatening them with martial law for failure to obey work orders had failed to break their strike.

The marine ministry declared the Normandie, which missed her sailing Saturday as a result of the strike, would be returned to service on her next scheduled sailing date, December 17.

Elsewhere the antigovernment strike wave began to subside.

The national committee of the General Confederation of Labor began a series of conferences to seek an end to labor activities, the leaders fearing prolonged unrest would impair labor's strength.

France's labor czar, Leon Jouhaux, indicated, nevertheless, that his price for labor peace was a halt to discharges, arrests and requisitions which Daladier ordered to fight the strikes. He said:

"The government and employers are trying openly to decapitate the labor movement to overcome it more quickly and more completely.

"In the face of this situation there can be only one attitude: to form a front. The defense of labor interests and defense of liberty remain our objectives. The labor element must remain an element of resistance against all ideas of dictatorship."

Seal Deplores District's Lack Of Tax Rights

Luncheon Meeting Told Capital Needs Power To Make Own Levies

The District tax problem might not be so perplexing if Washington citizens had the right to levy their own taxes and spend their own money, Corporation Counsel Elwood Seal yesterday told the National Institute of Municipal Law Officers.

Addressing a special luncheon gathering at the Mayflower Hotel, where the institute is holding its annual meeting, Seal explained that members of Congress, in voting on taxes for the District, are guided by what their own constitutents dislike or prefer in the tax line.

"If the voters in an Illinois Congressional district are opposed to a sales tax, their Congressman will hardly vote for a sales tax," he said. "Likewise, if voters of a Virginia district don't like an income tax, their Congressman probably will not vote for an income tax for the District."

Attacks Intangible Property Tax

Seal attacked as "the most vicious form of taxation" the present tax on intangible property. It should be repealed, he declared.

"It is unscientific and is generally condemned," he added. "It has no relation to ability to pay."

Likewise, he said, the business privilege tax, hurriedly enacted by Congress, has been classed as vicious and as a burden to interstate commerce. Since it will expire on June 30, 1939, he pointed out, something must be enacted in its place.

"Represent Special Interests"

He said he did not know how the Citizens' Advisory Committee on Taxation, named by the District Commissioners to work out a tax program, would "make out" with its problem of devising substitutes.

The main problem encountered by the committee, he said, has been the fact that people coming before it "represent special interests."

One matter, however, he said, there is general assent—that is, that the Federal Government is not paying its proper share of the expense of maintaining the District.

Seal related how the Government's contribution had dropped from $9,000,000 to $5,000,000 in recent years. He added:

"I don't think we'll get any more than $5,000,000. In fact, we'll be lucky to get that."

Loses Source of Revenue

Nevertheless, he pointed out, the Government has $330,000,000 of real property here, besides an untold amount of wealth in personal property. It gets the protection accorded private property, he said. Every time a piece of private property is taken over by the Government, the District loses a revenue source, he explained.

Frederick V. P. Bryan, first assistant corporation counsel of New York, emphasized that municipal officials in the future would be called upon to set up machinery for strike prevention.

He related the experiences of the LaGuardia administration in New York in "applying the principle of crime prevention to strike prevention" by trying to remedy the conditions that cause strikes.

Barnet Hodes, president of the institute and corporation counsel of Chicago, declared the "ambulance chasing racket" had become a real menace. The amount of fraudulent claims, he said, totals approximately $150,000,000 annually in the Nation's larger industrial centers.

Associated Gas Asked for Details Of Its Financing

The Securities Commission yesterday ordered Associated Gas & Electric Co. to submit detailed information about its investments and those of its subsidiaries.

A commission order, calling for the information by December 17, said it was wanted to determine the "business and financial condition and practices" of the huge utility holding company system.

The order followed recent conclusion of a series of hearings in which the commission attempted to determine the relationship between Associated Gas & Electric and the Utilities Employes Securities Corporation.

Commission officials said the order was not designed to start an investigation of the Associated system but was intended only to obtain information needed in handling routine cases pending before the commission.

Vague But Reassuring

President Roosevelt's address at the University of North Carolina was his first public utterance of importance since the November elections and recent grave developments in international relations. For that reason it was awaited with a great deal of interest. But the President studiously avoided saying anything that was either startling, novel or definite as to policies to be followed in either domestic or foreign affairs.

In these days of widespread unrest and rapid change the President knows that his words will be carefully scanned in many countries. It is much to his credit that, while reiterating his faith in democracy, he also refrained from sounding any note that might be regarded as belligerent in other parts of the world. With democracy on trial, his chief interest lies in making the democratic process more effective rather than in any clash of ideologies in the international field.

There will be widespread agreement with the President's statement that what the United States does, or fails to do, in the next few years will have a vital bearing upon the future of the world. This country must not shrink from its international responsibilities. But it was also candid and realistic on the part of the President to point out that the greatest emphasis should be placed upon the maintenance of a successful democracy at home.

As to what should be done to make Government by and for the people work more effectively here, the President made no specific suggestions. He was content to reiterate his faith in "liberal progress." That objective will be almost universally praised. It is the means by which that progress is sought which give rise to controversy. The President cannot expect to silence present criticism of loose financial policies, careless administration in some instances and continued failure to cope with unemployment merely by waving the banner of liberalism.

To a few blind partisans it may be comforting to hear the President say that he is a devotee of the capitalistic system and that he eats scrambled eggs instead of "grilled millionaire" for breakfast. But the great majority of citizens would be more interested to learn that he intends to co-operate with the moderate majorities in Congress in unscrambling some of the economic dilemmas resulting from ill-considering legislation of the last few years.

Qualifying A Noun

What constitutes "sympathetic understanding" by the people of one nation of the institutions, habits, culture and activities of another nation?

Does it mean casting a mantle of charity over all that is unpleasant, so that events in that other land are always seen through rosy glasses? Or is there room in the definition for a portrait in which there are shadows as well as lights? In other words, is the accent on sympathy rather than on understanding, or on understanding even if it involves the exclusion of sympathy?

These questions are inspired by announcement from Columbia University of annual journalistic awards to be made under the new Godfrey Lowell Cabot endowment. They are to go to publishers, writers and editors in the Western Hemisphere "who, by their professional achievements, shall advance sympathetic understanding among the peoples of South, Central and North America."

The aim is both timely and constructive. If it serves the great purpose of making the peoples of this hemisphere better acquainted with one another the net result will be one of undiluted gain. But the accent must be on truth, without fear and without favor, and not on belief in the efficacy of purely emotional good-will, as that term is so often and so loosely employed at the present time.

In view of their intelligent auspices, the prizes should prove much more than an incentive to further outpouring of conventional flub-dub and superficial rhetoric. Yet there is danger that precisely this may be the result of an encouraging of "sympathetic understanding."

Certainly it would be difficult to avoid the suspicion of such dubious results if the awards were not concerned with inter-American journalism. There would be reasonable room for doubt if the objective were a more "sympathetic understanding" of forms of government definitely antagonistic to our own. The world needs understanding, and sympathy, too, but no good end is served if one is allowed to becloud the other.

A Franco-German Pact

Joachim von Ribbentrop, the German Foreign Minister, arrives in Paris this morning for the purpose of signing, later this week, a far-reaching pact of non-aggression between France and the Third Reich. This agreement is the anticipated counterpart of the declaration of goodwill already made by Great Britain and Germany. It is a definite and important part of the "policy of appeasement" agreed upon at Munich. As such the pact has been foreshadowed for several weeks.

The terms of the pending accord have not yet been made public. But it is reliably reported to contain three major provisions. There is said to be a joint declaration of friendly relations between the two countries; a mutual recognition of the permanency of the Franco-German frontier as established in 1919; and an agreement for consultation on any development threatening difficulties between Paris and Berlin. The governments of Poland and Russia, with which France already has treaties of alliance, are understood to have been apprised in advance of the character of the forthcoming Franco-German pact.

There are obviously two ways of looking at this attempt to bring a measure of stability into the now chaotic picture of European international relations. Precisely because Germany is a party to the agreement there will be some who will immediately characterize it as of no value. And there is a seeming justification for this viewpoint in the fact that, in spite of the policy of appeasement, both Great Britain and France are increasing their military preparations and endeavoring to co-ordinate them in a joint defensive policy.

The other, and more thoughtful, attitude will be that French unwillingness to rely on this new accord is no indication that it will prove valueless in restoring stability in western Europe. It is inevitable that any understanding with Germany would be suspect after the total collapse of the Treaty of Versailles which was implicit in the Munich accord. The issue is not whether the German word can be relied upon, but whether or not new agreements are imperative in spite of Hitler's treaty-breaking record.

To ask that question is to answer it. For better or worse the Treaty of Versailles is dead and gone. Refusal to put any new juridical structure in its place means acceptance of a condition of complete and lasting international anarchy. It means a situation in which Italy can lay claim to Corsica, to cite a single illustration, merely because there no longer seems to be stability for any existing territorial settlement.

In that chaotic situation the essential need is to build a new juridical base, on which a new stability can eventually crystallize.

Since such a base can be established only with German co-operation it is begging the question to say that the German word cannot be trusted. What that assertion implies is willingness to perpetuate a state of disorder from which only the aggressor states can profit. Certainly France has nothing to gain from refusal of a German offer to guarantee continuation of French sovereignty over Alsace-Lorraine. To refuse the offer would actually imply a non-existent French desire to invade Germany from the west.

Since peace and reconstruction are the major objectives of the Daladier government, it naturally welcomes Hitler's overtures for a post-Munich treaty which clearly aims to consolidate peace along the Rhine. Obviously this in no way impedes any German projects for further eastward expansion. Should the Reich have designs against Poland or Russia it might even make French assistance to those countries more difficult. But, since Munich, it is in any case unrealistic to talk in terms of the old "ring of steel" around Germany.

What must be reconstituted is a juridical base which will place something more dependable than the self-restraint of a single fanatic behind the structure of peace in eastern Europe. Perhaps that will not be done. But it cannot be done in eastern Europe unless it is first accomplished in western Europe. And it is as an initial step, which may or may not be followed by further gains, that the pending Franco-German agreement is important.

It is important, also, because it gives Premier Daladier a much-needed breathing spell to tackle the really dangerous domestic problems of France. It is the steady accumulation of these unsolved problems which accounts for the diplomatic weakness of Paris at the present time. Their solution is an essential preliminary to re-establishment of French influence. The pending Franco-German pact at least relieves the Quai d'Orsay of any fear of immediate German pressure to the west. And during the breathing spell Premier Daladier, given the co-operation of all patriotic elements, may be expected to concentrate constructively on domestic rehabilitation.

There are optimists who feel that the new agreement will be very reassuring. They will see in its signing, coincident with the current anti-French campaign in Italy, indications that the Berlin-Rome axis is not working smoothly. That interpretation seems extreme, just as attacks on the Berlin-Paris accord as a "sell-out" to Germany would be extreme in the opposite direction. For in seeking to establish good relations with France the German Foreign Office is not weakening its alliance with Italy.

The current Italian campaign against France, however, would not have taken place except for the demonstration of French weakness involved in last week's general strike and subsequent disorders. Italian prattle about territorial readjustments at French expense will evaporate as France regains her strength. The pending accord with Germany is clearly of value to France in this respect. The extent to which it contributes to general stabilization will depend primarily on whether or not Hitler wants that stabilization.

Convincing evidence to that end will still unfortunately be lacking when the new Franco-German understanding is signed.

Jimmy's New Job

The engaging James Roosevelt, son of and erstwhile secretary to the President, has been named as vice president of a moving-picture firm at what is reported to be a very handsome salary.

Young Mr. Roosevelt's talents have hitherto found an outlet in fields far removed from Hollywood. The presumption must be, therefore, that he was hired by Mr. Goldwyn for other reasons than experience. He takes to his new job a pleasing personality, a wide acquaintanceship particularly in the political sphere, a successful background as insurance salesman and Presidential secretary and, not least, a great name.

These are undoubted assets and it would be difficult for young Mr. Roosevelt to refrain from capitalizing them no matter to what sphere of action he might devote his energies. So it would be unfair to begrudge "Jimmy" his new connection and the perquisites that are rumored to go with it. But at this particular time there is a grave danger that his move—and the film industry's—will be misinterpreted.

The film industry is at present under indictment for practices alleged to be in violation of the Sherman anti-trust law. This indictment may or may not be sustained. According to the very sound American principle a man or a corporation is innocent until proved guilty. And there is no warrant for believing that the appointment of James Roosevelt as vice president of a moving-picture firm is in any way intended to put pressure on the Government for a favorable settlement of the suit against the industry in general.

It may, in fact, operate precisely the other way. Anti-trust suits are frequently settled by out-of-court procedure. That was the case with the suit against the automobile finance companies. The same procedure may be followed in the case of the Government against the movie industry. But such a solution, though it may be wholly in the public interest, would now be subject to the interpretation, perhaps baseless, that it was in some way or other influenced by young Mr. Roosevelt's newly established connection with that industry.

It would be a pity if, in annexing "Jimmy" Roosevelt to their circle, of high-powered and high-salaried executives, the movie makers of Hollywood should inhibit a reasonable settlement of the anti-trust suit and force litigation which neither they nor the Government seems to desire.

Hoops, My Dear!

From the Christian Science Monitor.

It appears that English women are going back to the crinoline. One wonders if this be a result again of that Parisian influence upon other nations in the matter of feminine dress; for, if so, it is amusing to reflect that once it was hoped in Paris that the influence of foreigners would abolish the crinoline.

Saint-Simon relates in his memoirs how the example of the Duchess of Shewsbury led to the ladies at the court of Louis XIV abandoning their great headdresses, and he adds: "Sensible people await with impatience the advent of another . . . foreigner to disencumber our ladies of the enormous hoops which are as intolerable to themselves as they are to everybody else."

The modern crinoline is not such a full-rigged affair as its predecessors of the eighteenth century, and of the Victorian era; moreover, fashions are more transient than they used to be; so that, although the times are scarcely spacious enough for the mode, it is not likely that the No-Crinoline League of the nineties will be revived to oppose this new attempt to put ladies through the hoop.

Cancer And Diet

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The United Press dispatch from Washington to the effect that cancer is now "taking its toll in the Philippines as it is elsewhere in the world," is not surprising, since where the white man goes he takes his diseases with him.

One of the most conspicuous sights in Manila during the early days of the American occupation was the cold storage plant, the entrepot of the white man's diet. The white man likes to believe he is immune to climatic conditions, also that anything pertaining to diet is a "fad." So in tropical Manila he tried to show the natives how they live back home. And now, according to Dr. Gonzales, "it is generally agreed today that the prevalence of cancer in the Philippines is approximately the same as anywhere else in the world."

"Authorities" on cancer profess not to know what causes it, or how to cure advanced cases. This does not necessarily exclude them from the ranks of those who are "authorities" on cancer. If someone came along who was not an "authority" on cancer and suggested that cancer is a diet disease, he would doubtless be greeted by the reply: "But you are not an authority on cancer!" To so obvious a statement, the reply would naturally be: "Quite true! But nobody seems to be an 'authority' on cancer."

There is evidently a vast field for exploration in the realm of cancer that is waiting for prospectors. If the natives who do not share the white man's diet do not have cancer, which has often been remarked upon, while those who adopt the white man's diet do not have cancer, it ought to be a sensible thing to deduce that the white man is wrong. If he is wrong, those who have cancer and those who are likely to have cancer should know about it.

But merely to search for a "medicine" that will counteract the ravages of an illness whose symptoms are called cancer seems a selfish approach to the problem. Nature must count for something. If it is profitable to find a way of curing cancer and unprofitable to find a way of preventing it, it may be good for the business end of the matter, but not for the cancer sufferers.

The search for health interests every man, woman and child in the country. The search for a "cure" interests those who are afflicted. If proper diet prevents cancer, then a lot of noise should be made about diet and less about the "authorities" who admit they cannot "cure" it.

No Slight Intended

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: What did our little village ever do to you, that you cannot even give us credit where credit is due?

The Post of Monday, November 28, states that Miss Jean Tenney, of Silver Spring, Md., National Women's Archery champion, will give a demonstration of archery. I am sure if there had been a murder in our small town the name of Clear Spring would flow forward in large print. Miss Jean Tenney lives at the very edge of Clear Spring and I, along with other faithful Post readers, think that you have done us an injustice. I am sorry we do not have a Chamber of Commerce to take this up with you.

Lame Duck Committeemen

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: We read of the monopoly committee starting hearings. When the Constitution was amended to eliminate the lame duck session in theory its intent was to eliminate activity of men no longer representative of their electorate.

As a matter of public policy it would seem to me that the intent of the people is being violated when repudiated members of Congress continue activity in interim special committee assignments.

Is there no way to have truly representative men in these committees instead of lame ducks?

Minimum Wages And Domestic Service

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: You have another letter in your paper of November 30 about wages for domestic servants. I have seen others in your same column. They all want something done for domestics. More wages, shorter hours, and so forth.

Well, if the Government does pass a minimum wage law for us there will be thousands of us out of jobs if they make the minimum wage $10 a week, as I hear they want to make it. Thousands of people have maids now who could not or would not pay $10 a week. They would let their maids go and do their own work. I would rather have a job with board and room at $6 a week than no job and no board and room at $10 a week.

I have worked in the same place for three years. They are nice people, four in the family. They haven't enough money to pay me more, but I have Thursday and Sunday afternoons off every week and all my evenings if I want to go out. I have a good, warm room and a bathroom, I get three good meals a day, all my uniforms, carfare the days I go off and $6 a week.

My $6 is all clear. I don't have to spend any money for anything except my best clothes and movies and to have my hair done every two weeks. I am better off than if I got $10, or even $15, and lived in a rented room and had to pay carfare and food and clothes for seven days a week. Trouble is too many girls are looking for soft jobs and they'll keep on talking about higher wages and shorter hours until they get the Government to pass a law and then two-thirds of us will be out of jobs. Count your uniform and feed and room as wages, and you will see we aren't so ill-paid.

MILDRED JONES.
Chevy Chase, Md., Nov. 30.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In regard to domestic wages, I would like to voice the opinion of the housewife. The servant is paid $5, $10 or more a week. They have three meals a day, their room, which few of them want now, a day or maybe two days off a week and much given them in the way of clothes. Many do not do their work satisfactorily and if they go home nights one often feeds a family there.

Some of them come too late to get breakfast for those who must get to office early. Many come to work in silk stockings, or high heeled shoes and other things which a maid should not wear.

Few housewives have $25 or $40 a month to spend as they please, and many men who get not more than $75 or $100 a month must pay for room and board, laundry, etc. Most maids, if they desire, can get these free. Few of them are willing to live in the suburbs because it means that they can't go out every night. When they do go out each night, there is little work accomplished next day.

I grant you there are unreasonable housewives, but in what walk of life do you not find unreasonable people. These, however, are the exceptions. A HOUSEWIFE.

"It's A Madness"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Whither we are drifting remains to be seen by those who may remain to see! Who can put his finger on a single European nation from England on down that is not poisoned by the dictator virus?

Not all of it is chargeable to Hitler and Mussolini. They merely started it. It's a madness that has spread like the ancient plagues. Thank heaven for the Atlantic Ocean. It seems that if this world gets by, it will be by the grace of God and the Western Hemisphere! Let's keep up every panel of that fence, Mr. President, till the storm blows itself out.

What a spectacle when Deladier lays 100,000 good French citizens across his lap and paddles them like bad boys! What becomes of the man-principle? They've no say so, no come back. Their term of slavery has just begun; to grow baser with the years. GEORGE E. GARY.

Mornbasa And Nairobi

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In The Post of November 23, on page 12, you publish photographs of Mornbasa and Nairobi and state they are in Tanganyika. These towns are in Kenya Colony, formerly known as British East Africa, and they have never been in German territory.

Tanganyika, former German East Africa, is south of Kenya Colony and the chief town is Dar Es Salaam.

Lottery For The D. C.?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The very able article in your issue of December 3 by your tax expert, Mr. James D. Secrest, tends to confirm what I told the District of Columbia Tax Advisory Committee at its hearing on November 29 that the concessions involved in its non-wage, non-salary income-retail sales tax plan would leave the residuary revenue disappointing.

I had the pleasure of speaking last night before the Chillum Heights Citizens Association on the proceedings at the committee's hearings, and with particular reference to my suggestion for an official District lottery specifically for relief and public welfare purposes. This proposal is not designed to do away with the Community Chest, but to supplement it. I may add that no reasonable and proper efforts will be spared, so far as I am concerned at least, to acquaint all the people in the District with the benefits of such a lottery.

A desire for gaming seems to be inborn, a sort of instinct, in mankind. A recent Gallup poll showed that 53 per cent of all the people in the United States had at some time during the year indulged in some game of chance. Why not turn this instinct into benevolent channels? Evidently this is done in many places, for the same poll indicated the large number and popularity of church lotteries and church raffles throughout the country.

Many thousands of dollars go out of this District each year for Irish Sweepstakes lottery tickets. Why not divert this money and the money spent for the numbers games and other gambling rackets into local benevolent channels? Many a buyer of a Sweepstakes ticket has justified its purchase by saying to himself, "Well, I probably will not win anything, but, anyway, it will do the poor people in Ireland some good," as, indeed, it has. However, when buying a lottery ticket one would feel much better if he knew its local benefits and that he was not violating any law in its purchase.

When the benefits and blessings, especially to the poor, that would flow from such a lottery come to be realized, a wave of enthusiasm for it will sweep through the District that will impress even Congress.

"Sister Act"

LIKE SHIPS and States, cities seem to be of the feminine gender. They are referred to as "she" and whenever they are symbolized they are shown with flowing robes and Miss Liberty hats that might have seemed silly last year, but, heaven help us, not now. Perhaps it is because of a certain fickleness that this is so, but I prefer to think that it is because of their "infinite variety."

Take a few of the Southern colonial sisters of the Coastal family. They are near enough the same age and taste to risk comparison, and they all bear a certain resemblance to one another. But how they differ!

There is Miss Alexandria, for example, who is as carefully reared and as aristocratic as any of them. But she has lived in too close proximity to the North not to have imbibed some idea of enterprise. And so, with no loss of dignity whatever, she is making the most of her charm, and doing quite well. She has taken stock of herself and found some charming shabby streets, lovely old homes that were about to crumble away, priceless heirlooms and historical relics; and with real common sense and business acumen, she has made them pay. Some of her sisters, like Miss Charleston, feel very badly about it, but after all a woman, even a lady, must live, and there is no disgrace about going into trade.

All of the sisters are somewhat dismayed, and perhaps a little envious, at what has happened to Miss Williamsburg. Only a few years ago she was the shabbiest of them all, a sort of Cinderella who sat in the seclusion of her Tidewater retreat and educated the young. And then her Prince came along, fell madly in love with her for her True Worth, and financed a complete face-lifting and beauty treatment. Her houses, her gardens, her public buildings and even her shops are like pop-up pages from a history book, exquisite in their detail. Now many people who were hardly aware of her existence think that she is the most fascinating of them all.

Miss Charleston, however, has many faithful admirers. She admits that she is set in her ways, but infers that they are very good ways, and some of us are half inclined to agree with her. People meeting her for the first time usually remark in a kindly tone that she certainly shows her age, but that is not true. She was born with an adult sense of dignity, and even in her early youth cared not a jot for style.

Those who do not like her say that she is just plain dowdy, but others declare that she merely has a superb disregard for fashion. And it is true that her apparel suits her. She is one of those people to whom a trip to the beauty shop would not only be a waste of money, but a real disaster. I cannot picture Miss Charleston as anything but what she is. War, plague, earthquake, hurricane leave her tranquil, and a little more austere than when they found her.

There is no denying that she has a way with flowers. She has all the fragrant little blossoms and vines that belong in an old-fashioned flower bed, and takes great pride in the lush and riotous mixture of color that overflows in her great gardens. For that reason I suspect her of a depth of feeling not entirely in keeping with her prim behavior. But on Sundays, with her prayer-book in hand, she goes to St. Philip's or St. Michael's, and stepping proudly between the gray slabs with gruesome little Angels of Death glaring over the names of the departed, she is every inch the lady of quality.

Of all the sisters, Miss Charleston is my favorite. I was born in her State and my father was educated in her Citadel. I have lived with her for months on end, but she still regards me as a paying guest, which does not alter my affection in the least. If she made friends easily, if she allowed me to enter the bosom of her family, she would no longer be Miss Charleston.

But Miss (or shall I say Madame?) New Orleans is different. Of course she is really only a half-sister, and the others make allowances for her Latin blood, looking upon her with admiring disapproval. She is old enough, they say, and should be discreet enough to act her age, but did you ever see the like?

Madame New Orleans knows what the rest of the family thinks of her but does she care? She does not! One may be an aristocrat and still be gay. And as for her advancing years, pouff! Dancing limbers the joints. Now if Sister Charleston would unbend a little——

And so she goes her warm-hearted, joyous way. She has sinned in her past—and who hasn't?—but there is peace and repentance in the dim arches of St. Louis Cathedral, there is green tranquillity along the paths of Audubon Park, and power and depth in the river as it flows between the levees. And there is also a good horse to put one's money on, and a chance to win at the gaming tables.

Of the four sisters, I should say that little Miss Alexandria is the most up-and-coming, that Miss Williamsburg is the most bewildered, that Miss Charleston is the most imperishable. But Madame New Orleans has the most fun.

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler

Double Standard

JIMMY ROOSEVELT is reported to be much improved in health, which will be good news to all friends and nonhating critics of the President and the Administration. His illness is said to have been aggravated by discussion of his income and his income tax returns, and this can be readily believed, because these are very private matters between the individual and the Internal Revenue, not to be revealed except in case of apparent fraud. In Jimmy's case many persons hostile to the President were quick to point out that the contributions to charity which he listed were microscopic by comparison with his income, forgetting, or perhaps not knowing, that many contributions chargeable to charity or personal generosity are not deductible, and that Jimmy's listed gifts did not necessarily do him justice. This, entirely aside from the important fact that a man has a legal right to give as much or as little as he likes, or nothing at all, to charity if that is his feeling, without being called to public account and held up to scorn.

PEGLER

The whole experience doubtless was very trying to Jimmy Roosevelt and the President, and it is suggested that other individuals no more guilty than James of evasion, avoidance or other wrong in reporting or acquiring income probably were just as much upset by the Administration's practice of publicizing the details of selected individual returns. This was done in a mood of hostility and accusation in connection with a campaign to fashion legal plugs for certain gaps in the law. Men who had complied no less fully than Jimmy were tarred with the words "unethical" and "immoral," and it is possible that some among them also suffered from gastric troubles, as he did, or other ills which might have been aggravated by the resultant nervousness and sense of injustice.

EVEN AFTER THAT the lobby committee of the Senate continued this method of harassment under a writ from the President permitting the disclosure of the return of any witness called before that body. There was no stipulation that there should be some evidence of evasion or other fraud in such returns, and the intent plainly was to threaten individuals with public embarrassment of a kind which, in Jimmy's own case, adversely affected his physical condition and may have necessitated or hastened a dangerous operation. This threat was aimed only at persons who lobbied against a cherished measure of the Administration, and although Jimmy himself was one of those who lobbied for it, neither he nor his tax return was called up. In fact, no official body ever did ask for Jimmy's returns. He felt called upon to reveal them himself, and the interpretation of his returns and of his story was defensive and sympathetic by contrast with the hostile treatment experienced by others. Out of consideration for his condition, the subject was then dropped without critical inspection of his case.

THE WHOLE AFFAIR has been denounced by the Administration propaganda as an attempt to smear the President through an attack on his son, but this forgets that every law-abiding individual in the country should be immune to attacks by the President with the same weapon, and that individuals were so attacked. It was intended only to show exactly what Jimmy finally admitted and to prove that a double standard has been set up, one for opponents of the Administration and another for its intimate friends. And certainly if it is true that Jimmy's health suffered to the extent claimed, then it must be equally unjust to smear others in circumstances which strongly indicated that the smearing was a reprisal for political opposition. Victims of the Administration's own smears have not been given a chance to stand medical inspection first, nor, in truth, should the physical condition of the subject or victim be considered at all if there is good reason to suspect fraud. But in the absence of evidence of fraud, the income tax returns—Jimmy's and every other man's—should be kept secret.

But, although it is claimed that Jimmy was fouled, there has been no announcement of any intention to desist from similar treatment of others under the authority of the Government to which every citizen should be able to look with confidence for fair treatment.

Off the Record

By Ed Reed

"I flunked everything but gym, Pa—wanna make something out of it?"

Text of Roosevelt Address

Chapel Hill, N. C., Dec. 5.—Following is the text of President Roosevelt's address at the University of North Carolina here today:

The late Justice Cardozo of the Supreme Court wrote a few years ago:

"We live in a world of exchange. If a body of law were in existence adequate for the civilization of today, it could not meet the demands of tomorrow. Society is inconstant. So long as it is inconstant . . . there can be no constancy in law . . . law defines a relation not always between fixed points, but often between points of varying position . . . There is change whether we will it or not."

It is recognition of this philosophy that has made the University of North Carolina representative of liberal teaching. And it is my recognition of that philosophy that brings me so willingly to Chapel Hill today.

It is a far cry from the days of my first visit to the university, nearly a quarter of a century ago. I came then because my old chief—that great North Carolina liberal, Josephus Daniels—told me I should see for myself a great institution of learning which was thinking and acting in terms of today and tomorrow and not in the tradition of yesterday.

Refers to Wilson

In those days the leadership of the Nation was in the hands of a great President who was seeking to recover for our social system ground which had been lost under his conservative predecessor, and to restore something of the fighting liberal spirit which the Nation had gained under Theodore Roosevelt. It seemed one of our national tragedies that just when Woodrow Wilson was beginning to accomplish definite improvements in the living standards of America, the World War not only interrupted his course, but laid the foundation for 12 years of retrogression. I say this advisedly because it is not progress, but the reverse, when a nation goes through the madness of the twenties, piling up paper profits, hatching all manner of speculations and coming inevitably to the day when the bubble bursts.

It is only the unthinking liberals in this world who see nothing but tragedy in the slowing up or temporary stopping of liberal progress.

It is only the unthinking conservatives who rejoice when a social or economic reform fails to be 100 per cent successful.

It is only the "headline" mentality that exaggerates or distorts the true objectives of those in this Nation whether they be the president of the University of North Carolina or the President of the United States, who, with Mr. Justice Cardozo, admit the fact of change and seek to guide change into the right channels to the greater glory of God and the greater good of mankind.

Practitioner of Peace

You undergraduates who see me for the first time have read your newspapers and heard on the air that I am, at the very least, an ogre—a consorter with Communists, a destroyer of the rich, a breaker of our ancient traditions. You think of me perhaps as the inventor of the economic royalist, of the wicked utilities, of the money changers of the temple. You have heard for six years that I was about to plunge the Nation into war; that you and your little brothers would be sent to the bloody fields of battle in Europe; that I was driving the Nation into bankruptcy, and that I breakfasted every morning on a dish of "grilled millionaire."

Actually I am an exceedingly mild mannered person—a practitioner of peace, both domestic and foreign, a believer in the capitalistic system, and for my breakfast a devotee of scrambled eggs.

You have read that as a result of balloting last November, the liberal forces in the United States are on their way to the cemetery—yet I ask you to remember that liberal forces in the United States have often been killed and buried—with the inevitable result that in short order they have come to life again with more strength than they had before.

It is also true that other men in public life have protested against certain forms of economic control and that epithets far stronger than I have used have been employed even by Presidents of the United States. Those of us who knew Woodrow Wilson and Theodore Roosevelt and Grover Cleveland could hardly call them mollycoddles.

Quotes From Letter

I was reading a letter of Theodore Roosevelt the other day, written to a friend in the spring of 1908, and it will, I think, interest and amuse you if I quote from it. He was writing to a man who was fighting for social and political decency on the Pacific Coast. He said:

"Now and then you must feel down-hearted when you see men guilty of the most atrocious crimes who, from some cause or other, succeed in escaping punishment, and especially when you see . . . men of wealth, of high business, and, in a sense, of high social standing, banded together against you. My dear sir, I want you to feel that your experience is simply the experience of all of us who are engaged in this fight. There is no form of slander and wicked falsehood in which the New York papers, not only those representing the lowest type of demagogy, but those representing the interests that call themselves pre-eminently conservative, pre-eminently cultured, have not indulged in as regards myself . . . As a matter of fact, I do not care a snap of my fingers about it . . . But I do care a very great deal to do this work without flinching, on the one hand, and on the other hand without becoming angered and irritated to a degree that will in any way cause me to lose my head.

Do Not Lose Heart

"Now, so it is with you and your associates. You must keep reasonably good natured; but above all things you must not lose heart; and you must battle on valiantly . . . You are in a fight for plain decency, for the plain democracy of the plain people who believe in honesty and in fair dealing between man and man. Do not get disheartened, and keep up the fight."

Theodore Roosevelt, born of an old New York family, Southern on his mother's side, trained as a young man on our Western frontiers, was perhaps the first American President in modern times who knew the whole Nation. In the letter which I have read, and with this national background, it seems to me what he said in effect was, first, that the American people have, and must have, a definite objective for the improvement of government, for the improvement of social and economic conditions; second, that these objectives must be carried out by definite action, and, third, that in the attaining of them, the President and the Government and the people as a whole must have two essential qualities—first, a sense of proportion and perspective, and, second, good-will and a sense of humor.

Intolerance Caused Wars

Almost every crisis of our history since 1789 has become a crisis because of a lack on the part of leaders or on the part of the people themselves, or both, of some of these essentials.

The very birth of the Democratic Party, at a time when President Washington publicly expressed the hope that the Nation could be run without parties, was due to the simple fact that the Government itself was dominated by the great commercial and shipping interests of the seaboard, and failed to give recognition to the needs and the desires of the masses of the inhabitants of the original 13 States who did not subscribe to the theory that big wealth or political position could give to the possessors of these qualifications the sole right to govern. Hence the Democratic Party.

A generation later a Government dominated by the other extreme—the plainer people from the back country, from the Piedmont and the slopes of the Alleghanies, paying scant attention to the ship owners of the seaboard, drove our Nation into the second war against Great Britain . . .

In both cases tolerance and the national point of view were absent. Another generation went by and it was the same lack of tolerance, the same lack of a national point of view which brought about a war which was not inevitable—the War Between the States.

Rich Owned Government

The scene changed and the Nation was confronted, not by a sectional difference, but by a struggle for economic and social control—a period which saw the control of our National Government by groups of individuals, who, owning their Government, through owning vast financial power, used the plea of development of our national resources that they might feather their own nests.

In the lifetime of people who are still with us, there were men whom we must admit had courage and vision, who pushed railroads across the plains, opened mines, dammed rivers, created vast aggregations of capital, and left in their wake vast aggregation of national and State and local political power.

In a sense those were glorious days because the wide-open spaces were open to those native Americans and those who were flocking hither from the centers of Europe to find work in new fields . . .

A few days ago in Georgia I talked with an old friend whom I have known for ten years. He was what might be called an old-fashioned Southern conservative. We got to "reminiscing" about the old days when I first lived in Georgia. He reminded me of the days when cotton was selling at 5 cents a pound, and, while he admitted that the ramifications of our Federal legislation, and especially of court decisions during the past six years were somewhat beyond him, he allowed that some principle or crop control—cotton and tobacco—decided on by a majority of the farmers themselves, was the most democratic way to prevent the return of 5-cent cotton.

We Are "Going Places"

He reminded me of two little banks in Warm Springs, Ga.—banks in which many thousands of dollars of local savings had been deposited—of the failure of both of these banks and the loss of the savings—and of the fact today that deposits in the banks of the United States are safe, and, he remarked, "I hope that that type of liberal legislation will not be repealed."

He reminded me of the white men and Negroes who never saw, as the heads of families, $100 in cash the whole year round. He reminded me of the days in 1932 when the States of the Union were going broke and losing their credit because the whole burden of the relief of the starving was placed on their shoulders without the contribution of one dollar from the Federal Government. He reminded me of the complete lack of any social security program—of the days when a home-builder was charged 15 and 20 per cent to borrow the money to build his house—of the days when slum clearance was a beautiful ideal on paper and nowhere else.

And when he left he said: "Young man, I don't know the United States the way you do, but I know this section of the Nation pretty well. I don't understand the actual working out of all these new-fangled things that the Government has been starting in these past six years. But I know this section of the country and I want to tell you that there is a new spirit abroad in the land. I am not talking just about the fact that there is more buying power, that houses are painted that were never painted before, that our banks are safe, that our roads and schools are better. What I am talking about is that all of our the country think that we are "'going places.'"

U. S. Leads Democracies

Those two words "going places" seem to be an essential in modern civilization.

They represent the conviction on the part of the young people of America that life never remains static; that there are better days ahead than ever before; that an opportunity to find a way of life, to earn a living, to raise a family in comfort and security are better today and will be better tomorrow. There may be those in the world who believe that a regimented people, whose every thought and action is directed by one man, may give some people a type of security which is pleasing to them. But whatever convictions I have, none is stronger than my abiding belief that the security and well-being of the American people can best be served by the democratic processes which have made this country strong and great.

The future, however, rests not on chance alone, not on mere conservatism, mere smugness, mere fatalism, but on the affirmative action which we take in America. What America does or fails to do in the next few years has a far greater bearing and influence on the history of the human race for centuries to come than most of us who are here today can ever conceive.

We are not only the largest and most powerful democracy in the whole world, but many other democracies look to us for leadership that world democracy may survive.

Democracy Entails Change

I am speaking not of the external policies of the United States. They are exerted on the side of peace and they are exerted more strongly than ever before toward the self-preservation of democracies through the assurance of peace.

What I would emphasize is the maintenance of successful democracy at home. Necessarily democratic methods within a nation's life entail change—the kind of change through local processes described by Mr. Justice Cardozo—the kind of change to meet new social and economic needs through recognized processes of government.

Because we live in an era of acceleration, we can no longer trust to the evolution of future decades to meet these new problems. They rise before us today and they must be met today.

That is why the younger generation means so much in our current affairs. They are part of the picture in their twenties without having to wait until they have passed middle age.

That is why I myself associate myself so greatly with the younger generation.

That is why I am happy and proud to become an alumnus of the University of North Carolina, typifying as it does American liberal thought through American action.

The Inquiry Into Monopoly

THE INTRODUCTORY hearings before Senator O'Mahoney's committee on the so-called monopoly problem were at once reassuring and bewildering. Thus it was made clear that the committee has a judicial temper and that the expert witnesses have scientific integrity, that this is an inquiry and not a prosecution, that the members are examining policies and not persons, that they are looking for truth and not for victims, that they would like to find answers to problems and not scapegoats for evils.

LIPPMANN

This was illustrated during the testimony of Mr. Willard L. Thorp, special adviser to the Department of Commerce. Mr. Thorp was putting into the record an outline summary of the concentration in various lines of industry, arranged alphabetically, starting with aluminum and ending with zinc. "Cans," he stated, "three companies, 90 per cent of the output," and at that point Senator King interrupted by asking "Is that the American Can Company?" Mr. Thorp replied "That might be one of the companies, I don't know the name of the company" and hurried on down the alphabet from cans to cement and then cigarettes. This is a trifling incident but a significant one. For obviously Mr. Thorp knows the names of the three great can companies. But in trying not to name them he was showing that the inquiry was concerned not with persons but with principles.

IF THE INQUIRY can be kept at this level, it may in the end accomplish great things. But if it is to accomplish them, it will have to be on its guard against being overwhelmed by such a torrent of facts and such a blizzard of statistical charts that no one on the committee or outside of it will know what the inquiry is about. I have read the first week's testimony with some care and I finish with the feeling that until the problem to be solved is defined more exactly, the accumulating output of facts is likely to bewilder rather than to enlighten us. For science, let us remember, does not advance by collecting information and then hoping that if enough facts are laid side by side, valuable truths will automatically be generated. There are, of course, lucky accidents in science but in general, especially in the field of applied science, the successful investigator starts with a fairly good idea of what he is looking for.

So it may fairly be asked at the outset: What is this committee looking for? It has not yet been made clear to the public, nor, I should imagine, to the committee itself. Dr. Lubin of the Department of Labor, for example, seemed to be looking for ways of raising production to the 1929 level without ending in a 1929 crash. The President's message of last April, which is the starting point of the inquiry, is concerned with a number of things, such as the depression, the low standard of life of one-third of the population, and also with the political and social dangers of concentrated economic power.

What we have to ask ourselves is whether these many questions can be reduced to some central question that the inquiry can study.

IT SEEMS TO ME that it might be done. But if it is to be done, it will be necessary, I think, to restate and reformulate the problem that the first witness, Dr. Lubin, posed at the end of his testimony.

In substance, Dr. Lubin said that if the income of about sixteen out of twenty-nine million American families could be increased about $2.25 a day, the goods they would buy would make American agriculture and industry very prosperous. Now $2.25 a day does not sound like very much. But in fact it means that the income of families having $1,250 a year or less would be half again as large. So Dr. Lubin was saying that if more than half the people had half again as much income, they and everyone else would be much better off.

There is no doubt about it. But if Dr. Lubin's statement is to be useful and not misleading, is it not necessary to add at once that if half the population is to consume half again as much wealth, then half again as much wealth will have to be produced? If you think of these 16,000,000 families solely as customers, and fail to insist that they are also producers, Dr. Lubin's method of stating the problem will lead you directly to all kinds of false remedies.

FOR IF YOU START with the idea that you must put $2.25 more cash in the pockets of 16,000,000 families, you may quickly conclude that you can solve the economic problem by giving them printed money as subsidies or by raising money wages by law. Only when you insist that to have half again as much income, you must produce that much more income, does the real problem emerge.

For then you must ask yourself what it is that prevents these 16,000,000 families from producing half again as much income. Put this way, the problem of this inquiry becomes, I think, pertinent and coherent.

WHAT IS IT that prevents men from producing more income for themselves? The things which prevent them are the very things that this committee is, so it seems to me, commissioned to look for. And it is reasonably clear where to look. A man who is not earning as much as he needs, or would like to have, may be prevented, (a) because he does not wish to work any harder; (b) because he does not know how to work more productively; (c) because he has to work with bad tools; (d) because he has to pay too much for the privilege of working; (e) because he has to exchange what he produces at a low price against a high price for the things he must buy.

In so far as the obstacles are in his own character and temperament, the committee can hope to do little about it. As regards efficiency and skill, the problem is one of education and also of artificial limitations, monopolies if you like, on the training of apprentices. As regards poverty which results from bad tools, from depleted land, and the like, the problem is to see what can be done by conservation, resettlement and public investment designed to make backward areas yield more wealth. When we come to (d) and (e), we come to the problems of "monopoly," for there the question is whether concentrated control in certain industries results in price fixing at a level which, though profitable to the owners, excludes a mass of potential customers who would furnish work to the mass of potential workers.

THE QUESTION THEN is whether the laws of property, of patents, of contracts, and of corporations, and whether the banking system, favor industrial organizations that fix prices at a level which excludes the customers who would at lower prices furnish employment for more willing workers. In so far as prices are fixed at such a level they may properly be called monopolistic prices, and the legal conditions which foster monopolistic prices may properly be described as special privileges.

So the problem before the committee is to identify the privileges by means of which monopolistic prices are fixed and maintained.

Labor Board's Attitude

By Mark Sullivan

About Sit-Downs

IN THE CONTROVERSY about the National Labor Relations Board which will emerge in the coming Congress, a principal issue is the board's attitude toward the "sit-down" strike.

SULLIVAN

One sit-down case on which the labor board has taken a preliminary, though not yet final, position, is that of the Douglas Aircraft Co. at Santa Monica, Calif. The union which conducted this sit-down is an affiliate of C. I. O. The facts as here given are taken from records of the Labor Board:

In the Douglas plant, at 9 a. m., February 23, 1937, a member of the "strategy committee" of the C. I. O. union pulled a switch in the lower plant. "With the power off, work ceased, and members of the union led a parade up and down the aisles of the plant. Participants in the parade urged other workers to join . . . Workers who refused were called 'scabs.'"

THE SECOND DAY of the sit-down, notice was served on the sit-downers by the chief of police of Santa Monica ordering them to leave the plant. They refused.

The following day, the grand jury of Los Angeles County, after hearing the head of the Douglas company and other witnesses, found an indictment against the strikers, charging them with conspiracy in violation of California law. The sheriff, with deputies, appeared at the plant to arrest the sit-downers.

After the appearance of the law officers, the sit-downers sent a delegation to an official of the company. This official, G. W. Strattong, testified later, in the Labor Board hearing, that a spokesman for the sit-downers said to him:

"I came in to inform you and the management that if any law enforcement officers attempt to take us out of this plant, we are prepared to blow it up. We have arms passed into the windows, and we are prepared to blow it up and hold this plant until hell freezes over, and somebody is going to get hurt."

OTHER WITNESSES described preparations made by the sit-downers to carry out their threat and resist the law officers. Sections of flexible metal hose were weighted and taped for use as weapons. Pans of inflammable lacquer were placed in partly completed airplanes. Trails of lacquer were spilled on the floors. Acetylene torches were made ready to set fire to the lacquer.

These preparations for violence on the part of the sit-downers did not come to any explosive head. "After many conferences, it was agreed that the strikers . . . submit to arrest on condition that they not be handcuffed." The sit-downers were arrested, tried, and some convicted and fined.

The Douglas plant resumed operations. The company reinstated many of the sit-downers who had not taken part in any of the violence except the act of "sitting down." As to 38 of the sit-downers, the Douglas company refused reinstatement.

AGAINST THIS ATTITUDE of the company, the union complained to the Los Angeles branch of the Labor Board. This body, on June 8, 1938, issued a "Proposed Order." This order declared that the Douglas company in the beginning had been guilty of an "unfair labor practice," in that it had discriminated against the C. I. O. union. The board ordered the company to reinstate most of the 38 men who had been denied re-employment following the sit-down, "without prejudice to their seniority and other rights" and with back pay from the date when they had been denied re-employment.

Whether the Douglas company had been guilty of an "unfair labor practice," whether it had discriminated against the C. I. O. union, is a question too intricate to consider in the space here available. There were in the Douglas plant three unions; one was the C. I. O. union which conducted the sit-down. Testimony seems to show that this union had only a few hundred of Douglas' 6,000-odd workers. Another union was an affiliate of C. I. O.'s rival, the A. F. L.; this union had been longer in the field and had more members than the C. I. O. one. The third and largest labor organization at the plant was the Aircraft Workers Union, a semi-"company union" evolved out of an earlier organization called the "Douglas Employes Association.

ASSUMING WHAT is in fact disputed, assuming that the Douglas company actually had discriminated against the C. I. O. union, and had thereby committed an "unfair labor practice," nevertheless the National Labor Relations Board's decision puts it in a hotly disputed position. In effect, the board seems to hold these things: that a union can decide for itself whether it has been subjected to discrimination; that if a union so decides, it is justified in committing acts of violence which the courts hold to be violations of law, and that if the board subsequently holds there actually was discrimination, the members of the union shall be reinstated, with back pay.

While Italy Threatens, Japan Acts

EUROPE'S CONFUSION is Japan's opportunity. That has been the situation in the Far East for a long time. It is the case today.

NOVER

In 1915, while Europe was at war, Japan tried to slip over the notorious 21 Demands which sought to achieve through diplomatic pressure alone what since then has been attempted by warlike means, namely, the subjugation of China to Japan's will.

Twenty-two years later, in the summer of 1937, it was the existence of a tense situation in Central Europe and the Mediterrean which persuaded the Japanese militarists it was safe for them to continue in North and Central China what they had begun in Manchuria six years earlier.

IT WAS MORE THAN a coincidence that Japanese troops landed in South China at a moment when the Czech-Slovak crisis in Europe was reaching its climax. The fall of Canton came close on the heels of the capitulation at Munich. What the Japanese militarists had feared to do for months after the undeclared war began they did last September.

Since Munich there have been rumors that the three signatories of the anti-Comintern accord were about to pool their strength by means of a straight-out military alliance. These rumors have never been verified. Actually no formal agreement is necessary. Self-interest is a sufficient motive for them to act in concert and take advantage of each other's nuisance value.

THUS, IT WAS probably more than chance which led the Japanese fleet to bomb Pakhoi close on the heels of a serious Franco-Italian flare-up arising out of Italian demands for Nice, Savoy, Corsica, Tunisia and Jibouti.

Pakhoi is a seaport on the Gulf of Tongking. Since they came into possession of Indo-China half a century ago, the French have looked upon the Gulf of Tongking the way the Italians look upon the Adriatic. They have been keenly aware of the possibility that, with another great power astride that arm of the China Sea, their domination of Indo-China might be threatened. That is why, in that scramble for Chinese leaseholds which occurred at the end of the last century, France's prize was Kwangchowan. That seaport and naval base, which is on the east side of the narrow peninsula separating South China from the Island of Hainan which, in turn, dominates the straits leading into the Gulf of Tongking.

SOME MONTHS ago, in fact, when the Japanese threatened to seize Hainan both France and Great Britain sent strong warnings to Tokyo. The Japanese held their hand. At that moment they could not afford to risk the further displeasure of the European democracies, particularly in an area of vital strategic importance to those powers. It was, no doubt, for precisely the same reason that the conquest of Canton was held up.

Since then, in Japan's view, the situation has changed to their advantage and to the disadvantage of Great Britain and France. Hongkong, once a great outpost of empire, is now a hostage to fortune. The continuance of its commercial role now depends entirely on the good will of Japan. And Great Britain is apparently reconciled to this unhappy turn of events.

France, too, has had to pull in its horns somewhat in the Far East. The traffic of arms and munitions over the Indo-China railroad to the Chinese province of Yunnan appears to have dried up to a mere trickle as a result of strong Japanese protests. Thus another route by which Chiang Kai-shek's army managed in the past to get badly needed supplies from abroad has now been cut off.

IN VIEW of France's willingness to go along with Japan's wishes in this particular the action at Pakhoi seems surprising. For it will unquestionably stir French alarms to the fever pitch. Pakhoi is only 70 miles from the Indo-Chinese border. The control of the Chinese coast along the Gulf of Tongking would constitute a very real threat to Indo-China's security. But what can France do about it at a time when the clouds of war are rolling in over Tunisia and Corsica and Nice? The answer is she can do very little. Again the Japanese have timed a major stroke to coincide with a period of European confusion.

The reports from Pakhoi have a further significance. They indicate that the hope entertained in Japan that the fall of Hankow would make it possible for the Japanese armies in China to halt and consolidate their far-flung gains has proved illusory. Through the compulsion of necessity the soldiers of the Mikado find it imperative to push on.

These operations south and west of Canton may have no more conclusive result than did the occupation of Hankow. But they do tend to put French Indo-China in a Japanese vice. And that pressure in the Far East will certainly encourage Italy to continue her pressure on France in Europe and North Africa. By hanging together the aggressors have learned the trick of hanging the democratic powers separately.

Giannini Asks Tax Credit for Profit-Sharing

Urges Revised Laws; Another Witness Seeks Levies as Strike Penalty

By the United Press.

L. M. Giannini, president of the powerful Bank of America, joined a group of prominent industrialists yesterday in urging revision of Federal tax policies as an incentive to National recovery.

The San Francisco banker was one of several witnesses before a Senate Finance sub-committee which is studying profit-sharing plans and the feasibility of granting "incentive" credits to industries which inaugurate social management policies.

Giannini outlined his tax views to newspaper correspondents during a recess. He emphasized that he did not wish to appear critical of "current Federal policies," but warned that present tax rates "are definitely a psychological handicap to business" and that there is no prospect of reduction until the budget is balanced.

Might Balance Budget

The present rates, he said, might come near balancing the budget if the National income were boosted to $85,000,000,000 annually, "but there is no use talking reductions when we have a definite problem in financing the current deficits."

"I think," he said, "that some credit should be given to a corporation that voluntarily puts in a profit-sharing plan or undertakes extensive plant improvement for the purpose of increasing purchasing power. The most effective system would be to give credit for the amount of tax to be paid, say a deduction from the tax determined to be due of a certain percentage of the money spent for these social benefits."

Another witness, C. W. Hazelett, president of the Hazelett Metal Co., New York, assailed present taxes as crippling recovery, and suggested "incentive" credits to stimulate business expansion and development. He advocated "higher tax rates on idle property than property in use," by both the State and Federal Governments. He also urged a Federal tax system under which industry would state its man-hour capacity and be given more favorable rates as it approaches that goal.

Taxes as Strike Penalty

"To the world we present government by the people as a colossal and stupid failure," he said. "We must have a basic revision of the tax laws which will be a powerful incentive to promote employment, reduce tax rates and provide sufficient revenue for sound government—not the unlimited amounts necessary for hopelessly unsound policies."

He argued that taxes should be levied upon "those responsible for strikes" so that the "responsible party should be made to support those made idle." Such a policy would make "it too expensive for either labor or capital to strike," he declared.

In his description of profit-sharing in the Bank of America, Giannini said the plan was started eight months ago under which benefits amounting to 7.5 per cent on salaries up to $6,000 annually and 5 per cent on the excess over $6,000 are paid. In addition, the company contributes $350,000 annually to a pension fund.

Profits by Sharing

Earlier, Joseph M. Friedlander, treasurer of the Jewel Tea Co., Barrington, Ill., said his company instituted a profit-sharing plan in 1924 after suffering a series of losses, and has returned a profit every year since then.

He explained that the company shares 20 per cent of all profits above a base earning figure of $770,000, which equals about $2.75 a share on its common stock. As the stock is selling for $70 on the market this represents a 4 per cent return on capital investment, he said.

Hearing Granted On Taxi Rate, Zone Changes

District taxicab operators who petitioned the Public Utilities Commission yesterday for an increase in rates and changes in zone lines will be granted a public hearing, it was learned yesterday.

The two petitions, one from the Independent Rate and Zone Committee, and the other from the Taxicab Drivers Union, Local 447, containing more than 1,500 signatures of taxicab owners, were presented.

The commission denied two similar requests last month.

A. L. Livsie, chairman of the Independent Rate and Zone Committee, said the present zone system and boundary lines was "established in a haphazard manner."

In their proposal the first rate of 20 cents would be maintained, but the second zone would be increased from 30 cents to 40 cents; third zone from 50 to 60 cents, and the fourth zone from 70 to 80 cents.

Zone lines would be revamped in addition to a system of auxiliary zone lines. The auxiliary zone lines would affect rides within any specified zone. Under the proposal it would cost 10 cents each time the cab crossed an auxiliary line within the zone.

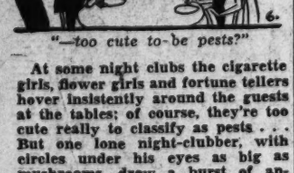
One fairly frequent phenomenon along Fifth Avenue is the matron from Main Street in town with hubby to buy a mink coat as a reward for 25 years of uninterrupted marital bliss. Probably she could buy as good a coat from her local furrier, but the trip is a sort of ritual.

You can hear her discuss the mink learnedly in night clubs; maybe it's her first fur coat; maybe her last.



"—matrons near the gas tanks"

Swallowing my own advice manfully, I walked the length of 57th street today, from the trans-Atlantic piers on the Hudson to fashionable Sutton Place on the East River . . . It's a luxury street, little known in the interior, and Sutton Place is a heady neighborhood for an Iowa boy, with the languid matrons exercising their Pekes on leashes against a background of towering gas tanks painted to harmonize with the exclusive neighborhood.

The b. w. was agog when we found Marlene Dietrich sitting next to us at the theater, with Cary Grant, with her hat tilted well back on her blond hair. In the green room at intermission the crowd stared at 'em covertly and with well-bred furtiveness, until a matron from St. Louis met a friend from Detroit right in front of the couch on which the movie stars were sitting. Then there was a series of introductions and exclamations which took the spotlight completely away from Marlene and Cary.

Confidence seems to be returning to the financial district; a clothier is advertising $335 overcoats for men . . . At the Rainbow Room a bald but sprightly customer held the floor alone with his blonde girl-friend (several inches taller than he) the other evening for 45 minutes, with alternate rumbas and tangoes . . . 6,000 Drivers Face Refusal Of 1939 Tags

Have to Satisfy Traffic Warrants; Pedestrian Control Hearing Dec. 29

By Howard F. Wentworth.

More than 6,000 warrants have been issued for District motorists who failed to satisfy traffic tickets in 1938, and unless charges are adjusted persons named in them will be unable to receive 1939 license plates, the Police Traffic Bureau announced yesterday.

At the same time, District officials, advised that six of the nine traffic fatalities last month were pedestrians, set December 29 as the date for a public hearing on pedestrian control.

Pointing out that the November fatality toll was one higher than that last year, Traffic Director Van Duzer warned the city that its 1938 safety record hinges on the remaining days of December.

Twelve lives have been saved in the District this year as compared to the traffic toll for this time in 1937. Accidents and injuries in November showed a sharp decline in spite of the additional fatality.

The longest reported period this year without a fatality was 21 days—from September 16 to October 7—according to police records.

Applications for 1939 tags of all motorists named in warrants are being extracted from Traffic Bureau files, police official said. Inspector William E. Holmes, traffic supervisor, explained that the bureau would accept $5 collateral on each warrant, and advised that they be adjusted as soon as possible to avoid a last-minute rush.

Mail Applications January 1

Applications for 1939 plates will be mailed from the bureau starting January 1, in accordance with the plan to extend the time limit on 1938 tags until March 1. The new tags may be placed on cars beginning February 1.

Commissioner Hazen set the pedestrian control hearing date, and, after a conference with Van Duzer and Police Superintendent Brown, ordered tentative regulations to be drafted for consideration.

Van Duzer submitted a report on methods employed by large cities which have adopted pedestrian control laws. A total of 56 cities with populations of 100,000 or more now enforce laws against pedestrians, he said.

Eldridge, Thomas Named

Assistant Traffic Director M. O. Eldridge and E. W. Thomas, Assistant Corporation Counsel, were assigned to draft pedestrian regulation suggestions.

Providing for the arrest and prosecution of pedestrians who fail to comply with the law, the proposed regulations will include two major points:

A city-wide ban against pedestrians crossing streets in the middle of blocks.

A requirement that pedestrians crossing at controlled (by light or policemen) intersections do so only on the "go" signal.

Motorists would be compelled to yield the right-of-way to pedestrians crossing on proper signals, but a pedestrian caught in the center of the street by changing lights must await the green signal before completing his crossing.

Fatalities Analyzed

Van Duzer presented an analysis of 207 pedestrian fatalities—from January 1, 1936, to October 31, 1938—showing that more than 55 per cent were killed while crossing streets between intersections. In 76 per cent of the deaths, pedestrians were found to be at fault, his chart revealed.

In only 1.5 per cent of the analyzed fatalities, Van Duzer pointed out, were pedestrians killed while crossing at intersections on proper signals.

Copies of the proposed pedestrian control rules will be submitted to the city's various citizen associations for study before the hearings, Hazen said.

Reservoir Yields Lawyer's Body; Listed as Suicide

New York police reported last night the body of a man identified as Mark Stearman, a Washington attorney, had been found in Croton Reservoir, New York.

Police said he lived at 4610 Thirtieth street northwest, this city.

Dr. Amos O. Squire, Westchester County medical examiner, listed the death as suicide.

Stearman had been missing from Stoney Lodge Sanitarium, 3 miles from the dam, since 9:30 a. m. Police said he had been a voluntary patient at the sanitarium. His wife, Aline, was reported on a Bermuda cruise.

Persecutions Have Benefited Palestine Jews, Dr. Seidel Says

Two years of internal strife and recent persecution by German anti-Semitism have benefited, not harmed, Jews in Palestine, Dr. Herman Seidel, Baltimore Jewish leader, told a meeting of the Washington Zionist District last night at the Community Center.

The half million Jews in Palestine have developed socially and economically, Seidel said, and Palestine is now the "Jewish outpost of the future."

When the Jewish-Arab rioting started in 1936, Palestine Hebrews forgot individual interests to become "a homogeneous people," he said. Jews overcame "cliquiness to put the race above the individual," he asserted.

In order to become self-sufficient, Jews in Palestine have now become active in industries and agriculture hitherto undeveloped. A military organization of 30,000 men was created for defense against the Arabs, Dr. Seidel said.

"Hitler has helped, too," he added. "When the German chancellor made his move toward the Sudeten, Jews in Germany and Czechoslovakia read the handwriting on the wall and started emigration to Palestine."

"These immigrants have brought money and industry to Palestine to increase the working capital of the country. That is why the banks have actually increased deposits in the last two years."

Unemployment has decreased in Palestine during the years of fighting, it was said. As Jewish employers were forced to discharge Arabs for sabotaging property, Jewish labor was re-employed.

Queen of Restaurants—Miss Personality—Chosen

Citizens Adopt Resolution to Preserve 18th Century Quality Against Modern Ideas; Mrs. Draper Named Chairman

A movement was launched last night to preserve the eighteenth century quality of Georgetown's architecture.

It was taken by the Progressive Citizens Association of Georgetown which adopted a resolution at its meeting naming Mrs. Elizabeth Draper, former association president, as chairman of a committee of three to evolve ways and means of preserving the old Colonial city against modern ideas.

Mrs. Draper and members of the association pointed out that Georgetown is in line for considerable new construction in connection with the K street viaduct and the M street overpass.

"It would be tragic," Mrs. Draper said, "if Georgetown were to lose its old charm to make way for progress. We only want to make sure that when one of the old homes are done over or when a new business building is built they will be in harmony with the old city."

In attempting to keep Georgetown so that Washington or LaFayette could recognize it, Mrs. Draper made it clear the association was as much interested in the K street warehouses as in the mansions of Q street.

As an example of what her group will attempt to stop, she cited a store on Wisconsin avenue, a tiled place which she said look like a "Swiss something or other."

Hampshire Heights

Washington's newest civic group, the Hampshire Heights Citizens Association, will meet in the Barnard School, Fourth and Decatur streets northwest, at 8 tonight to approve a final draft of by-laws and constitution and elect permanent officers.

The meeting will be the second official one for the association. Three "official" meetings are required before a new association is entitled to affiliation with the Federation of Citizens Associations.

Harold E. Johnson, Metropolitan policeman, is temporary president of the organization; J. Leon Bord, vice president, and George W. Fessenden, secretary.

Formation of the association, which also has had the active backing of Mrs. Dora C. Liezear, a former member of the Chillum Heights Citizens Association, is an outgrowth of the rapid development of a section of the city bordering on the northeast territory of the Petworth Citizens Association.

The association's territory, according to Johnson, will be the north side of Buchanan street, the south side of Ingraham street, Rock Creek Church road and the east side of Fifth street.

Manor Park

Greater Federal appropriations for the District government's upkeep and a local tax ceiling of $1.75 per $100 on present assessed real property valuations, was advocated at a meeting of the Manor Park Citizens' Association last night.

"If the Federal Government would pay a fair and proper share of District government expense there would be no need for additional taxes in the city," a resolution said.

The lump sum appropriated from Federal sources should not be less than 20 per cent of the total sum yearly the District budget, it was asserted.

The members advocated keeping the intangible property tax now in effect, but urged exemption of checking accounts and personal cash from taxation up to $500.

In favor of the present corporation net income tax, the association went on record as opposing a nonsalary, nonwage personal net income tax. A resolution to ask the opinion of the Attorney General as to the constitutionality of taxing Federal employes in the District was approved.

New members elected were Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Savolaine, J. L. Compton and Michael Bunke.

Kenilworth Citizens

Indorsement of a general income tax for the District and rejection of a sales tax, was voted last night by the Kenilworth Citizens Association, at a meeting in its community center.

Members charged the sales tax would fall most severely on the small wage earners.

Progressive Citizens Of Congress Heights

Members of the Progressive Citizens Association of Congress Heights last night approved plans for a community Christmas celebration December 22.

A Christmas tree will be lighted near Portland and Nichols avenue southeast, and the tree will be dedicated with group singing and speeches by civic leaders.

Metropolis View

The Metropolis View Citizens Association last night decided upon a Christmas community celebration to be held at Third and Evarts streets northeast December 23 at 7 p. m.

Features of the celebration, according to preliminary plans, will include a parade to be headed by the Elks Boys Band and a 24-girl choir of St. Vincent's Home and presentation of gifts to community children.

Paving of Seventh street from Franklin street to Michigan avenue and Lincoln road from the Glenwood Cemetery entrance to Douglas street was asked in a resolution adopted at the meeting.

Dupont Circle

The voice of the Dupont Citizens Association was raised yesterday in "unalterable opposition to the erection of any memorial or other building on the Tidal Basin which would cause the contour of the basin to be changed or the destruction of the surrounding trees or shrubbery."

Support of the resolution was expressed in a letter from Senator King, of Utah, saying, "I share the views of your organization and regret exceedingly that a course is being pursued at variance with your view."

Forest Hills Citizens

Support for a District sales tax as "fair and equitable" was voted last night by the Forest Hills Citizens Association, meeting in the Ben W. Murch School.

Dr. George C. Havener and Gen. Mason M. Patrick were appointed to ask the District Commissioners for a survey of street lighting facilities in the Forest Hills section. Dr. Havener said the lack of lighting in his area now was as bad as in Anacostia 15 years ago.

Old Inhabitants Re-elect Noyes For 3d Time

Editor, Now 80, Chosen Unanimously; Unable To Attend Meeting

Theodore W. Noyes, 80-year-old Washington civic leader and editor of the Evening Star, last night was elected president of the Association of Oldest Inhabitants of the District of Columbia for the thirty-second time at a meeting in the Old Union Engine House, Nineteenth and H streets northwest.

NOYES

Unable to attend the meeting, Noyes was chosen unanimously. Twenty-two other officers also were re-elected.

Jesse C. Suter announced plans for the association's annual banquet tomorrow night at the Hotel Raleigh, to mark the seventy-third anniversary of the organization. Daniel C. Roper, Secretary of Commerce, will be guest speaker, and the members of the association will pay tribute to those who have died in the last year, in the traditional flower ceremony.

Thirteen vice presidents named at the meeting were John Clagett Proctor, Christian Heurich, Charles A. Langley, George Spransy, Fred A. Emery, Joseph I. Keefer, John R. Mahoney, John B. Dickman, Elra C. Palmer, Walter E. Allen, Jesse C. Suter, Anthony Denekas and Dr. Hugh M. Smith.

Other officers included J. Eliot Wright, recording secretary and treasurer; William E. Wise, assistant recording secretary; James F. Duhamel, corresponding secretary; John R. Mahoney, financial secretary; Harry A. Burr, marshal; John Clagett Proctor, chronicler. Duhamel and Proctor were named delegates to the federation.

Bank Here Made Executor of Slain Lawrence's Estate

Phoenix, Ariz., Dec. 5 (AP).—The Arizona Supreme Court granted to the American Security & Trust Co., of Washington, D. C., today the executorship of the estate of Marcus Jay Lawrence, wealthy former Washington resident who was slain in a fight at Prescott last May 11.

The high tribunal overruled judgment of the Yavapai County Superior Court, which had named as executor the Phoenix Savings & Trust Co., representing Jane Stout Lawrence, the widow. Mrs. Carrie Lawrence, of Washington, the slain man's mother; Paul Lawrence, of Cleveland Heights, Ohio, a half brother, and the Washington bank filed the appeal.

Lawrence's will left one-half of the community property, Arizona's legal minimum, to his widow, who had filed suit for divorce before he was killed. The estate has been valued at about $800,000.

Lawrence was fatally beaten by Ernesto Lira, Prescott sportsman. Lira was convicted of second-degree murder

Cafe Men Crown Aline Gregg Industry's 'Miss Personality'

Hostess Wins First Honor as Beauties Parade at Convention; Peggy Andrick 2nd, Sadie Somers 3d, Helen Motley 4th

Washington today hails a new addition to local royalty—the queen of the waitresses, Aline Gregg, young hostess at the Kenesaw Restaurant.

As their sponsors cheered, clapped and whistled their encouragement, Washington's loveliest and most personable waitresses paraded across the stage of the Mayflower Hotel ballroom last night, each hoping to be selected "Miss Personality" by the delegates to the convention of the National Restaurant Association. Miss Gregg was crowned winner after 15 minutes of serious consideration by the judges, among whom were Mary Haworth, Washington Post columnist; Charles G. Duffy, executive editor of the Times and Herald, and Roy W. Cooley, the new president of the National Restaurant Association.

Second, third and fourth honors were carried away by Peggy Andrick, Sadie Somers and Helen Motley, respectively. For her success, Miss Gregg was presented with a gold cup. Miss Andrick received an elaborate dresser set; Miss Somers, a gold mesh evening bag, and Miss Motley, a neat compact.

Earlier in the evening Sir Wilmott Lewis, Washington correspondent for the London Times, gave a view of world affairs from the angle of the restaurateur. "Democracy says, 'The customer is always right,'" he said. "Dictatorship says, 'Take what we give you and like it.'" Sir Wilmott stated that he was an admirer of the American brand of democracy, stemming from the time the pioneer crossed the Western plains "with a gun in one hand and a frying pan in the other."

Teachers Advised To Wed if They 'Find Right Man'

Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, president of the Board of Education, told the women of Wilson Teachers College and their mothers "How to Make Teaching a Success" last night at the school's annual mother-daughter banquet.

Mrs. Doyle recommended that all teachers marry "if you can find the right man."

Jurists Hear Plea to Raise Bar Standard

Proposal to Require 2 Years in College Backed by Clephane, Fought by Earnest

Modern lawyers must have knowledge of sociology, philosophy and other subjects not directly covered by legal studies, declared Col. Walter C. Clephane, attorney, at a meeting yesterday of the justices of the District Court, called to consider a proposal to tighten requirements for admission to the District bar.

Under the presidency of Chief Justice Alfred A. Wheat, the jurists heard Clephane and John Paul Earnest, chairman of the committee on admissions and grievances of the District Court, argue pros and cons of a suggestion that two years of college education—or its equivalent—be required of all aspirants to the local bar before they undertake legal training.

Applicable in 1942

The proposal, approved in June by the bar association, would apply only to students enrolling in law schools after September 1, 1942. If adopted, the more stringent requirement would bring District Court rules into closer conformity with new rules of the Court of Appeals, promulgated in July.

In answer to Clephane, Earnest declared records show that applicants with four-year high school educations have been more successful in the District bar examinations than persons with one year of college training and as successful as those with two.

Earnest declared the profession is full of eminent lawyers and judges who had not even been to high school.

11 States Lack Provision

He added that most of the applicants for admission to the District bar are Government workers who do not intend to practice, but desire only to improve their status in the civil service.

On the other hand, Clephane, who represented the minority of the committee on admissions and grievances, maintained that the profusion of administrative tribunals requires of lawyers that they be familiar with many subjects extraneous to the law which can only be studied satisfactorily at college. He declared that only 11 States, mostly in the Southeast, now fail to require two years of pre-legal college training.

Walter M. Bastian, former president of the District Bar Association, and Herbert M. Bingham, chairman of the association's committee on legal education, presented the bar resolution, adopted June 23, urging the higher requirements.

Steel Men Ask New Hearings On Wage Scale

Petition Discloses Minority Report of Public Contract Board

A committee representing small Eastern iron and steel manufacturers filed with the Labor Department yesterday a petition for reopening hearings of the Public Contracts Board, which early in November set minimum steel wages at 45 cents an hour in the South and 62½ cents throughout the rest of the country.

The committee, representing almost a score of steel producers, declared that the 62½-cent minimum did not represent the standardization of prevailing wages, but constituted a Government attempt actually to increase the wage rate for common labor in many steel producing regions. Many small companies would be ruined by the wage advance, according to the petition filed by Robert B. Thomas, counsel for the producers.

Minority Report Withheld

The filing of the petition brought to light the fact that a Labor Department press release with a summary of the findings by the Public Contracts Board had not mentioned the existence of a minority report within the board. Oscar R. Strackbein, one of the three members of the board, declared in a minority report that the majority findings would operate as a wage increase in certain areas.

He recommended an increase in the number of regions over which minimum wage standards would be fixed so as to make the findings more in line with local prevailing wages. The steel companies hold that the Walsh-Healey act under which minimum wages are fixed for all companies with which the Government does business, was intended not to raise wages but to eliminate "chiselers" and cut-rate practices by minorities.

Thomas, commenting on the petition, said that "circumstances strongly support the suspicion that political considerations have played a part in this whole matter." He added that in the pre-election publicity "nothing but a press release was available to the companies affected by the report. Washington refused to disclose its full text.

Full Text Released

"Eventually, under a bombardment of protesting demands, a full text of the report was released. Then it was discovered that it contained a minority report by one of the three members of the board, a fact previously concealed, and to which no reference was made in the press release on the report made just before the election."

The committee of small Eastern steel producers is composed of D. S. Wolcott, vice president, Lukens Steel Co., Coatesville, Pa.; J. H. Parker, vice president, Carpenter Steel Co., Reading, Pa., and John T. Whiting, vice president, Alan Wood Steel Co., Conshocken, Pa. Among other companies represented are the Atlantic Wire Co., Branford, Conn.; Buffalo Bolt Co., North Tonawanda, N. Y.; Buffalo Steel Co., Tonawanda, N. Y.; Central Iron & Steel Co., Harrisburg, Pa.; Cohoes Rolling Mill Co., Cohoes, N. 2 Convicts Given Life in Slaying

Winchester, Va., Dec. 5 (AP).—James Jewell and Robbie Beavers, convicts, pleaded guilty here today to first degree murder in the slaying of Ralph Clinevell, a fellow-convict at a prison camp, and were sentenced to life imprisonment by Judge Philip Williams in Frederick Circuit Court.

On a statement which they signed Jewell and Beavers admitted the attack upon Clinevell and said the dead man had reported to camp authorities an alleged conspiracy to break camp. Clinevell was attacked with a sledge hammer and pick as the convicts were quitting work one evening last summer.

The court also heard testimony today from a number of witnesses from the camp.

Gov.-Elect O'Conor Returns From Cruise

New York, Dec. 5 (AP).—Gov.-Elect O'Conor of Maryland returned from a 16-day Caribbean cruise today and left immediately for Baltimore to prepare for his inauguration on January 11.

O'Conor, who was accompanied aboard the Grace liner Santa Rosa by Mrs. O'Conor, said he had obtained a complete rest from the ardors of his campaign.

Executioner Can't Retire, French Rule

'M. de Paris,' 76, to Keep On Severing Heads in Economy Verdict

By the United Press.

Paris, Dec. 5.—Anatole Deibler, a gray little man known throughout France as "Monsieur de Paris," today was handed an official verdict by the French "Economy Commission," which may doom him to continue chopping off people's heads until he dies.

The commission, hunting up ways of saving money, decided "Monsieur de Paris," France's official executioner, cannot resign his job because it would require doubling the cost of operating the guillotine.

Deibler, now 78, gets $475 a year and expenses for running the guillotine. If he should be allowed to retire, he still would get the same salary and the job, which must pass to his nephew because it is hereditary, would thus cost the government $960. This, the commission decided, was too much.

Deibler is distracted. He has been cutting off heads for 40 years, and has officiated at 270 public executions, but he told the government he was getting weary of the work.

The pay he gets for his job does not suffice to meet his needs, and he has been adding to his income in recent years by selling perfume.

Indifference Held Church's Great Enemy

Rev. Mr. Hiemenga Opens Jubilee Session Of Lord's Day Alliance

Indifference of Christians to modern evils, rather than the open opposition the church is facing, is the greatest enemy of religion today, warned the Rev. John J. Hiemenga yesterday at opening session of the golden jubilee celebration of the Lord's Day Alliance of the United States, held at Foundry Methodist Church, scene of the first regular meeting in 1888.

"Our indifferent attitude toward Sabbath observance, for example, is just as dangerous to the life of the church as the open opposition being manifested against religion in Germany, Russia and other countries," declared the speaker, chairman of the jubilee committee of the alliance.

Dr. John H. Willey, S. T. D., Ph. D., president of the alliance, presided at the gathering, in which other participants included the Rev. Harry L. Bowlby, general secretary; Dr. Frederick Brown Harris, pastor of the host church; Dr. William S. Abernethy, Calvary Baptist pastor, and Dr. Albert J. McCartney, pastor of Covenant-First Presbyterian Church. The latter's father formerly was secretary of the alliance.

Many local ministers jointed in the celebration, including Dr. Raphael Harwood Miller, of National City Christian Church; Dr. Luther Neff, Wesley Methodist; Dr. Howard Stone Anderson, First Congregational; the Rev. James H. Taylor, Central Presbyterian, and others.

As another feature of the national observance, Roger W. Babson, statistician, will address a jubilee meeting tonight at the Bedford Presbyterian Church, Brooklyn, N. Y., on "The Business Outlook and Sunday Observance." Next Sunday at Christ Methodist Episcopal Church, New York City, Dr. Ralph W. Sockman will speak on "The Decisive Day of the Week," and on the following Monday, at the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church, President Willey will speak on "The Ghost of Banquo."

Byrd Forecasts 'Rude Awakening' On Federal Debt

Roanoke, Va., Dec. 5 (AP).—Senator Byrd (Democrat), of Virginia, predicted tonight the American people will meet "a rude awakening" when they come to pay the national debt.

That direct and contingent debt, he said in an address prepared for delivery before the Virginia Highway Users Association, has been trebled in the past five years by the Federal Government's "stupendous program of public spending" and will "soon be over $48,000,000,000," and, he added, the interest "will in all probability amount to more than the principal."

He said that Virginia's "self-denial and economical administration" in State government would not protect it from payment of "our proportionate share."

Labor and Political Leaders See 'Pins and Needles'

Harvard Stadium Made Bull Ring

Cambridge, Mass., Dec. 5 (AP).—Harvard Stadium became a bull ring today, with certain modifications, when two policemen herded two escaped steers into the famed arena and slew them.

Carl Anderson and Thomas Tevlin, of the Metropolitan district police, using cruising cars as mounts, drove the two animals, which earlier fled the Brighton abbatoir, into the stadium in a fog so dense visibility was limited to a few score yards. Toreador Tevlin killed one of the animals with a single bullet. The other steer fell before two bullets from Toreador Anderson's pistol.

Gov. Nice Celebrates 61st Birthday—Correctly

Annapolis, Md., Dec. 5 (AP).—Gov. Nice observed his sixty-first birthday today—the correct date.

For years the Governor celebrated on December 6. Then he had to dig up a birth certificate for a passport preparatory to a European trip and discovered the correct date was December 5. Now he celebrates in strict accordance with the vital statistics.

Revolver Taken To Save Father, Teacher Is Freed

New York, Dec. 5 (AP).—Mrs. Gladys Holzinger, 32, a school teacher who was arrested November 26 charged with violation of the Sullivan antifirearms law, today was released with Justice Hockert's condemnation for having turned a pistol over to police.

Mrs. Holzinger, finding a pistol in her parents home, turned it over to Patrolman John Galligan because she feared her father might use it on himself in grief over the suicide that day of his wife. Later she was booked, fingerprinted and photographed for the rougues' gallery, and forced to remain overnight in a police station while bail was raised.

Guild Calls Strike On Chicago Paper

Chicago, Dec. 5 (AP).—The Chicago Newspaper Guild, sponsoring a strike of its members against the morning Herald and Examiner and the Evening American, posted pickets in Hearst Square today.

Guild headquarters claimed more than 500 employes of the editorial and commercial departments of the two publications had joined in the walkout.

The management estimated the two papers employed between 3,200 and 3,300 persons and announced both would be "printed and distributed as usual." Both continued publication after the strike was called early this morning.

Bloodhounds Trail Escaped Lorton Convict

Fog Helps Youth, 19, D. C. Housebreaker, Flee Reformatory

Under cover of a driving rain and a low-hanging fog, a 19-year-old youth yesterday escaped from Lorton Reformatory. He had served more than a year of a 7½-year sentence by housebreaking and larceny in the District.

The fugitive is listed as Charles W. Marshall, of McBee, S. C. He is the first inmate of the prison, which has no walls, to escape since several prisoners made a break in the spring of 1937 and were recaptured.

Marshall's absence was discovered in a routine checkup at 3:45 p. m.

Since entering the prison, which is developing a program designed to rehabilitate prisoners by giving them more than the usual amount of freedom, Marshall had been employed in the clothing factory at Lorton.

Police last night organized a manhunt throughout Fairfax County, with bloodhound packs from the reformatory.

Marshall was arrested July 29, 1937, by First Precinct police, and after being sentenced in District Court, was sent to the reformatory, which houses felony prisoners serving from two years to life. Col. William L. Peak, superintendent of the reformatory, said Marshall was not considered dangerous.

The reformatory is surrounded by nine watch towers, from each of which a guard can see the next tower on his right and left and all the intervening land.

Surf Gives Up Body Of Airplane Victim

San Francisco, Dec. 5 (U.P.).—A body, found in the surf near Point Reyes, Calif., where a United Airlines transport crashed into the ocean last week with a loss of five lives, tonight was tentatively identified as that of S. L. Shonts, of San Jose, Calif., a passenger on the plane, United Airlines offices here announced.

Fares Increased on Montgomery Bus Lines, But Transit Firm Must Better Its Service

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Dec. 5.—The Public Service Commission granted increased fares today on the Alta Vista and Montgomery lines of the Capital Transit Co. and Montgomery Bus Lines, effective January 1.

Washington commuters had opposed the increase.

A commission order authorizing the lines to boost their fares said four months of experimental service on modified schedules in an effort to avert the increase showed revenues "were sufficient to meet the costs of operation."

The commission ordered an augmented schedule of passenger motor bus service on the line between the Maryland-District of Columbia line and Washington Grove, via Rockville and Gaithersburg, and on the line between the Maryland-D. C. line and Rockville via Alta Vista.

Service to be Increased

It directed 2-hour headways on the Rockville pike between Montrose and the District of Columbia via old Georgetown road through Alta Vista.

Half-hour headways were ordered between the National Institute of Health and the District of Columbia, via Rockville pike and between Alta Vista and the District of Columbia via Old Georgetown road.

Maryland operations were ordered rezoned into 5-cent fare zones, with this schedule for 12-ride weekly commutation tickets:

Zone 1, 50 cents; zone 2, 70 cents; zone 3, 90 cents; zone 4, $1.10; zone 5, $1.25; zone 6, $1.45; zone 7, $1.60; one 8, $1.80; one 9, $2.00; zone 10, $2.15; zone 11, $2.35.

Citizens Protested

The commission's order followed public hearings conducted in Baltimore several months ago to which the Bethesda and Rockville chambers of commerce and citizens' associations in the area sent delegations to protest service inadequacies.

The delegations were opposed to increased fares but insisted that commuters were entitled to better service. In some instances, they pointed out, lines had been abolished altogether while on some lines buses were operated only a few times daily.

N.Y. Firm Ordered To Reinstate 31

The National Labor Relations Board ordered the McKaig-Hatch, Inc., Buffalo, N. Y., yesterday to reinstate 31 employes, pay them remedial wages, and to bargain collectively with the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers (C. I. O.).

The board also ordered the company to disestablish the McKaig & Hatch Athletic and Welfare Association on the grounds it was inspired by the company, that it was not established to promote athletics among the company employes, but that its by-laws dealt entirely with collective bargaining.

The 31 men ordered reinstated complained that they were refused re-employment after a strike in September, 1937, over the company's purported refusal to recognize the Amalgamated as the exclusive bargaining agency for McKaig-Hatch employes.

Stan Laurel Escapes 2d Drunk Driving Trial

Los Angeles, Dec. 5 (AP).—Charges of drunk driving against Stan Laurel, film comedian, were dismissed today at the request of the city prosecutor. The case was scheduled for retrial after failure of a jury in the first trial to agree.

Michigan Ban On Strikes Aim Of Fitzgerald

New Governor Warns Neither Labor Nor Capital 'Will Dictate'

By the Associated Press.

Grand Ledge, Mich., Dec. 5.—Michigan's Republican Governor-elect, Frank D. Fitzgerald, said in an interview today that "neither labor organizations nor employers will dictate to the government" when he assumes office January 1.

In his first pronouncement on labor policies since he defeated Gov. Frank Murphy last month, Fitzgerald said he would recommend to the Legislature labor relations intended to facilitate the settlement of industrial disputes without strikes.

"My first concern is that the legislation and its administration shall be fair, but stern," he said.

State to Control Unions

"Labor will not run Michigan, Michigan will control labor organizations. Neither labor organizations nor employers will dictate to the government. I am intent on seeing that workingmen are protected both from radical leaders and selfish employers."

Labor relations constituted a major issue during the election campaign, during which Gov. Murphy's attitude toward sit-down strikes that beset his administration was criticized and defended, and Fitzgerald, asserting that "the people elected me to make certain changes in the policies of State government," listed it as his No. 1 problem.

Already at work on his message to the Legislature on the subject, he said he was withholding final decision on major phases pending conferences with industrial and labor leaders. He said he planned to seek the guidance of such men as Walter P. Chrysler, of Chrysler Corporation; William S. Knudsen, of General Motors Corporation; Homer Martin, president of the United Automobile Workers (C. I. O.), and Frank X. Martel, president of the Detroit and Wayne County Federation of Labor (A. F. of L.).

May Forbid Picketing

He has under consideration the desirability of legislation which would require notice of an intention to strike; forbid picketing except by employes of a struck plant, and outlaw any forced payment of union dues.

During his campaign, Fitzgerald advocated a labor relations board which would be responsible for settling disputes that might lead to strikes, and for mediating strikes, and such a recommendation is certain to be included in his legislative message.

He also is insistent that workingmen be given an opportunity to run their own unions, select their leaders, and determine policies in accordance with the principles of a democracy.

Fitzgerald actually becomes Governor at midnight, December 31, although his inauguration is scheduled for noon, Monday, January 2. He already has taken the oath of office.

Reform Lead Up to Scholars, Phi Beta Kappans Are Told

Trained, Alert Intellects Must Solve Social Problems, Williamsburg Parley Speaker Declares

By the Associated Press.

Williamsburg, Va., Dec. 5.—Dr. Frank Pierrepont Graves, president of Phi Beta Kappa, told members of that society tonight that "such obstacles to social welfare" as ignorance, poverty, disease and crime, challenge "the best efforts of Phi Beta Kappans."

The president of the university of the State of New York who also is commissioner of education of New York, spoke at a celebration of the 162d anniversary of the founding of the society in the Raleigh Tavern here. Ceremonies were held in the tavern's Apollo Room, where Phi Beta Kappa was founded.

Dr. Graves discussed at length the point that "the fate of society is determined almost altogether by the wisdom and work of its leaders."

Stresses Role of Superiors

"Average individuals," he declared, "can for a time conserve the achievements of the race and keep the activities of everyday life in operation, but they must ever look to their intellectual superiors for all advanced steps in progress, which alone can keep the world from stagnation."

To obtain such leadership, he said, "we must primarily depend upon proper environment and extend to all classes of society opportunity for training in every line."

Dr. Graves said that in selecting men and women for training in leadership the moral qualities of "industry and perseverance" should be considered.

"Does not this, then, suggest the original function and the continuous achievement of our national society of Phi Beta Kappa?" he asked in conclusion.

Social Problems Cited

"With our social problems and needs as great as they are today, should we not strive to select our leaders wisely, and, in addition, continue to train them definitely for the service of society? How else can we hope either to spread the racial attainments that have come down to us by social inheritance or add to the victories over self and nature that we already have achieved?

"There is still a wide range of superstitions and abuses in our national life to be overcome, and it should be not only the function but the privilege of all who are chosen by Phi Beta Kappa to struggle to their utmost toward the upbuilding of the ideal society and State, and to contribute constantly toward the abolition of ignorance, poverty, disease and crime.

"Such obstacles to social welfare may well challenge the best efforts of Phi Beta Kappans . . ."

New Treasury Bonds All Sold On First Day

Morgenthau Reports Borrowing Operation Was 'Well Received'

By the Associated Press.

Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau said last night the Treasury's December 15 borrowing operation was "well received" by investors who quickly oversubscribed the issue on its first day.

Morgenthau said subscriptions were sufficient to permit him to close to midnight last night the offering of $400,000,000 of 22 to 27-year 2¾ Treasury bonds and $300,000,000 of 5-year 1⅛ Treasury notes. The securities are being sold for cash to cover the Treasury's deficit.

The Secretary said the simultaneous refunding offer to holders of $941,613,750 of notes maturing next March 15 would be closed Wednesday midnight.

Morgenthau declined yesterday to comment on the warning from Chairman Eccles of the Federal Reserve Board against premature reduction of Federal expenditures.

Morgenthau, who in his rare public comments on budget policy has advocated balancing the budget, said merely:

"Governor Eccles is chairman of the Federal Reserve Board and I am Secretary of the Treasury."

Eccles told a group of New York bankers Friday night that sudden withdrawal of Federal spending might cause another recession by crippling public purchasing power.

Roosevelt for Third Term Easier to Beat In Ohio Than Other Democrats, Taft Asserts

By the Associated Press.

Ohio's new Republican Senator, Robert A. Taft, ventured the opinion yesterday that President Roosevelt, if he sought a third term, "would be easier to beat in Ohio than some other Democratic candidates."

Commenting on the national political situation, Taft said he believed the Republicans should nominate a liberal for President in 1940 "if by liberal you mean a man who wants to improve conditions and who is willing to accept changes."

Taft said he thought there was a definite trend in Ohio away from the New Deal as evidenced by the 170,000-vote majority he received over Senator Bulkley, New Dealer, compared to the 600,000 majority by which the President carried the State in 1936.

Himself often mentioned as a Republican Presidential possibility, the tall Senator-elect smilingly waved aside discussion along that line with the statement that he was not an active candidate.

"That doesn't mean," a reporter asked, "that you would not accept the nomination, does it?"

"Of course not," Taft replied. "What man wouldn't?"

Taft, here to arrange for space in the Senate Office Building, said he believed the Republican election victory in Ohio was due to reaction of the voters against "excessive regulation, unlimited spending and a fear of the concentration of arbitrary power on the part of the New Deal."

He said that unless more evidence developed, he had no intention of taking up in the Senate charges made against WPA officials in the Ohio election campaign.

"I don't think there was any organized effort to swing the whole WPA vote," Taft said, "but there were some individual cases."

Bootlegging Drops Despite Increase In Federal Tax

By the Associated Press.

Stewart Berkshire, chief alcohol tax enforcer, reported yesterday on the fifth anniversary of repeal that the volume of bootleg liquor continues to decline.

Illegal stills are getting smaller, he said.

When Congress raised the liquor tax last summer from $2 to $2.25 a gallon, increased bootlegging was feared.

On the question of liquor consumption, the Treasury is noncommittal. Withdrawals of liquor from storage warehouses dropped about 2 per cent in the last fiscal year.

A Woman's New York

By Alice Hughes.

New York, Dec. 5.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—My favorite New York woman of the season is Mrs. Mary Cusick. She and her husband John had a little 9-year-old car that Mary adored. But John would almost never take her out riding, and she felt mighty bad. At last, one night, they had a pretty stiff scrap—and Mary, after hunting the neighborhood, found her darling little car before a beer garden. John was inside with a saucer of suds. "You'd better come out and take me riding," Mary yelled in. "Won't," replied John. Whereupon her great love for the ancient jallopy forced her to the ultimate revenge. She tossed a lighted match into the gas tank, and up went the little car in a sheet of flame. If John wouldn't take her riding, he couldn't go himself. But Mary's heart was likely to bust at this tragedy of temper. The law ruled that the car was hers, and that she hadn't committed arson. But Mary didn't have the dear little old car, either!

John Ryland is dead, and the Empire Theater is not the same. John was the big colored man who had been its general factotum since the time of Charles Frohman, who died on the Lusitania. Everyone who knows and loves the local theater knew John, and had ridden with him in the rackety old elevator. Nearly 45 years Bgi John had been at that historic and beloved playhouse. He was the last living link with its glorious past. Now the old, musty Empire is peopled with ghosts.

Two of our neighbors in nearby Jersey have just celebrated their 102d birthdays jointly—Mrs. Phebe Palmer and Mrs. Clark, who live right across the street from each other in Essex Falls. Bet that was a wonderful party. Wish I could have been there.

Our newspaper photographers screamed for joy the other morning when they were able to snap an old-fashioned sleigh (with horse) right before the Plaza Hotel on Fifth avenue. The combination of sleigh and horse in New York today are rarer than a pair of purple-tufted goofus birds.

I hear that young Mr. and Mrs. Alfred G. Vanderbilt are arguing about where the baby will be born. He speaks for Maryland, while she's a faithful Californian. Come on, Al—let Mamma Manuela have her way!

The most thrilling Christmas windows ever seen in a Fifth avenue store are being repeated this year. Great golden bells pealing happily, with the sound audible on the street. No merchandise whatever—juse the big golden bells ringing merrily. They'll probably top the avenue again this year.

Two-in-One for Varied Night Life

It may be hard to believe, but both the gay flirts above are wearing the same type of dress. If you've been puzzling over the problem of expanding your night life wardrobe without bursting your budget wide open, here is your solution. The new Zip-a-Sleeve transforms the formal gown on the left to a more demure dinner or cocktail frock at right. An invisible slide fastener works this little miracle, for under the arms of this chameleon gown are concealed zippers to flip the puffy leg-o-mutton sleeves on or off at will. Details of this swishy, crackling moire are ingenious, for the modest ruching at neckline and the deftly boned bodice complement the quaint Victorianism of cameo-clasped choker and pompadour

The Gentler Sex

By Malvina Lindsay

Night Off

It is 1:30 a. m., and you have to get up at 7. You have a bad taste in your mouth . . . every bone in your body aches. You are simply too tired to undress—if only you could flop down on the bed just as you are and sleep . . . and sleep . . . and sleep.

Well, you will at least take off your clothes . . . you don't want to ruin your one good evening dress . . . and probably you'd be more comfortable in a nightgown. But one thing certain—you are NOT going to wash your face! Nor brush your hair . . . nor put on a hair net . . . nor put any cold cream around your eyes . . . nor even wash your teeth. You smile to yourself in fiendish triumph. No, you are not EVEN going to wash your teeth. This is one night that you are going to have a holiday—pile in bed in the good old-fashioned way that nature intended.

You catch sight of your haggard reflection in the mirror. Surely you didn't look that way ALL the evening. No, it's just that you've gotten so tired . . . so terribly tired . . . and then the powder and rouge have sort of caked. Why, you look almost as if you were wearing a false face. Now maybe to sleep with all that on . . .

No, you are NOT going to wash your face. The rest will do you more good. Every night you spend the whole evening getting ready to go to bed. And there's ter how you look tomorrow?

You pull off over your head your voluminous trappings of net and taffeta. There! . . . You feel better already. You pat and adjust your hair where it was ruffled. Well . . . maybe you better put on a net . . . so your wave won't be completely ruined . . . it won't take but a minute.

At last you are in your gown. Another minute and you'll be in your bed. How your poor aching body is crying out for it! After all, nature knows best. . . . Yes, even more than those blondes at nothing to show for it the next day. Anyway, what does it matthe cosmetic counters who are always talking about "clogged pores." . . . Or even the dentists with all their palaver about sugar making the teeth decay. . . . Still . . . of course, those little bonbon cakes with the ice cream were awfully sweet . . . and to let that sugar be in your teeth all night . . . maybe rotting them . . . oh, well, you'll wash your teeth.

In the bathroom mirror a kalsomined image with harsh pink cheeks confronts you. Well . . . maybe you had better put on a little cold cream . . . take some of the worst off . . . so the "pores can breathe."

You hastily slap on some cold cream, wipe your face with a piece of cleansing tissue, hold it up for inspection. How disgustingly grimy! To think all that was on your face! A thrill comes over you. You avidly reach for more cream and tissues, for soap and wash cloth.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Speaking From Experience, 2 Wives Tell Unwisdom Of Perpetuating Sham Marriage

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I commend your wise handling of "Bewildered's" recent appeal. As for the contribution from "Anonymous," I wish to say that when such so-called "high-minded" beliefs are held—and are to be practiced—there should be a very frank meeting of minds on the subject before marriage is entered into. No one member of the partnership has the right to impose such a regulation upon the other member, without the latter's foreknowledge and consent.

There are, of course, so many ramifications and variations to this delicate question that it is difficult to discuss the situation in general terms. What fits one specific case may not fit another. But it appears to me that many variations of that unnatural attitude expressed by "Anonymous" turn on one factor, i e., individual failure to progress from the child's status of attention concentrated on self, to the adult status of attention fixed on one's fellowmen. There may be instances where such cases of arrested psychoiogical development can be cured after 30, but I doubt it.

Supposing that "Bewildered," like "Sarah," is prohibited by her church from seeking divorce, she can do no better than to follow the suggestions offered by "Anonymous." Such spiritual discipline of physical impulses can be effected—at a price! But if religion is not a part of the condition, I (who am strongly opposed to divorce except as a last resort) urge her to make the break now. She is young enough, at 28, to make a normal marriage . . .

Having married for love, a normal woman may pity such a husband as "Bewildered" has; but it is neither wise nor necessary for her to masquerade before the world as his wife—impairing her nervous system, developing an irritable disposition, distorting her social perspective and gradually losing vital contact with reality. Such is the price one pays for any departure from the normal patterns of existence. I speak from experience, and am trying to show "Bewildered" the end of the road, as I wish that someone had shown it to me at a critical impasse in my own life . . .

In my case, the exterior view is serene. To casual beholders, even those closest, no rift appears. The man's self-respect is intact; he has been materially successful. I believe, indeed, that if and when the off-the-norm individuals have their faces saved, they probably compensate by greater achievement in other fields. However, I note that in their human relationships, very often they show the disdain, intolerance and lack of sympathy which spring from a deep-rooted inferiority complex (trite expression, but still useful) . . .

Co-operation, and its opposite, is deeply rooted in fundamental rapport, or the reverse. The world is full of misfits who have done very well within their limitations, and usually I do not advocate changing the known quantity for the unknown for selfish reasons—you can't have everything—but irremediable emotional maladjustment in marriage is such a destructive factor that I feel compelled to advocate dissolution of any marriage so afflicted.

I have tried to write from a detached viewpoint, as nothing could be gained by setting down chapter and verse of more than a quarter of a century's unfortunate experience. Whatever bitterness I may once have felt is best left beneath its blanket of quiet old age—which eventually does arrive! May I express my admiration of your excellent handling of so many problems. Your column dignifies the questions submitted by the bewildered humans who write them. . . . Sincerely yours, MUHER.

The Destiny of Woman

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: The letter signed, "Sarah," in your column of December 2—the woman who is married, yet not a wife—could have been written by me 10 years ago. Her story parallels mine in every respect, except for the ending. "Sarah" concludes her letter on a note of despair—"life doesn't last forever"— which speaks volumes.

That's the way I felt—hopeless, bitter. And then I reasoned that the edict against divorce didn't apply to me in principle, for mine was not a marriage. It was a fraud. I had gone through a wedding ceremony with a man to whom I was not a wife. Like the cases of "Bewildered" and of "Sarah," it was a brother-and-sister relationship.

I do not believe in divorce where there is a real marriage. But the very foundation of marriage is the spiritual and physical union of a man and woman, leading to children and a normal family life. Where these things obtain, divorce is wrong. By the same token, it is wicked, contrary to the laws of God and man, for any two persons to perpetuate a sham marriage which knows no function and can bear no fruit.

It took a lot of courage for me to end such a sham. My family was shocked, my friends disapproved. For I could not tell the reason. I felt I owed my so-called husband that much consideration. But having made up my mind, I went through with it. Today, I am happily married; really married; and have two lovely children.

So, "Sarah," take your courage in both hands if you want to fulfill your destiny of wife and mother. Cast off the dead albatross you have been carrying around on your neck; find your real mate, and proceed to lead a normal life. All that stands between you and your destiny is fear of a man-made rule that doesn't apply to a case like yours. For you are not married. You are not a real wife.

HAPPY WIFE.

Actress Lost 43 Pounds in Two Months

Patsy Kelly Suffered No Ill Effects of Diet Through Exercising

By Ida Jean Kain.

IT IS NO longer funny to be fat and the comedians are streamlining. We have grown to expect the glamor girls to have svelte figures just as we expected plumpness on the part of the comedians as part of their stock in laughs . . . but no more!

That delightfully natural actress, Patsy Kelly, has reduced 43 pounds for the very serious reason that she felt she owed it to herself as a woman. Said Patsy . . . "When you hang 165 pounds on 64 inches you get a baby blimp—not a Venus."

What furnished Patsy with the immediate incentive to lop off the pounds, however, was the nice fat role she had in a recent movie. That role was to be hers if she could manage not to look so well fed and, since the camera has the trick of adding a visual 10 per cent to actual weight, the popular comedienne really looked as if she had not been hungry for quite some time.

Followed Rigorous Program

Her program was necessarily rigorous to enable her to lose the 43 pounds in little more than two months, but the resourceful Miss Kelly did her reducing under a doctor's supervision and the program she followed is safe for a limited time. The diet is not one which could be followed indefinitely, and she took more exercise—as you will see—than the average person has time for.

Here is the program:

7:30 a. m.—Hot and cold shower.
Breakfast—Glass of skim milk, melon and lemon.
A 5-mile walk.
Rest before lunch.
Lunch—White meat of chicken, fruit salad, glass of skim milk.
Another 5-mile jaunt.
Badminton.
Massage.
Dinner—Broiled or roast meat from which all fat was removed prior to cooking, two unseasoned vegetables, glass of skim milk, black coffee.
She retired each night at 10:30 o'clock.

Now, there's a program that is really difficult! My objection to the diet is that it contains insufficient iron and vitamins A and B. Those elements could be taken in the form of concentrates but it is always preferable to take them in food and the diet should contain a minimum of one and one-half pats of butter, one egg and three slices of whole wheat bread

Lost Pounds Too Fast

Losing 40 pounds in two months is just twice as fast as anyone should try to lose. When weight is lost that rapidly, too much of it seems to be lost from the face and throat and the reducer is apt to show the effects of strain. More time should be allowed, and the diet should be higher in calories.

Looking at those 5-mile walks and games, it is easy to understand Patsy Kelly's assertion that she has less trouble keeping her weight down than she did in getting it down. She is being very sensible about her exercise, however and, now that she is slim, never fails to walk at least 2½ miles daily. She also does stretching exercises to keep slim in the middle.

As a result of her reducing, this star now wears a size 14 instead of a size 20 and she is extremely—and justifiably—pleased with her new figure. Incidentally, so are the studio and her audience. All in all, it pays to reduce—even if the going is a bit difficult.

Turn Nerves Into Charm

WHAT A jumpy, nervous person Carol is! Her handkerchief held over her chin tells why. She's had an inferority feeling since a childhood accident left her with a scar.

Yet many people of the same sensitive, nervous type have become charming, delightful in spite of setbacks. Their defects seem to spur them on — the divine Sarah Bernhardt was homely!

Naturally colorful, high spirited, these successful neurotics have a big advantage over placid, easy-going types.

But Carol has let a small inferiority conquer her. Ever since other children teased about her scar, she's wanted only to be inconspicuous.

Bubbling with ideas for talk, she'll sit silent in corners. Able to dance like a sylph, she'll pretend she can't, to avoid notice. No wonder she's tied in knots.

But Carol can easily break out of her self-made prison. By making a habit of speaking pleasantly to each person she sees during her day—the postman, the grocery boy—she can acquire the habit of casual talk.

Soon she will be expressing her real self, delighting friends by vivid reactions.

When she develops her talent for dancing, her success will drive out the last remnants of her old inferiority feeling.

In our 40-page booklet, HOW TO AVOID AND OVERCOME NERVOUS TROUBLES, a practicing psychiatrist discusses causes and symptoms—such as incomnia, indigestion, fatigue. How to achieve serenity, vitality.

Visit of Famed Chapin Sisters Will Unite Their Two Talents

Sculptor to Be Guest of Poet, Each Marked in Her Field; Biddles' Cocktail Party to Honor Artist Here for Exhibit

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

A DISTINGUISHED "sister team," each member of which has followed the muse into a creative field totally different from the other, will get together this week-end when Cornelia Van A. Chapin, noted sculptor, comes to Washington for a brief visit. She will be the guest of her brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Francis Biddle, the latter of whom is widely known as Katherine Garrison Chapin, the poet.

HOPE R. MILLER.

When Mr. Biddle was appointed general counsel of the Congressional Committee investigating the TVA many Capital residents hoped he and his talented wife would settle down in Washington for a winter at least. They made an extensive circle of friends here when he was chairman of the National Labor Relations Board in 1934-35.

But while the Biddles now are established in an apartment at 1911 R street northwest, Mrs. Biddle will not linger long in Washington. She plans to return to her home at Philadelphia before Christmas, coming back here only occasionally for visits.

Sunday afternoon, however, she and Mr. Biddle will gather in some of their close friends for a small cocktail party in compliment to Cornelia Chapin, who will arrive from New York that morning. Her widely exhibited sculpture "Pelican-in-Repose" is to be included in the forthcoming show of the Museum of Modern Art Gallery. And that reminds me—yesterday's mail brought invitations to the gallery's sculpture preview, Sunday afternoon from 4:30 to 6:30.

AS YET, I don't know much about the other subjects to be on display, but "Pelican-in-repose," done from life in Greek marble, is sure to be a center of attention. One of the few living artists to carve into stone without preliminary sketch, Miss Chapin has won more laurels than she can shake her chisel at. Her "Penguin" in black granite flew away with the second Grand Prize (Diplome d'Honneur) at the Paris International Exposition of Art and Technique in 1937. Her "Young Elephant," carved in an African tree, shuffled off with the second Anna Hyatt Huntington prize for sculpture at the National Association of Women Painters and Sculptors in 1936. Her "Tortoise" in volcanic rock, also widely shown, is still another of the subjects that have added laurels to her name.

MISS CHAPIN'S master, the great Spanish sculptor, Mateo Hernandez, paid tribute to her as follows: "In Cornelia Chapin we have one woman who has the daring, the admirable energy and discipline to practice the technique of direct carving from life in blocks of hard stone and wood of all kind. Her figures have each a distinct personality, the essential quality of each individual type."

Since 1930 she has exhibited in scores of shows both here and abroad, her work being featured by the National Association of Women Painters and Sculptors; the Freund Gallery; the Pennsylvania Academy in Philadelphia; the Salon des Tuileries and the Salon d'Autumne, Paris, where in 1936, she was elected societaire (the only foreign and the only woman sculptor to be so honored that year).

BUT WHILE Miss Chapin, the sculptor, has been winning honor after honor, her sister, the poet, also has been adding luster to the Chapin name. The author of three books of verse, "Outside the World," "Time Has No Shadow," and "Bright Marriner," Katherine Garrison Chapin's most recent work is a symphonic poem, "Lament for the Stolen," which will be given before an audience of notables at Philadelphia the end of this month. A chorus of 250 women's voices in conjunction with the Philadelphia Orchestra under direction of Eugene Ormandy, will present the symphonic poem, which has been set to music by Harl McDonald, composer and director of music at the University of Pennsylvania.

Like a Greek chorus, "Lament for the Stolen" tells the story and voices the emotion of women everywhere for the mother of a child who has been kidnaped and killed; yet it is distinctly modern in tempo and idiom. Inspired by the most spectacular crime in the last decade, it has a special appeal to the lives of average, twentieth century American parents, who followed every detail of the Lindbergh case to its tragic end.

SOCIETY-GO-ROUND: Mrs. Mark Bristol entertained at luncheon yesterday at the Women's National Democratic Club, having among her guests Mrs. Alexander Weddell, wife of the United States Ambassador to the Argentine. Others in the party were Mrs. Walter Schoelkopf, whose husband is on leave from his duties as secretary of the United States Embassy in Spain; Mrs. William S. Culbertson, the Misses Mary and Josephine Patton, Mrs. Frederick B. Lyon, Mrs. J. Fred Essary and Mrs. John Allan Dougherty . . . Arriving on Sunday to be Mrs. Bristol's house guest and to attend the first of Mrs. Lawrence Townsend's musicales this season is Mrs. George Mesta, formerly of Washington and now of New York . . . Mrs. Bristol is planning a small dinner in compliment to Mrs. Mesta Sunday evening . . . Mme. Saito, wife of the retiring Japanese Ambassador, is emerging from the obscurity in which she recently has enveloped herself. She has cards out for a luncheon December 12. Senora de Ghiraldo, wife of the Argentine counselor, will entertain at luncheon tomorrow at Hotel Twenty-Four Hundred . . . Miss Elizabeth Howry, who has been visiting Mr. and Mrs. William Phelps Eno at their estate in Connecticut, will return to Washington today.

Blisses to Give Dinner in Honor Of Weddells

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss will entertain at a dinner tomorrow evening at Dumbarton Oaks, their Georgetown estate, in honor of the United States Ambassador to the Argentine and Mrs. Alexander Weddell. Mr. Bliss formerly was this country's envoy to the Argentine.

Mr. and Mrs. Weddell, who are staying at the Anchorage, will return to their estate near Richmond at the end of the week. They will attend the Richmond german Monday evening, returning to Washington shortly afterward to spend the remainder of Mr. Weddell's leave here. They will attend the diplomatic reception at the White House December 15.

This evening the Argentine envoy and Senora de Espil will give a dinner in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Weddell.

In the picture above are Mme. Charles Lucet, wife of the Third Secretary of the French Embassy, and their two children, Jean-Louis and Dominique, who will never have to study French in school. They speak it, of course, like "natives"

Helen Hewes Is Engaged

Of wide interest in Washington is announcement of the engagement of Miss Helen Hewes, daughter of Thomas Hewes, former Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, and F. Kelson Davis, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Kelson Davis, of Hartford, Conn.

Mr. Hewes and his daughter are now residents of Farmington, Conn., where the betrothal was made known yesterday. The bride-elect, well-known in Washington, was graduated from the Ethel Walker School at Simsbury, Conn., and Sarah Lawrence College, Bronxville, N. Y. Her fiance finished Kent School and Williams College and now is an instructor at Kent.

Lucases Here to Find A House for the Winter

Senator-elect Scott W. Lucas, of Illinois, and Mrs. Lucas are guests at the Mayflower while in Washington arranging for the leasing of a house for the Congressional season.

Last season when Mr. Lucas was a member of the House of Representatives they resided at 4500 Broad Branch road.

About The Town

With Dudley Harmon

YESTERDAY, in spite of the weather, Washington society went to:

The home of Mrs. Tracy Dows, where an exhibition of flowers arranged by the famous Constance Spry was on view. Miss Spry, an Englishwoman who took charge of the floral angle for the wedding of the Duke and Duchess of Gloucester, the Duke and Duchess of Windsor and other British notables, makes flowers that look like cloth and makes cloth that looks like flowers. By a special process she puts camelias, gardenias and other blossoms through a wax process which only seems to enhance their beauty and makes them last practically indefinitely.

DUDLEY HARMON.

It was Mrs. Ogden Mills, widow of the former Secretary of the Treasury, who got Mrs. Dows interested in Miss Spry's work. Now the prominent Washington hostess is going into trade to the extent of selling Miss Spry's work in the Capital.

AMONG THOSE who came, saw and decided that the flowers were refreshing after interminable evenings of looking at pink roses and baby's breath, were Mrs. Truxtun Beale, Mrs. James Clement Dunn, and Mme. Wankowicz, wife of the Counselor of the Polish Embassy. Mrs. Dows was assisted during the exhibition by her daughter, Miss Deborah Dows. The flowers will be on view at Mrs. Dows' home on O street in Georgetown from 11 to 4 today and tomorrow.

SOCIETY also found its way yesterday at cocktail time to the Spring Valley home of an attractive Washington couple who prefer anonymity. Here we saw, among others, Robert Buell, of the State Department, chatting with Elsie Ekengren; Mrs. Gale McLean, in a smart beige wool frock, sitting on a sofa with Hugh Cumming, jr., who, with Mrs. Cumming, entertained at dinner last evening; Mr. and Mrs. Mark Sullivan, jr., the former Martha Davidge, the smartest woman there, in a black silk dress, pearl necklace and tricorne hat with a veil; Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Willcox, Laura Tuckerman, all in black; Mrs. John Minter, George Renchard, of the State Department; Mrs. Edward Page and several others.

A GOODLY NUMBER showed up at the Chevy Chase Ice Palace yesterday afternoon for the second meeting of the Washington Ice Club. Among those teetering or twirling about on skates were Jay Pierrepont Moffat, chief of the European division of the State Department; Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Clark, Mrs. Donald Hiss, who is secretary of the new club; Mr. and Mrs. Edward Burling, Mr. and Mrs. Selden Chapin and many another.

THE DINNER HOUR found several members of society gathered at the charming Georgetown home of an attractive Navy couple. They were entertaining in honor of the retiring First Secretary of the German Embassy and Frau Herbert Scholz, who will sail December 14 for a vacation of three months in Germany. On their return Dr. Scholz will serve as consul in Boston. The Scholzes will be farewelled tomorrow afternoon at a party to be given by Dr. Karl Resenberg, First Secretary of the German Embassy, and on Friday afternoon, when Herr and Frau Blankenorhn of the embassy staff, will be hosts in their honor.

Gathered to say good-bye to the couple at the dinner last evening were the former Ambassador to Poland and Mrs. F. Lammot Belin; Mr. and Mrs. Snowden Fahnestock, Commander and Mrs. John Magruder, and one or two others.

PARTY NOTES: Mr. and Mrs. J. Lawrence Houghteling will entertain at a cocktail party December 12 in honor of Arthur Bradley Campbell, of London, and Ralph Snowden Hill has a dinner scheduled for the following evening. Mr. and Mrs. William Lacy will give a cocktail party on Saturday.

Notes of Society

Rear Admiral Harold G. Bowen and Mrs. Bowen, of Washington, are at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel in New York.

Representative and Mrs. Schuyler Otis Bland, of Newport News, Va., are at the Wardman Park Hotel, where they maintain an apartment.

Mrs. William T. Hildrup, jr., has returned to her apartment at the St. Regis in New York after spending two months in Washington.

Mrs. William G. McAdoo, who has been at the Shoreham with former Senator McAdoo for several weeks, left yesterday for San Francisco. Senator McAdoo will join her in several days. They may return for a few days the first of next year, although at present their plans are indefinite.

Mr. and Mrs. Morris Gusdorf have returned from a stay in New York with their son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Revness.

Mr. and Mrs. William B. Wolf entertained at dinner last evening at their residence on Thirty-fourth street.

Mr. and Mrs. Conrad B. Taylor, of Forest Hills, N. Y., are at the Wardman Park Hotel for a visit of several days.

Doll Presentation Planned Today

Mrs. William H. King, vice chairman of the Washington Committee for Near East Refugee Handicraft, and a patroness for the bazaar to be given on Friday by the members of the Goodwill Guild for the benefit of Goodwill Industries, will present a doll in the costume of the Near East to the permanent doll collection of the Goodwill Industries.

The presentation will take place today at 3 o'clock at the Carlton Hotel. Mrs. Blanche Riddle, custodian of the Goodwill collection, will accept the doll on behalf of her organization.

Yule Motif Marks Party Of Holcombs

Stringed Quartet Featured Also at Reception of Marine Commandant

The Commandant of the Marine Corps, Maj. Gen. Thomas Holcomb and Mrs. Holcomb were "At Home" yesterday from 5 to 7 p. m., at their quarters at the Marine Barracks.

The hostess, who with Gen. Holcomb, received the guests in the drawing room of their quarters, was gowned in fuchsia chiffon, floor length and fashioned with panels of grape shade of chiffon down the front of the frock. Long earrings, and a corsage of four white orchids were further accents for her attractive costume.

In the main hall the coming Yule season was heralded by gay poinsettia plants, and the color scheme was further carried out by the red candles in the dining room and the red and pale yellow roses on the tea table. In the drawing room Talisman roses and Easter lilies predominated and through all the rooms floated the music of a string quartet from the Marine Band.

Assisting during the afternoon were Mrs. Herbert Seymour Howard, Mrs. Walter Tuckerman, who wore a royal blue duveteen gown with black accessories; Mrs. Roy S. Geiger, Mrs. A. A. Vandegrift, Mrs. L. B. Stephenson, Mrs. Ezra Allen, Mrs. Cornelius P. Van Ness, who was gowned in silver lame with a wine-colored hat and accessories, and Mrs. Joseph O. Butcher. Mrs. James O. Richardson and Mrs. Joseph Leiter, who had expected to assist, were unable to be present because of illness.

Noted here and there among the guests were Mrs. Harry Grant Meem and Miss Eleanor Meem, both wearing black with accessories to match; Maj. and Mrs. A. A. Gladden, Mrs. Lipscomb White, Col. and Mrs. Thomas Eugene Watson, Capt. A. B. Reed, U. S. N., and Mrs. Reed, Col. and Mrs. Edward W. Sturdevant and Mrs. Benjamin F. Cheatham, who wore a black gown with a touch of green gold lame.

Also there were Col. and Mrs. William Rupertus. Mrs. Rupertus was gowned in gold lame with a thread of wine color through the material, which was matched by her hat and accessories. Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Dion Williams were there, as were Brig. Gen. and Mrs. William P. Upshur, Col. and Mrs. Holland Smith, Col. and Mrs. Maurice E. Shearer, Col. and Mrs. William C. Harllee and Miss Ella Harllee.

White House Party For Diplomats Scheduled Dec. 15

President and Mrs. Roosevelt have issued invitations for the diplomatic reception to be given at the White House on December 15.

Cards are also going out to the Gridiron Widows' party, Mrs. Roosevelt's annual event for wives of members of the Gridiron Club and newspaper women. The latter have been asked to put on the stunts at this year's party, which will take place December 17.

De Los Rios to Give 2 Havana Lectures

The Spanish Ambassador, Dr. Fernando de los Rios, will leave December 16 for Cuba, where he will give two lectures in Havana.

Senorita Laura de los Rios, daughter of the Ambassador and Senora de los Rios, will arrive in Washington December 15 from her studies and teaching at Wellesly College, and will be here through the holidays.

Gives Dinner

Mrs. Cary Langhorne entertained at a small dinner last evening at the 1925 F Street Club. She is staying at the Anchorage.

1938 Styles Recall Bygone Era At Baltimore Bachelor Cotillion

Hooped Skirts and Upswept Coiffures Hold Sway at Old Opera House; Many Washington Debs Among the Dancers

Little changed from the scene of more than 100 years ago, when debutantes danced the polka and minuet, the old Lyric Opera House in Baltimore was the setting last evening for another german of the Baltimore Bachelors Cotillion.

This year's mode of hooped skirts and upswept coiffures brought back some of the glamor of by-gone days to this outstanding event of Baltimore society. The ball was opened as usual with a grand waltz by the debutantes and their partners. The same handsome old brocades hung from the lofty windows, old gold candlelabra shed a becoming light over the dancers, and the Baltimore buds had brought the bouquets presented them and festooned the balconies and boxes with their flowers. Cutting in is not as prevalent at the Cotillion as at other dances; smoking is restricted to certain parts of the theater, and no hard liquor is served.

Debs From Capital Well Represented

Several Washington debs were among the belles who danced the evening gaily away. Miss Adelaide Chatfield-Taylor, slender blonde daughter of the Assistant Secretary of the Treasury and Mrs. Wayne Chatfield-Taylor, wore a gown of white tulle made with a full skirt and tight bodice, and carried a bouquet of gardenias. She attended the ball with her cousins, Mr. and Mrs. John O. Needles.

Miss Patricia Morris, who came from Vassar to attend the dance, had no less than three escorts, Maj. Bruce Cotton, Charles Carroll 3d and Morris Barroll. Her gown was of faille in an eggshell shade made on bouffant style with a shirred bodice, and she carried an old-fashioned bouquet. With her brother, Mrs. George Maurice Morris, she was a member of a dinner party given by Mr. and Mrs. James Dixon Bartlett for their debutante niece, Miss Marjory Bartlett.

Former Representative John Philip Hill gave a dinner before the ball in honor of his daughter, Miss Elise Hill, whose mother is Mrs. Hiram Bingham. The debutante wore a gown of heavy white satin made on princess lines.

Miss Pitney Has Three Escorts

Miss Mary Foster Pitney, who is expected to be presented here this season by her grandmother, Mrs. Mahlon Pitney, was escorted to the dance by Dr. Thomas R. Brown, W. Page Dame, jr., and Dr. I. Ridgeway Trimble. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Shelton Pitney, of Morristown, N. J., and is making her debut in New York this year.

Mrs. Alexander Gordon entertained at a dinner in honor of Miss Margaret Lewis Byrd, a Virginia debutante with Washington connections. Daughter of Thomas Golling Byrd, of Winchester, Va., she is a niece of Mrs. Henry Flood, of the Capital, and has frequently visited her at the Shoreham.

White tulle, which was a favorite among the debs last evening, also was chosen by Miss Lalla Harrison, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. B. Powell Harrison, of Leesburg, Va., and Washington. A corsage of gardenias completed her costume. Before the dance she was among the guests at the dinner given by Mr. and Mrs. Howard Hamilton and Miss Elizabeth Hamilton. Her escorts were her uncle, former Senator and former Governor of Maryland Phillips Lee Goldsborough; Dr. Edmund Kelly and her brother, B. Powell Harrison, jr.

Blond Miss Ann Wilkinson, daughter of Capt. and Mrs. Theodore Wilkinson, and pretty Jacqueline Meredith, debutante daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Payne Meredith, were others who attended the ball. Miss Meredith, who was guest of honor at a dinner given before the dance by Mr. and Mrs. William Neill, wore a starched white chiffon gown embroidered with rhinestones and made with a very full skirt and a tight bodice. She carried a bouquet of American beauty roses. Miss Meredith is related to the Snowden and Bowie families and is a descendant of Lord Fairfax.

An attractive New Yorker who has been a Capital visitor over the week-end as the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Distler was also at the dance. She is Miss Mary Jane Cuddihy, whose partners were John Cyrus Distler and Roswell Parker. Mr. Distler gave a dinner at the Belvedere in honor of Miss Cuddihy.

Mrs. G. C. Thorpe Will Give Teas

Mrs. George C. Thorpe has issued invitations to the first of a series of teas which she will give during the winter at her home, 3218 Woodley road. The party will take place on Sunday afternoon. Assisting the hostess will be her daughter, Mrs. William Powell, who, with her husband, is here for a fortnight's visit from their home in Minneapolis.

Mrs. Thorpe entertained at a luncheon on Sunday, at which Mme. Fotitch, wife of the Yugoslav Minister, and the Czech-Slovak Minister and Mme. Hurban were the ranking guests. Others in the company were Senator and Mrs. Arthur Vandenberg, Mr. and Mrs. Merle Thorpe, Mr. and Mrs. Carlton Holdrege, Col. Frank Morrow, Charles Mason Remey and Mr. and Mrs. Powell.

Dr. Lady to Wed Dorothy Dean On Saturday

Miss Dorothy Dean, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Madison Dean, has completed arrangements for her wedding to Dr. David Franklin Lady, son of Dr. and Mrs. George Webster Lady, on Saturday.

The ceremony will take place at the Metropolitan Baptist Church at 4 o'clock. Mrs. J. Meigs Brearley, sister of the prospective bridegroom, will be matron of honor.

Other bridal attendants will include Mrs. Harold W. Lady and Mrs William H. Clements. Harold W. Lady will serve as best man for his brother and ushers will be J. Meigs Brearley, Dr. William H. Clements, William J. Van Schreeven and Earl Gosnell, all of Washington.

Among those who have entertained in honor of Dr. Lady and the bride-elect are the parents of the prospective bridegroom, Mr. and Mrs. J. Meigs Brearley, Dr. and Mrs. William H. Clements, Mr. and Mrs. William Van Schreeven and Mr. and Mrs. Harold W. Lady.

Edith Pearson Plans Luncheon

Miss Edith Pearson will entertain at a luncheon December 23 at the Chevy Chase Club in honor of the Misses Mary Jane Rust and Mary Alice White, two popular debutantes of the season.

Miss Pearson, who is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Pearson, is being included in many of the debutante activities this year, but will not formally make her bow until next season.

PERFUMES

of enchanting fragrances

Joyously received and most especially treasured if the fragrance chosen is one of our many exclusive perfumes. In all, we have a surprisingly choice selection of the best known makes in our Perfume department . . . thoughtfully varied to yield the refreshingly light scents as well as the more exotic odeurs. Handsomely bottled, or your fancy may turn to the many little novelty packages so new this season. Our Revillon perfume, the Carnet de Bal fragrance comes in two sizes; another lovely bottle is by Prince George of Russia, Tiara; still another by Ceph, Saint Jean d'ete, the charming midsummer night perfume. Caron's new size of Nuit de Noel; and Caron's Bellodgia. Fascinating, too, is Patou's selection. and the perfumes by Guerlain and Lucien Lelong.

Mrs. Seton Reports to Pen Women

Plans Art Exhibit And Round Table of Letters; League to Join in 2 Projects

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

Grace Thompson Seton, author and explorer, who spent last summer abroad, yesterday presented to the board of the National League of American Pen Women the findings of her latest foreign expedition—this time in the realm of art and letters rather than of jungle adventures.

Mrs. Seton, a past president of the league and now its chairman of awards, heads a special committee from the International Council of Women, co-operating with the United States National Council, in arranging for an international woman's art exhibit next October and is also planning an international Round Table of Letters for May 25, as part of the Institute of Leadership sponsored by the National Council. Both are being held in connection with the New York World's Fair . . . the Institute on the fairgrounds and the art exhibit at the Riverside Museum.

The National League of American Pen Women, of which Audrey Wurdemann (Mrs. Joseph Auslander) is president, at its board meeting yesterday in the Willard Hotel signified its interest in co-operating in both projects. Miss Wurdemann and another representative of the Pen Women, to be named later, will participate in the round table of letters which Mrs. Seton will conduct. Other nationally recognized literary societies will be invited to send representatives and the National Councils of Women in 34 foreign countries will be asked to send a resume of the work of from 10 to 20 of their leading women writers with biographical material and photographs.

Material to Form Permanent Collection

These will be placed after the close of the institute, in the Biblioteca Femina in the Deering Library of Northwestern University," said Mrs. Seton, explaining that this is a compilation of 100 best books written by American women in the years 1833-1933. This data she compiled for the International Writers' Conclave she conducted in 1933 for the Century of Progress in Chicago.

She has also sent letters to presidents of the councils in foreign countries, asking them to select pictures by outstanding women artists to be included in the exhibition. This is to be held under the direction of the art committee of the U. S. Council, of which Mrs. Louis Horch, of New York, is chairman.

Following the meeting of the board there was a luncheon for the members. Among those present, in addition to Mrs. Seton and Miss Wurdemann, were Mrs. Florence Hamilton, of New York, editor of the Bulletin; Mrs. Lillian Gaddes, of Baltimore, registrar; Mrs. Harry Cunningham, of Washington, first vice president; Mrs. May West Owen, of Denver, fourth vice president; Mrs. Marion Needham Taft, of Takoma Park, treasurer; Mrs. Claudia Rice Scott, of Washington, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Josephine Chandler Horner, of Illinois, now a resident of the District; Miss Marguerite Merigold, State president for the District; Miss Clara Manderschied, treasurer; Mrs. Mabel Pittle, executive secretary; Mrs. Edna Knight Gasch, parliamentarian; Mrs. Leila Pier King, chairman of membership; Mrs. Mathilde Kolb Bartlett, chaplain, all of the District, and Mrs. Inez Sheldon Tyler, president of the D. C. Branch.

Mrs. Chandler, assisted by Mrs. Ruth Snodgrass, soprano presented a program on Kashmir last evening at the family night dinner of the local branch, which many of the national officers attended.

New Book on Indo-China Out

Mrs. Seton, who has equal skill in organizing women's clubs and jungle expeditions, has written a book, just out in England under the title of "Poisoned Arrows," dealing with her explorations in Indo-China. It is included in the Travel Book Club of W. & G. Foyle Ltd., and will published in this country in the spring.

She left last night for Philadelphia, where she will stop on her way to her home in Connecticut. She expects to leave the day after Christmas, by motor, for New Orleans. There she will spend the winter writing—working on her autobiography, completing a book dealing with her adventures hunting bats for the Field Museum in the Philippines and "brushing up" her first novel written several years ago.

Cripples' High School Urged by P.-T. A. Aide

Teachers for Those Kept at Home by Affliction Also Is Objective of Mrs. Hanley, Long Active in Work

By Christine Sadler

Until the crippled children of Washington have their own high school and all who cannot leave their homes have teachers, Mrs. M. Joseph Hanley, chairman of physically handicapped work for the District Congress of Parents and Teachers, will not be happy.

She has headed this phase of P.-T. A. service to the community for nine years and took the lead in having Weightman School assigned to use of handicapped youngsters when its use as a regular school was discontinued. She saw the first boys and girls brought in for their classes.

MRS. HANLEY

Their response convinced her of the worthwhileness of the venture—and she still has the conviction.

"Put several crippled children together and the atmosphere becomes normal. I'm very much in favor of transporting all who are able to schools where they can be with others like themselves," she declares.

Other Agencies Give Assistance

Several other agencies have lightened the work of the P.-T. A. with the crippled children. Especially does the Kiwanis Club deserve credit, in the opinion of Mrs. Hanley. And this year the health department eased the load again when it established a dental clinic at the school. In other years, the children have been taken to see the dentist.

When the children are taken to Children's Hospital for clinic treatment Fridays, Mrs. Hanley is there in the capacity of record keeper for the physiotherapist.

During the nine years she had learned almost enough to be a visiting nurse. She probably does more actual social service work, in the usual sense of the word, than any other of the P.-T. A. chairmen.

Children Prepared For Active Careers

Children who started out at Weightman School when it opened its doors to cripples are now grown up and some of them are working. Thanks to Mrs. Hanley and her associates, some have found their way into the professions.

The P.-T. A.'s physically handicapped division also has access to a limited fund used to buy glasses for children who could not otherwise afford them. This year it has bought 12 pairs. Also, it keeps in touch with the Health School and the sight conservation work at Henry School—and helps there if needed and called upon.

Mrs. Hanley is a native of Washington. Both she and her husband were students at old Weightman School, which her son later attended and where she entered P.-T. A. work. Later, she was a P.-T. A. member and the president at Gordon Junior High School and a home and school association member at Western High School. Today her son is in his second year at the United States Naval Academy and she has moved her P.-T. A. membership to Langdon School.

25 Attend Luncheon Of Big Sisters Group

The Big Sister group of the Florence Crittenton Home met yesterday afternoon for luncheon at the home of Mrs. Fred Mitchell, 2416 Thirty-ninth place. Mrs. Fred Umham and Mrs. John E. Chase were joint hostesses and about 25 attended.

Mrs. Gertrude Bowling, head of the Instructive Visiting Nurses, was guest speaker, and Miss Jean Cole, superintendent of the home, and Mrs. Reba Barrett Smith, of Alexandria, daughter of the founder, were among those present.

The board of the home will meet Friday afternoon at the institution, 4759 Reservoir road.

Mme. Sladek to Talk

The Tuesday Evening Dinner Group of the Business and Professional Women's Department of the Young Women's Christian Association will have its annual Christmas dinner at 6:30 p. m. today with Mme. Jaromil Sladek as guest speaker. She will talk on "An Evening in Czech-Slovakia," giving a description of her homeland and some of its Christmas customs.

MISS JESSIE McQUEEN, home service counselor in the American Gas Association, in New York, will address the Home Economics Association Thursday night at a dinner meeting to be held at the clubhouse of the American Association of University Women.

MISS McQUEEN

Miss McQueen maintains a clearing office for information on home service work carried on by gas utilities in the United States and Canada. This brings her into contact with 500 companies maintaining home service departments, the directors and assistants of which total 1,200 women.

Miss Mary Mason, 1915 R street northwest, is in charge of reservations for the dinner.

MRS. HAROLD L. ICKES, wife of the Secretary of the Interior, was honored at the Monday tea of the American Association of University Women yesterday afternoon, at which members of the Smith College Club were guests. Mrs. Robert Burgess, a Smith alumna, was chairman of the hostess committee, assisted by other Smith alumnae in the A. A. U. W. She and Mrs. Robert Olesen, president of the Washington Branch of the A. A. U. W., received with the guest of honor.

Those who poured included Mrs. William Chapin Huntington, Mrs. F. M. Savage, Mrs. John Guider, Mrs. Emory Scott Land, Miss Isabel Blake, Mrs. Karl Fenning, Mrs. Howard G. Nichols, Mrs. Frank Smith and Miss Ann Dahlman, Mrs. Ickes' sister.

Others assisting were Dr. Anna Marie Ketcham, Mrs. Camille LeFebvre, Mrs. Frank A. Smith, Miss Emma B. Hawks, Mrs. Kenneth Holland, Mrs. Paul L. Kirby, Mrs. Luke I. Wilson, Miss Ruth Van Deman and Mrs. Howard P. Vermilya.

A NEW French-English skit, "The Sightseers," entertained guests at Montmartre Noctambule Saturday night. It was written by Felian Garzia, who, with Mme. Garzia, their nephew, Bernard Garzia, and Mme. Germaine Johnson, took part. It showed Americans from a small town seeing Paris.

THE LAST monthly luncheon meeting of the 1938 season was held yesterday by the Motor Corps of the D. C. Chapter, American Red Cross. Earl A. Nash, chairman of the public relations committee of the chapter, was introduced by Mrs. Howard R. Krinbill, chairman of the corps, as guest speaker.

Among those present were Mrs. Karl Schmitt and Mrs. L. E. Harris, vice chairmen; Miss Gertrude Aldrich, Miss Helen Aldrich, Mrs. Sam Broadbent, Mrs. H. G. Brunsman, Mrs. Frances King Cooke, Mrs. Albert Eastwood, Mrs. Eugene N. Foss, Mrs. Z. J. Hendrick, Mrs. W. D. Harris, Mrs. Fanny Ingram, Miss Kay Joerissen, Mrs. O. J. Jordan, Mrs. Robert E. Lee, jr., Mrs. William Luckett, Mrs. Blanche Mackenzie, Mrs. E. H. McCrahon, Mrs. Frederick Neithamer, Mrs. Violet E. Palmer, Mrs. Richard L. Poor, Mrs. Kenneth Sullivan, Mrs. W. W. Wheeler.

THE WASHINGTON CHAPTER of the National Home for Jewish Children is making plans for its third annual dance to be given Sunday at the Raleigh Hotel.

THE CHRISTMAS SEASON, as usual, brings giving to the fore. Members of Alpha Gamma Delta Sorority will be entertained Thursday at a Christmas party at the home of Mrs. Lester E. Boykin, 2825 Albemarle street northwest, each bringing a toy for a boy. The sorority supports two summer camps for children, one in Canada and the other in Michigan, and the toys will be for children who have attended these camps.

PEGGY PARKER will entertain Chi Omega Alumnae at their regular "first Tuesday" supper meeting tonight at her home, 3406 Garfield street northwest, at 6:15, with Julia Barnes as chairman. The alumnae will entertain members of the active chapter at George Washington and will receive donations for their Christmas family. Hostesses assisting will include Marty Cherry, Hylda Russell, Joyce Killingsworth, Betty Durham, Verna Young, Gertrude Phillips, Mrs. Feiser, Helen Everitt, Barbara Watson and Dona Hayes.

Policy Boys Club Auxiliary to Hear First Lady Speak

Mrs. Roosevelt, honorary president of the Woman's Auxiliary to the Metropolitan Police Boys' Club, will be guest of honor and speaker Saturday at a luncheon to be given by the auxiliary in the small ballroom of the Raleigh Hotel.

Miss Mae Helm, active president, will preside and Mrs. John Allan Daugherty, honorary vice president, who was responsible for starting the auxiliary more than 18 months ago, also will be present.

Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, jr., wife of the Secretary of the Treasury, is to be one of the guests at the luncheon, as is James E. Colliflower, president of the Metropolitan Police Boys Club. Maj. Ernest W. Brown, founder and vice president, will be there and will tell of the work carried on among the boys of Washington, showing motion pictures of the summer camp, where hundreds of them enjoy vacations. The projector he will use has been provided by the auxiliary.

Yule Party Is Staged By Sunshine Society

The Sunshine and Community Society met yesterday at 2460 Sixteenth street northwest at 1:30 p. m. The meeting was a Christmas party, at which members presented their gifts for the women residing at the Georgetown Home. Christmas music and readings were the program which was in charge of Mrs. William Reed, Mrs. Marie Deal and Mrs. Harry Reed.

The hostesses alternating at the tea table and assisting in the dining room were Mrs. F. E. Waring, Mrs. W. W. Taylor, Mrs. John B. Morrey, Mrs. George Cook, Mrs. George W. Rose, jr., Mrs. Jefferson Davis, Mrs. Alex Heron, Mrs. A. Natalie Desio, Mrs. W. W. Wahly, Mrs. J. Noble Hoover, Mrs. E. S. Henry, Mrs. Edwin Detwiler, Mrs. James Underwood and Mrs. D. P. Bush.

G. O. P. Women Hear Mrs. Gann

The League of Republican Women yesterday afternoon held its December meeting at the Mayflower Hotel with its new president, Mrs. Edward E. Gann, presiding for the first time. Mrs. Gann was elected by the board to fill the unexpired term of Mme. Cantacuzene, who resigned because of her health.

As she assumed office, Mrs. Gann paid tribute to Mrs. Virginia White Speel, founder of the league and its first president, who was among those present, and to Mme. Cantacuzene for her work in opening the headquarters at 1301 Seventeenth street northwest, with money in the treasury to cover the rent two years ahead.

Mrs. Gann declined to accept the office when it was first suggested she take the presidency, and later said, "I had been on the firing line of the Republican Party all my life, and this is no time for a good Republican to loaf on the job. We are not only going to defeat the New Deal; we are going to put a good reliable Republican at the head of this Government."

She recalled, in a brief reference, her "devotion to a big brother"—the late former Vice President Charles Curtis—whose career in politics brought her to Washington. She pointed to the opposition felt by farmers in Kansas, her native State, to the destruction of domestic farm products and importation of those from foreign countries, and to the billions of dollars of debt accumulated under the "New Deal experiments."

Mrs. George R. Hemphill, president of the Pennsylvania State Council of Republican Women, who was guest speaker, told of the work which brought about Republican victory at the recent election in her State, remarking that "the hand that rocks the cradle rules the world, and that same hand spanked the Democrats in Pennsylvania."

She referred to herself as "a small town housewife," but presented a business-like picture of the state-wide organization which she heads. "From each national defeat, the party has emerged more united and stronger," she said, adding that the Pennsylvania Woman's Council had "doubled its membership since the party has been out of power for the first time in 40 years."

Buster Bear Entertains

When dignity becomes upset
The neighbors laugh and won't forget.
—Old Mother Nature.

As you know Buster Bear is one of the big people of the Green Forest. While he is inclined to shuffle when he walks, and to appear awkward there are other times when he has considerable dignity. Just why I don't know but it is true that we expect dignity in big people. Large size and dignity seem to go together.

Blacky the Crow sat in the top of a tall tree some distance from the pond of Paddy the Beaver. He was wondering where he would find a good breakfast this cold morning. "I don't see," muttered Blacky, "why it is that a fellow is hungrier in cold weather than in warm weather. When food is hardest to find I want more of it. I don't see why that is. It seems to me that Mother Nature made a mistake when she made food scarce at just the very time we are hungriest."

You see Blacky, being just a bird, didn't understand that it was food that made him warm in cold weather. He probably would have told you that it was his coat of black feathers that made him warm. A lot of people would tell you the same thing. His black coat helps keep him warm, but it doesn't make warmth. It just keeps the warmth in his body, but it is food that makes warmth. If he could find no food at all he would be likely to freeze to death before he could starve to death. So in winter the need of food to make him warm makes him hungry most of the time. It is the same way with other people of the Green Meadows and the Green Forest, those who do not go away where the weather is warm or sleep through the winter.

Blacky's eyes are keen. There is little going on about him that he misses. Eyes that must find food in winter must be keen. Looking over the tops of lower trees to Paddy's pond he saw something black moving among the trees on the other side of the pond. Presently Buster Bear stepped out on the shore.

"I thought so," muttered Blacky. "I wonder what he expects to find. He ought to be asleep this cold weather. I do believe he is going over to Paddy's house. I wonder if he can break into it."

This was an exciting thought and Blacky flew over to a tall pine tree almost on the edge of the pond and in line with Paddy's house. He could look right down on it. What is more, from that height he could look down right through the clear ice that covered the pond. There wasn't much to see. It looked simply black until suddenly Buster Bear, standing up by Paddy's house, struck it a hard blow. Then Buster Bear sprang forward as if jumping on something and Blacky saw somewhat dimly two forms moving under the ice. He recognized them at once. They were Paddy and Mrs. Paddy swimming out from the house, probably frightened by Buster Bear on the roof.

Such a sight was nothing new to Blacky. Often had he flown over the water when it was smooth and looking down had seen swimmers below the surface. He had watched the Beavers swim under water, and Billy Mink and Jerry Muskrat and Little Joe Otter. And before this he had seen some of them through clear ice. So there was nothing surprising to him in this glimpse of Paddy and Mrs. Paddy. It was Buster Bear who was surprised and who was surprising.

When Paddy and then Mrs. Paddy appeared almost under him Buster forgot that they were under the ice. He forgot all about the ice. It looked as if he could put his paw right on one of them. He leaped and struck and leaped again. It was very funny. He still didn't seem to realize just what the trouble was. He was excited. He was too excited to do any thinking. He followed along on the ice above the swimmers, jumping at them, striking at them, snarling and growling, all dignity lost.

"Caw, caw, caw!" laughed Blacky the Crow. "Caw, caw, caw!" The sight of great big Buster Bear acting so foolishly was almost as good as a breakfast. "Caw, caw, caw!" laughed Blacky.

Sacred Heart Turkey Dinner Tomorrow

Annual Affair Also on Thursday; 3,300 Lbs. Served Last Year

The annual turkey dinner of the Sacred Heart Church is to be held tomorrow and Thursday of this week. For years this dinner has stood out as one of the most popular dinners to be served by a church organization in the city, attracting nearly 2,000 patrons to each.

The preparation and serving of this dinner for such a large number of people has been reduced to a system by the 250 workers, so there is no confusion. Last year over 3,300 pounds of turkey were served besides all the other articles of food that go with such a dinner.

In the preparation of this dinner the various committees are headed by Mrs. William Morris, Mrs. Martin McDonald, Mrs. William McCarthy, Mrs. Frank DeFontes, Mrs. Margaret Neligan, Mrs. Charles Curtin, Mrs. Robert Cotton, George Trapp, Miss Martha Callan, Miss Annie Cooksey, W. Francis Scott, Miss Bessie Doson, Miss Betty Degnan.

Dinner will be served in the parish hall of the Sacred Heart Church at Sixteenth street and Park road. Thirty-one hostesses under the direction of Miss Josephine McDonald and ninety-three waitresses under the direction of Miss Frances McDonald will take care of the guests.

Among the hostesses will be Mrs. R. T. Regan, Mrs. Reiman Chesley, Mrs. Fred Martin, Miss Mary Ellery, Miss Marjorie Emery, Mrs. Josephine Holland, Miss Blanche Cooksey, Mrs. John Earley, Mrs. Louis P. Gatti, Mrs. Katherine Hannon, Mrs. Lynch Younger, Mrs. Frank Kennedy, Mrs. Mary Waldron, Miss Maud Murphy, Mrs. Joseph Dowdall, Miss Verona Walton, Mrs. Clarence Lee, Mrs. George Mihm, Mrs. Wilfred Burgan, Miss Katherine Gaegler, Mrs. Fleming, Mrs. Carroll McGuire, Miss Catherine Flynn, Mrs. J. Milton Penny, Mrs. Ida Fitzgibbons, Mrs. Mary Knight, Mrs. Mary McDonough, Mrs. C. Stouffer and Mrs. Harry Crandall.

Billion Needed For Hospitals, Dr. Falk Says

Denies U. S. Health Program Constitutes Socialized Medicine

The $850,000,000 health program recommended by the President's Technical Committee on Medical Care is not a move for socialized medicine, but "an effort to make medicine more nearly social," Dr. I. S. Falk, of the Social Security Board, declared yesterday.

Speaking before the monthly meeting of the Council of Social Agencies, Dr. Falk appealed for a comparison of the country's present health program "with what we know we can do, rather than what other countries are doing or what we were doing 20 years ago.

In the expansion of preventive health services, he said, "we must appropriate enough to do the job, not just start it." This may require an expenditure of about $2 per capita a year, he conceded, "but it's not really a frightening sum."

A new capital outlay of $1,000,000,000 is necessary to bring the Nation's hospital facilities up to adequate standards, he said, listing 180,000 additional beds in general hospitals, 50,000 in tuberculosis institutions and 80,000 for mental diseases as minimum requirements for a program to be spread out over ten years. "We spent more than $100,000,000 a year on hospitals prior to 1929," he pointed out, "but during the depression we have accumulated a serious deficiency."

A gradual expansion of direct medical services, evolved by State governments in co-operation with Federal agencies, would eventually mean annual expenditure of $400,000,000 for the care of 20,000,000 Americans now dependent on Government aid or private charity, and 20,000,000 more above the relief level but "medically needy," he said.

Reviewing objectives of the District health program, Dr. Robert Olesen, Assistant Surgeon General, called for full-time officials to supervise intensified efforts to reduce the toll here of cancer, tuberculosis, pneumonia, mental diseases and diphtheria, each ailment to be considered as a separate administrative field.

"We need at least three health centers, each affiliated with a medical school," he said. "And we should start with decent quarters for our health personnel. If they really invoked the law, they would dispossess themselves."

He also recommended an advisory health council, "with physicians in the minority."

BACKACHE, LEG PAINS MAY BE DANGER SIGN

Of Tired Kidneys

If backache and leg pains are making you miserable, don't just complain and do nothing about them. Nature may be warning you that your kidneys need attention.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking excess acids and poisonous waste out of the blood. Most people pass about 3 pints a day or about 3 pounds of waste.

Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning shows there may be something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

If the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters don't work well, poisonous waste matter stays in the blood. These poisons may start nagging backaches, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness.

Don't wait. Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from the blood. Get Doan's Pills.

Scalzo Knocks Out Archibald; Boyd Wins in 7th

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

I know what you're asking: "What happened to the Redskins?"

Well, don't breathe a word, and this is strictly between you and me, understand? But I am in a position to tell you exactly what happened to the Redskins at New York the other day.

POVICH.

What happened was this:

The Washington Redskins were defeated by the New York Giants by a score of 36 to 0.

Of course not everybody is asking "What happened to the Redskins?" Some folks are inquiring simply, "What was the matter with the Redskins?"

I can answer that one, too. The matter with the Redskins was the New York Giants.

The Redskins tossed a farewell luncheon for themselves yesterday at one of the better eating places. It was one of the few things they have thrown recently which was not intercepted.

There is a scurrilous report going the rounds that those Redskins who played the Giants Sunday were picked to win by Povich. That is not true. Povich picked the Redskins to win, but he did not pick those Redskins. I still think George Marshall ran his Redskin swing band in against the Giants and let his athletes do the tooting.

I am beginning to be annoyed by the folks who can't seem to get straightened out on the difference between the professional and the college football rules. Particularly after all that has been printed about them. Now some guy has written in asking: "How far behind the scrimmage line does a Redskin have to stand to throw a pass to a Giant?".

Let this be the last time that particular question is answered in this space. Once and for all let this be understood: A Redskin can stand at any point behind the line of scrimmage and throw a pass to a Giant.

Speaking of throwing passes, the Giants threw ten and caught ten on Sunday. They caught few of their own and six of the Redskins'.

The loyalty of the Redskins' rooters was magnificent, even after what happened at the Polo Grounds. One faithful follower, his collar askew, his hat crumpled and his legs a bit unsteady as he detrained in Washington, was still waving a Redskin pennant and shouting: "Bad officiating beat us!"

Incidentally, the Redskins weren't completely beaten Sunday. They won the toss.

Hank Soar scored the first touchdown with a 43-yard gallop and began to overshadow the rest of the Giants. Then Ward Cuff and Chuck Gelatka began to act as if they were soar.

And now look what comes in the mail. Some guy wants to know: "How many times in a series of downs can the Redskins fumble the ball?" To the best of my knowledge the Redskins can fumble only once in a series of downs, barring the miracle, of course, that they recover their own fumble.

The Redskins might as well have been in the hands of the Four Powers at Munich as on the gridiron against the Giants. They couldn't have been taken apart any more completely and it would have been physically painless.

The chief trouble was that the Giants insisted on Anschluss with the Redskins' passes.

The mail is still coming in. A disgusted subscriber, who didn't like the Monday morning reading about the Redskins, says he was amazed at the 36-0 defeat by the Giants. "How could the Redskins slip so far?" he asks.

Slip, my eye. They were pushed.

"Professional Football is Better Football" was the title of a recent magazine article by George Preston Marshall. And the Giants proved it for him.

I regret exceedingly that this department's Monday morning article said, unqualifiedly, that the Redskins were made chumps of. I did not mean to end a sentence with a preposition.

New York's Champ Stopped in Second

Italian Unleashes Series of Right Hooks to Drop Rhode Islander; Featherweight Title Not at Stake

By the Associated Press.

New York, Dec. 5.—Pete Scalzo, young slugger from New York's West Side, knocked out Joey Archibald, the New York State recognized world's featherweight champion, with a series of smashing right hooks in two rounds of a ten-round nontitle bout at the St. Nicholas Arena tonight. Scalzo scaled 127¼ and Archibald 124½.

Before a near sellout crowd of 3,500, largely partisan in his favor, Scalzo uncorked his right hand early in the second round and dropped the little fellow from Pawtucket, R. I., three times before Referee Jimmy Crowley counted him out at 2:10 of the round.

The easy triumph for the local Italian walloper gave a hard push to his campaign for a featherweight title shot. For Joey, who went down and out when the third right hook landed just in front of his ear in the second round, the kayo did no good to his hopes of universal title recognition.

The New York State Commission named him titleholder after he defeated Mike Belloise some months ago, but the National Boxing Association decided to withhold recognition until after he had met the winner of a bout between Freddy Miller and Leo Rodak. These three had been designated as outstanding among the 127 pounders after Henry Armstrong relinquished the crown some months ago. Now, however, Pete Scalzo, under the management of Pete Reilly, figured in the Washington featherweight elimination tournament at Griffith Stadium the past summer, losing a decision to Tony Dupre.

Entering the ring as the favorite to beat Dupre, Scalzo was adjudged the loser in a close battle. Reilly vigorously protested the decision and sought a reversal. He threatened never to bring one of his fighters to Washington again.

Managing a featherweight champion would be no new experience for Reilly, known as "the Silver Fox" of pugilism. Andre Routis, Bat Battalino and Freddie Miller, former feather champions of the world, were piloted to their titles by Reilly.

Skibos Voted Best in East; Win Trophy

Beat Holy Cross by 4-1 in Balloting For '38 Lambert Grid Award

New York, Dec. 5.—Carnegie Tech was officially proclaimed winner today of the 1938 August V. Lambert Memorial Trophy award which symbolizes the 1938 college football championship of the East.

The Tartans' victory wasn't even a close one, according to the vote tallies of noted sports writers and commentators who selected the winner. They gave Carnegie a 4-to-1 runaway victory over its nearest rival, Holy Cross, with Pittsburgh a close third.

Coincident with this announcement was a statement that Coach Bill Kern and Athletic Director Clarence "Buddy" Overend, of the Pittsburgh Skibos, will arrive in New York City tomorrow morning to attend the Lambert award dinner the same evening at the New York World's Fair Terrace Club. The Tartan grid mentors will check into the Hotel Vanderbilt.

Plans have been made for a gala turnout at the Terrace Club, where Christy Walsh, director of World's Fair sports activities, and John Reilly, special events director, will join with Grover Whalen, president of the fair corporation and chairman of the trophy trustees, in welcoming Carnegie Tech's football representatives.

The celebration is to be the high spot of a busy week for Kern and Overend, who are working feverishly to polish the Carnegie Tartans into perfect football machinery preparatory to the Sugar Bowl game at New Orleans next January 2 against Texas Christian University's eleven.

Praise, meanwhile, is pouring into Lambert trophy headquarters for its choice of the '38 victors. Typical was a message from Lou Little, Columbia grid coach, who said:

"Pay respects to Bill Kern, Clarence Overend and Carnegie Tech football squad. They surely did a swell job and are worthy of the honor you are presenting them. Tell them the Columbia football squad extends congratulations as well."

Picture of a Fighter in Throes of a Knockout

Buck Everett Knocked Out By Ex-Sailor

End Comes as Crowd Howls for 'Kill' With Fighters Reeling About Ring

By Lewis F. Atchison.

A jagged tear in his forehead—his face a butchered, misshapen mass of gory protoplasm, Buck Everett succumbed to cold, merciless punching of young Bill Boyd in the seventh round of a scheduled 10-round bout last night at the arena.

Everett was counted out after 2 minutes and 5 seconds of a seventh round as savage as its predecessors, but not before giving the lie to vicious rumors that Boyd would find him an easy mark. If Everett was supposed to bow out early last night he crossed up somebody.

It was easily the most dramatic bout waged in these precincts since boxing was legalized in Washington. Boyd, an 11-5 favorite, found himself knee deep in hot water and showered with leather after his carefully mapped plans for an early knockout went astray.

Persistent reports that Boyd would find the veteran an easy, fragile target were exploded as early as the third round when Everett, lulled into a semicoma by vicious left hooks to the head, not only refused to fall but doggedly traded punches with his youthful adversary as they stood toe-to-toe in the center of the ring.

Everett Collapses

Everett did not go down from a punch, but collapsed while standing a yard from his opponent after swinging back wildly—but not without effect, in a last-round mixup. He fell on his side, rolled over on his back and tried to come back to a kneeling posture as Referee Harry Volkman started the fatal count.

Volkman reached six before Buck stirred, but when the referee reached eight he was groping blindly with his soggy glove, trying to rise and resume the fight.

He managed to regain an erect posture immediately after Volkman reached 10, and swaying on rubbery legs implored the referee to let him continue.

Boyd was unmarked by the melee, but his confidence was visibly shaken and his chagrin noticeable. He, too, seemed physically exhausted about the fifth round as Everett, boxing masterfully and conserving his energy, squared the fight. But the vitality of youth coursing through Boyd's neat frame restored the punch to his heavy hands in the seventh, or enough of it to outpunch the fading veteran.

Beginning of End

Everett was reeling as early as the third round when Boyd connected with a stinging left hook, but his ring generalship enabled him to not only weather the storm, but blast Boyd with several stiff rights that shook up the former gob. A surprised, startled stare shone in Boyd's eyes as Everett survived his famed knockout blow and waded in punching.

They stood toe-to-toe and slugged, Boyd scoring first with a crunching left hook, followed by a looping right to the jaw. Everett, stunned by the blows, fell into a clinch. His knees rattled together, but his fighting heart refused to quit. He was out on his feet, peering blindly through a mental mist, and fighting as if life itself depended on it.

And when Boyd's whip-like punches failed to produce the desired result, the sailor faded perceptibly as Everett clubbed him with blows born of desperation and forced him to retreat and cover. And after they fell into a clinch they came back with the same buzz-saw brand of punching. They wobbled around the ring firing leather at every step as the throng yelled itself hoarse for a knockout—it didn't care which.

A beautiful exhibition of slipping punches saved Everett in the fourth when Boyd again staggered him with a left to the head, and exploded a right flush on the jaw. Boyd saw his quarry waving defenseless arms at him, bounding around the ring like an empty keg on choppy waters, but he couldn't hit the target with the finishing punch.

The Preliminaries

Everett retreated and pulled his head out of the way of at least four punches—any one of which would have ended the bout had it connected.

Billy Banks, 128½, avenged an old score with Marcus Pitts, 128¼, in a spirited brawl that had the fans on edge throughout, winning by a split decision. Pitts set a furious pace and might have won but for the loss of four points deducted for wrestling tactics.

Frankie Willis, 146, again displayed a glaring need of coaching in winning a unanimous verdict over Pete Lasic, 142¾, of Baltimore. Willis had his opponent out on his feet in the third round but couldn't put him away.

El Brookman, 154¾, obviously out of condition and overweight, made a game stand against Carl Dell, who spotted the District boy 10 pounds and won in a walk.

One of the most promising young heavyweights ever exhibited here popped up in the person of Howard Landgraff (192) of Baltimore, who outpointed Don Koons (178¾) in a bruising six-round semifinal.

Lou Gevinson, southpaw puncher who has become a stranger to the duelling pit since losing to Norment Quarles, will essay another comeback Monday night against Pete Galiano, of Baltimore. The pair will manufacture the main 10-round engagement of Messrs. Turner and Ahearn's weekly ring program.

Armstrong Stops Foe

Referee Halts Fight; Lou Ambers Victor; Krieger, Sarron Win

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, Dec. 5.—Hammerin' Henry Armstrong scored a technical knockout over Al Manfredo, of San Francisco, in the third round tonight to defend his world welterweight championship before 12,724 fans.

Referee Tony Labranch stopped the bout at 1:45 of the third round.

Manfredo was helpless through the second and third rounds and was wobbling badly and completely defenseless when Labranch stepped between them.

The terrific pace set by Armstrong wore Manfredo out early in the second round and the San Franciscan did not throw a punch in the third.

Solly Krieger, National Boxing Association champion from Brooklyn, N. Y., punched out a bloody victory over game Carmen Barth, of Cleveland, in an overweight bout.

The durable Krieger gained a long lead in the middle rounds, when every blow he swung seemed to take effect. Krieger weighed 163½ and Barth 163¼.

They started slow and even in the first round. Barth took the second when he stunned Krieger with a long right. Barth's flicking left jab kept working, but Krieger's hard in-punching took the third round. Barth's nose spurted blood.

Barth, squinting bravely through his bad eye, kept swinging through the fifth and sixth, but again Krieger's heavier blows told the tale.

Barth was a bloody, easy target as Krieger took the seventh, and they slowed down a bit. Both fighters appeared tired in the even eighth.

Barth was forced to hold on in the ninth, but they swung toe to toe in the tenth with Krieger having the best of it.

Lou Ambers, former lightweight champion, from Herkimer, N. Y., won a technical knockout over veteran Frankie Wallace, of Cleveland, when Wallace failed to answer the bell for the seventh round. Wallace was forced to quit because of an injured right hand.

It had been an even fight up to the finish. Wallace, forcing the fight, took two of the first four rounds and two were even. Ambers, slow in starting, easily won the fifth and sixth with sharp-shooting lefts and rights to the chin.

Former Lightweight Champion Benny Leonard was the third man in the ring. Ambers weighed 136¾ and Wallace 139½.

Petey Sarron, former featherweight king from Birmingham, Ala., gave Cleveland Golden Gloves grad Mike Gamiere a fancy boxing lesson in the first of the 10-rounders.

Sarron took six of the ten rounds, losing the first on a foul, while one was even.

Sarron weighed 134, Gamiere 135⅞.

Tiger Jackson, 150¾, of Akron, easily outpunched Eddie Morgan, 149¼, in the opening four-rounder.

More than 12,000 fans saw the show at a $6 top.

Paul Mickelson Reaches End of the Sports Trail and Glances Back in Retrospect; Minnesota, Tunney, Rockne Greatest in Field

(With this column, Paul Mickelson takes his leave of the sports field to assume his new duties as news editor of the Kansas City Bureau of the Associated Press. In this final column, Mickelson details the most vivid impressions he has gathered in ten years of sports reporting.)

By Paul Mickelson.

New York, Dec. 5 (AP).—Personal nominations of a former country boy saying farewell to sports after 10 happy years of reporting the highlights of the passing parade:

Greatest college football team . . . from the press boxes of the Nation, I watched some 100 of the mightiest and near mightiest teams in the land. Greatest of them all was Minnesota's 1934 masterpiece. It was so good that the day before the Gophers played their finale against Wisconsin, a Minnesota coach said: "We have no worries. Wisconsin can't win." Minnesota won handily.

Most thrilling football game . . . It was Southern California-Notre Dame game in 1931, when Johnny Baker's goal kick beat the Irish, 16 to 14, to shatter Notre Dame's long winning streak.

Best sport . . . Possibly it is because football has us all fed up for the year, but baseball is this corner's favorite. It is the least hypocritical of all sports with leaders who are incorruptible, thanks to Kenesaw Mountain Landis. Baseball has more romance than any sport. Its game-to-game results are unpredictable and it lifts youths, educated and illiterate ones, to success. The game writes more Horatio Alger stories than the rest combined.

Calls Tunney Best

Greatest press agent . . . in 10 years a sports writer meets 10,000 publicity men. Greatest of them all is Frank Winchell, of Tampa, Fla.

Best fighter . . . taking them all over the last 10 years, the nomination must go to Gene Tunney, a fighter who had more than a good pair of legs and arms. He had brains—and used them.

Keenest wit . . . nobody ever got the better of Knute Rockne. He was so good on the oratorical uptake his only rival, Bob Zuppke, used to vow "Rock" thought up his wisecracks a year in advance.

Saddest assignment . . . covering the funeral of Rockne, a restless man who was walking on the highest clouds of football achievement when he fell from the clouds to his mortal destruction. Two days before he left, I had dinner with the master. "The cook wasn't so hot with her corned beef and cabbage tonight," he apologized. "I'll be back in a week and we'll put on a

Fishel to Protest Referee's Action

Syd Fishel, handling Buck Everett in the absence of his manager, Jimmy Irwin, last night said he would protest Referee Harry Volkman's action in refusing to let him treat a gash on the fighter's forehead before it was examined by the boxing commission physician. Fishel claimed Volkman's action not only prevented him from treating the wound properly but also deprived Everett of his legitimate rest period.

Volkman said he signaled the timekeeper for time out, and that Everett should have received the full rest period after the physician completed his examination and time was declared in again. The matter will be ironed out at the boxing commission this morning.

Grimes Signs With Royals

By the Associated Press.

Montreal, Dec. 5.—Burleigh Grimes, the old spitball pitcher and more recently manager of the Brooklyn Dodgers, was named manager of the Montreal Royals of the International League today.

Grimes was signed to a two-year contract, filling the post held by Rabbit Maranville until late last season. First Baseman Alex Hooks succeeded Maranville in the closing weeks of the '38 campaign.

The Royals' business office confirmed Grimes' appointment, rumor of which had been going the baseball rounds since before he ended his two-year term as head man of the Dodgers. The Royals' office here said the club president, Hector Racine, was making formal announcement of Grimes' appointment at the league's annual meeting in New Orleans today.

Grimes—known throughout the diamond world as "Boiling Boily" for his outbursts of umpire baiting—has been succeeded as Brooklyn manager by Lippy Leo Durocher, Dodger shortstop.

Grimes was the last spitballer active in baseball after that particular delivery was "outlawed." He is 45, and pitched in the major leagues with Brooklyn, Pittsburgh, New York, Boston, St. Louis and Chicago, all in the National League, during his 18-year career in the big time.

He became manager of Brooklyn, succeeding Casey Stengel, for the 1937 campaign, and ran the club through the season recently ended. In both years, the Dodgers finished deep in the second division, despite Burleigh's fighting efforts to lift them higher. Before coming to Brooklyn, Grimes managed the Louisville club of the American Association.

Davey O'Brien Is Capital Visitor

A party of Texans that included Davey O'Brien, All-American passing sensation of Texas Christian University; Ky Aldrich, T. C. U. center, and State and school officials were brief visitors to the city yesterday, as their New York bound plane was grounded due to weather conditions, and they continued by train, leaving at 3 p. m.

O'Brien is to receive the Heisman Memorial Trophy tonight, as the outstanding college football player of the year.

The party included, besides O'Brien and Aldrich, also an All-American, J. B. Hale, captain of the Horned Frogs; Amon Carter, Walter Woodul, lieutenant governor of Texas; E. M. Watts, T. C. U. president, and Mrs. O'Brien.

Takoma Ladies' Pin Records Set By Mrs. Gino Simi

Gino Simi, publicity dispatcher for the Takoma Ladies Duckpin League, among other things, kept the news in the family last night as he called with a story that he labeled "sensational and spectacular," concerning Mrs. Gino Simi, who came through with several new season's records.

It seems that Mrs. Simi rolled a new season's high game of 120, tying her previous mark; a new high set of 338, while her team, Ida's Department Store, also posted two new records of 507 and 1,403. But Ida's dropped two games to Georgia Tavern. Marie Cunningham, Ruth King and Ellen Vigroff were best for the winners.

Federal Lithographers upset the leading Corr's Sports Shop, two games to one, with Joanna Varrella best with a 105 game and 283 set. Toots Dower had a 111 game and 297 set.

Alfred Vanderbilt New Pimlico Head

Baltimore, Dec. 5 (AP).—Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt, young sportsman who engineered the Seabiscuit-War Admiral race this fall, was elected president today of the Maryland Jockey Club, operators of Pimlico Race Track.

The 26-year-old Vanderbilt, youngest president in the history of the country's oldest racing organization, was elevated from the vice presidency to succeed Charles E. McLane, president since 1917. McLane resigned because of poor health.

Two new directors were elected to fill vacancies caused by McLane's resignation and the death of Admiral Cary T. Grayson. They were John K. Shaw, jr., of Baltimore, and Vaughn Flannery, of New York and Darlington, Md.

Notre Dame Wins Trophy

Dickinson Rating System Ranks Irish Over Duke, Vols

Chicago, Dec. 5.—Elmer Layden's once-beaten Notre Dame eleven was given top national ranking today for the 1938 football season by Dr. Frank G. Dickinson, University of Illinois professor and originator of the rating system bearing his name. The Irish were rated at 27.72 points.

Undefeated Duke rated second with 27.10 points and Tennessee, also unbeaten, was third at 26.68.

Dr. Dickinson, describing Southern California as the leading "up and down" team of the year, gave the Trojans fourth place despite their 13-0 victory over Notre Dame Saturday.

Notre Dame will receive the Knute Rockne Trophy, annually presented by Notre Dame's famed "four horsemen," the great 1924 Irish backfield in which Elmer Layden teamed with Jimmy Crowley, Fordham's head coach; Harry Stuhldreher, of Wisconsin, and Don Miller.

Ratings of the first 11 teams:

	W.	L.	T.	Pts.
1 Notre Dame	8	1	0	27.72

Dapper Dan's Five Triumphs in Heurich League Game

A last-period scoring barrage enabled Dapper Dan's tossers to defeat St. Martin's in a well played Heurich Amateur Basketball League game in the Heurich Gymnasium last night, 43 to 26.

St. Martin's, making its league debut, trailed by 9 to 13 at half, but rallied spiritedly in third period play and severely extended its opponent until final period play.

In other games W. W. Chambers scored over PWA, 56 to 29, and Little Tavern defeated D. C. Firemen, 34 to 21.

Cascarella Sold To Buffalo Club

New Orleans, La., Dec. 5 (AP).—Joe Cascarella, relief hurler of the Cincinnati Reds, was sold today to the Buffalo club of the International League. He was the first of the 1938 Reds to go on the block. The sale of Cascarella, former Philadelphia Athletics' player, was announced by Reds' General Manager Warren C. Giles.

Charlotte Hall Wins

Charlotte Hall, Md., Dec. 5.—Charlotte Hall Cadets opened their 1938-39 basketball season with a 31-to-30 victory over a strong alumni team in the local gymnasium.

Mount Rainer League

Smith's Tavern won the feature match in the Mount Rainier League, taking the odd tilt from White Horse Inn. C. Lilley, who rolled a record 417 set last week, was high again last night with 373. Marcellino Shoe Repair took a 2-1 decision over Wilkins Coffee.

Bill Lee Signs 1939 Contract

Chicago, Dec. 5 (AP).—Bill Lee, ace pitcher of the Chicago Cubs, signed his 1939 contract today.

The terms were not disclosed, but the management reported he had received a "substantial increase" in salary.

The big right-hander won 22 games for the team last season. His hurling was a major factor in the Cubs' pennant drive.

Redskins Disband; Marshall Promises Improved '39 Club

Jay Turner Retires From Game; Edwards May Quit; Plan to Claim 10 in Draft

In a kindly and forgiving mood, President George Marshall and Head Coach Ray Flaherty, of the Washington Redskins, yesterday tendered their football squad a farewell banquet.

Wounds to their pride and their pocketbooks were the chief scars of the Redskins, who emerged from the 36-0 rout by the Giants undamaged physically. Owner Marshall complimented the athletes on their campaign, despite their loss of the title, and predicted their return to championship honors next season.

Coach Flaherty, a veteran of the professional football wars, reminded the Redskins that the Giants had recovered from even a worse beating a year before to win the Eastern title.

With the exception of Riley Smith and Charley Malone, who will resume their affiliation with a soft-drink concern here, the Redskins today will scatter to their homes, chiefly in the Midwest, Texas and on the Pacific Coast.

To newsmen, Marshall outlined a program designed to put an improved Redskin team on the field in 1939.

"Twelve of the players who were in the game against the Giants were first-year men," said Marshall. Andy Farkas, Willie Wilkin, George Karamatic, Frank Filchock, Bob Master-

Pro Passers Shatter Six Records; Packers Top Scoring

By the Associated Press.

New York, Dec. 5.—The pass-conscious National Professional Football League sailed through the air to six new loop records in scoring and forward passing during its regular season, which ended yesterday.

Final statistics, released today, show the Western division champion Green Bay Packers, the Eastern champion New York Giants, the Washington Redskins, and even the lowly Chicago Cardinals shared in the record-breaking during one of the league's most successful seasons.

The Packers, rolling up the huge total of 223 points in 11 games, shattered all previous scoring records. Their total was three points higher than the previous high the same club posted a year ago. This Green Bay aggregate led the way to a new league scoring mark, as well, with the ten counting a total of 1,484 points, eclipsing the old record of 1,424 set last year.

Paced by Ed Danowski and Tuffy Leemans, their Nos. 1 and 2 aerial artists, the Giants came through with a new mark for passing efficiency. The New Yorkers completed 91 of a total of 166 overheads attempted for a 48.9 per cent successful average. This mark was 2.2 per cent higher than the record the Brooklyn Dodgers set in 1933, when they completed 79 of 169 attempts.

The Cardinals and Redskins each completed 114 passes, deadlocking for a new record in this respect. The Cardinals also set up a new high for efficiency by a team throwing 200 or more passes during the season. The Cards tried 240 and completed 114, for a 47.5 percentage. These pitching performances by the individual clubs also accounted for a new league record for pass efficiency, the ten teams completing 824 in 2,030 attempts for a 40.5 mark, thereby overshadowing the old record of 594 completions in 1,543 attempts.

Hunting

By Bill Ackerman

We would venture a guess there is more venison hanging in Washington homes this season than ever before. There has been, during the past week, thousands of local nimrods in the woods of Pennsylvania, West Virginia and North Carolina, many of them out for the first time after big game.

ACKERMAN.

Capt. Ed Bowen and Grover C. Naylor were in a party of 18 hunting in the Lycoming County area of Pennsylvania, and every one of the 18 came back with deer. William J. Lundy, of the Potomac Electric, got a doe in Warren County.

It has always been said that the greatest population of deer per square mile in America is in Arcadia National Park on Mount Desert Island in Maine. But from the initial returns from Pennsylvania we doubt that now, in spite of the fact that there is a yearly open season on the latter, while the Mount Desert area is perpetually closed to hunters. Both sections have so many deer that driving during the recent summer months was rather precarious to motorists.

The bear season that just closed in Maine was the most productive in many years. In some sections there were more bear shot than deer. The kill is said to be double that of last year.

The local anglers who have fished every year in the Gray Rocks, St. Jovite section above Montreal, might like to know that the moose kill there has been proportionately greater than in the Province of Nova Scotia. Eleven of the great animals were brought out of the woods during the season that just closed.

Ray Adams, who, through the summer, follows his fishing from Key West to Maine, continues the same practice with his hunting. His duck blind is located in Curratuck Sound, N. C., and two days each week finds him in it, where he has had no trouble in taking his limit bag of geese and ducks each day. A two days' bag is the amount allowed to be taken out of the State under North Carolina regulations.

He tells us about Capt. William Lewark, of the Coast Guard Station in that area, fishing with Mrs. Lewark in Kill Devil Sound one day during the past week. The catch was 168 stripers up to 7 pounds in weight, and they only stopped when their hands were so cut up it was impossible to continue.

Fifty buck and doe deer were bagged in the first two weeks of hunting in the sandhills of the Hoffman Recreational Area in North Carolina, but that isn't as interesting now as the week of hunting for grouse, starting December 26, that will be allowed in the Sherwood Forest, Mount Mitchell and Daniel Boone areas, the State-Federal co-operative wildlife management areas of Pisgah National Forest. It will be on a daily basis, participants paying a fee of $1 per day. Permits will be available in the office of the refugee supervisor at Asheville.

Quail shooting in Southern Maryland continues to be the best we know of anywhere in the State. Gunther Wallen, from Solomons, is out almost every day and seems to have little trouble getting his bag limit in a few hours, although we think his consistency is more for the fun of watching his three new pointer dogs work. He says the majority of the birds are tight in the cover, and it is only occasionally that he finds a bird in the open.

Ducks are coming in, in this same section of the lower Patuxent, in fine fashion. For some reason, always a little later than at other places, there will be little kick from duck hunters if the flights continue as prolific as during this past week. In one cove, where there are several stake blinds, several thousand were estimated to be feeding at one time.

Down the lower Eastern Shore, in Sinepuxent Bay, and Chincoteague, there are plenty of ducks coming in to the blinds that are on baited ground, but for those hunters who live up to the law, the duck shooting isn't as good as preseason estimates would seem to indicate.

The best shooting for wildfowl will probably continue to be along the Virginia and Carolina coasts—in Curratuck, Roanoke and Pamlico, and in the areas set aside for shooting in the Mattamuskeet Wildlife Refuge.

In spite of the dripping fog overhead and the soaked ground underfoot, the turkey shoot of the Bethesda-Chevy Chase Chapter of the Izaak Walton League, held Sunday on the Rockville pike, was the mecca for many sportsmen. A total of 26 turkeys were taken home by those whose eyes were keenest on the targets.

There is still one more, to be held at the same place, on December 18, to give the unlucky ones a final chance to get a bird for Christmas.

Battleship Wins 1938 Turf Award

New York, Dec. 5 (AP).—For winning the Grand National at Aintree last March, Mrs. Marion duPont Scott's Battleship has been selected as the "horse of the year" by the turf publication, Horse and Horseman.

On Christmas Day in Virginia, this famous son of Man o' War will receive the Golden Bit, annually awarded by the magazine.

Only five performances of 1938 were considered worthy of turf history. The other four were the triumph of William Woodward's Flares in England's Ascot Gold Cup; the lowering of the world's trotting record to 1:55¼ by E. J. Baker's Greyhound; the reduction of the world's pacing record to 1:55 by Dan McConville and Pat Downey's Billy Direct, and the great achievement of Seabiscuit in taking second place among the money-winning horses of America by beating War Admiral. Seabiscuit won the award last year.

Last Chase Scores Easy Victory in Mud at Charles Town

Pays $5.80; Camaraderie Takes Place

Surprise Box Third In Muddy Race; Day's Double Pays $32.40 Ticket

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

Charles Town, W. Va., Dec. 5. Last Chase, owned by Mrs. J. B. Bond, of Baltimore, tossed mud in the faces of seven other good horses in an unnamed feature race here today. Racing over a track that was a foot deep in mud, Last Chase finished a length and a half in advance of M. J. McCurdy's Camaraderie, with H. W. Jackson's Surprise Box third. Last Chase operated in the role of a $5.80 favorite, and was capably handled by Jockey T. E. Ward.

At the start of the seven-furlong test, Mattapony stepped to the front, but Last Chase was close up. Entering the backstretch, Last Chase supplanted the pacemaker and then withstood all efforts to dislodge him. Camaraderie, slow to begin and a trailer in the early running, came around horses to better his position and seemed about to take it all, only to hang in the final sixteenth. Surprise Box also closed ground.

The weather was balmy here, but rain, fog and mud made it an unsuitable day. However, the usual crowded train puffed in from Washington and the sport went on as usual.

After Sun Voter, a $10.60 shot, had turned back his opposition in the first race, the customers concentrated on the daily double and those who played their $2 on the "5 and 8" combination of Ann Mowlee in the second race and Brooke Herod in the third race collected a $32.40 mutuel. Both of the key horses in the "double" were easy winners.

Ann Mowlee galloped along in front of Fernbrake and Land of Smiles, while Brooke Herod assumed command at the far turn to score easily over Boro Poker and My Blonde.

Lou Machado, leading rider at the meeting, kept Lead Please in front from start to finish in the fourth race. The daughter of Prince of Wales never gave her backers an anxious moment and won by six lengths, with Moon Harvest, the heavily-played favorite, and Big Bud closest at the end. The winner paid $8.40.

10-Game Schedule For Vanderbilt

Nashville, Tenn., Dec. 5 (AP).—Vanderbilt University completed its 1939 football schedule today with the signing of Tennessee Polytechnic Institute of Cookeville, Tenn., for the opening game, September 20, at Nashville.

Other opponents on the ten-game schedule are:

Rice, Virginia Military Institute, Kentucky, Georgia Tech, Ole Miss, Louisiana State, Sewanee, Tennessee and Alabama.

Vander Meer Faces His Third Operation

Cincinnati, Dec. 5 (AP).—Johnny Vander Meer, only major league pitcher to hurl two successive no-hit, no-run games, made reservations in Christ Hospital tonight for his third tonsil operation tomorrow.

Vander Meer underwent his first tonsillectomy in 1929 and three years ago surgeons duplicated the operation.

Vander Meer quoted his surgeon as expressing belief that the throat condition might have contributed to an ear infection that required surgery last midseason.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SUN VOTER, $10.60, $4.80, $3.20; GOLDEN KEY, $3.40. $2.60; JIMMY S., $5.20.

SUN VOTER forged to the front in the opening furlong and drew out gradually when shaken up to win easily. GOLDEN KEY, off well, raced wide and was best of the others. JIMMY S. worked his way to contention on the outside. CHOICE GOODS closed boldly. LEAH FERN was first away, but dropped back gradually. BURSTING could not keep up. CUSTER was off poorly.

SECOND RACE—Charles Town course. Purse, $400. For 2-year-olds. Start good from stall gates. Won easily; place same. Went to post at 2:02. Off at 2:02½. Winner, J. T. Igani's br. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—ANN MOWLEE, $3.80, $3.00, $2.80; FERNBRAKE, $12.20, $7.20; LAND OF SMILES, $4.40.

ANN MOWLEE, steadied along closest to the pace of FERNBRAKE, took command when asked and drew out to win easily. FERNBRAKE took command going to the first turn, set a good pace, but tired badly in the losing sixteenth. LAND OF SMILES was taken the overland route and closed gamely. ODDESA ROMEO weakened after being a keen forward factor. The others were outrun. AIR EDDY stumbled and lost his rider at the first turn.

THIRD RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 2:29. Off at 2:31. Winner, M. B. Two-dollar mutuels paid—BROOKE HEROD, $11.60, $5.40, $3.40; BORO POKER, $5.40, $3.40; MY BLONDE, $4.40.

BROOKE HEROD, sent to contention entering the backstretch, came through on the inside to take command and drew out thereafter. BORO POKER had good speed to go to the front going to the first turn and continued gamely when displaced. MY BLONDE closed with good energy from a slow beginning. SHAGGY ANN was hard used while racing wide in getting to BORO POKER and faltered. MISS ADELE was held safe. BUNGALOW flashed early speed.

Daily double paid $32.40.

FOURTH RACE—Charles Town course. Purse, $500; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 2:55½. Off at 2:58. Winner, H. O. Two-dollar mutuels paid—LEAD PLEASE, $8.40, $3.60, $3.20; MOON HARVEST, $3.20, $2.80; BRAINCHILD, $3.60.

LEAD PLEASE, sent to the front at once under hustling tactics, was steadied along while setting the pace and opened a good gap nearing the finish while racing easily. MOON HARVEST ran wide into the first turn and made up ground gradually thereafter. BRAINCHILD showed a game effort. BIG BUD was held safe. CLAEB weakened after being closest to the pace for a half. GOODWINE stumbled in the going and was pulled up.

FIFTH RACE—About 7 furlongs. Purse, $500. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:28½. Off at 3:33½. Winner, Mrs. J. B. Bond's ch. c. Two-dollar mutuels paid—LAST CHASE, $5.80, $3.60, $3.40; CAMARADERIE, $10.60, $7.80; SURPRISE BOX, $4.40.

LAST CHASE, close to the pace of MATTAPONY to the backstretch; rallied to take command and was kept to a light drive to the end. CAMARADERIE was slow to begin, came with a rush in the final quarter and hung right at the end. SURPRISE BOX went to contention with a bold move, but was held safe. MATTAPONY stopped after setting the early pace. FRANK BROOKE, fractious and taken outside the gates for the start, had early speed and stopped. GRUMPY could not keep up. TULEYRIES LIN was through early.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:01. Off at 4:02. Winner, M. Two-dollar mutuels paid—WASWANAPPI, $10.40, $6.20, $3.20; AUFOIN, $5.40, $3.60; HEART PLAY, $3.40.

WASWANAPPI raced DARK TYRANT into defeat to take command and was not seriously threatened thereafter. AUFOIN went to the leaders with good energy and hung on well. HEART PLAY closed some ground from a slow beginning. BOOSEL was held safe while hard ridden. DARK TYRANT stopped. KAWAGOE had early speed. DUNAIR was pulled up when he faltered in the going.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:32. Off at 4:32½. Winner, H. B. CHILLY EBBIE was under a drive at the end. MACHILLA closed gamely. Balducci claimed foul against the winner which was disallowed. FREE was going well at the end. LUCKY TURN was laboring at the finish.

Seabiscuit Tops Field In Widener

78 Nominated for $50,000 Race; War Admiral, Stagehand Among Entries

By the United Press.

Miami, Fla., Dec. 5.—A list of 78 nominees, reading like a "Who's Who" of the turf, was announced tonight for the fourth running of the $50,000-added Widener Challenge Cup at Hialeah Park March 4.

And heading this star-studded field, which bids better than fair to make the Widener the "race of the century," was the turf's "big six" of 1938—Seabiscuit, War Admiral, Lawrin, Stagehand, Dauber and Pasteurized.

The "big six" hold every important racing prize of the year.

Seabiscuit triumphed over War Admiral in a match race at Pimlico recently, and his earnings to date are $340,480. He also has won the Agua Caliente Handicap, Del Mar Special, Havre de Grace Handicap and Hollywood Gold Cup.

Admiral's Victories

War Admiral, mighty son of Man o' War, undefeated as a 3-year-old, won the last Widener, Jamaica's Queens County Handicap, Belmont Park's Jockey Club Gold Cup, the Saratoga Cup and Handicap, the Whitney Stakes, Wilson Stakes and Rhode Island Handicap this year.

Lawrin, owned by Herbert M. Woolf, galloped off with the Kentucky Derby, the Flamingo Stakes, Hialeah Stakes, Hollywood Trial Stakes and the American Invitational 3-year-old championship at Inglewood.

Maxwell Howard's Stagehand, a 3-year-old, was the leading money winner of the year with earnings of $189,710. The Howard colt won Santa Anita's $50,000 Handicap and $100,000 Derby, the Empire City Handicap, Narragansett Special and Governor's Handicap.

Seabiscuit with $130,395, Lawrin with $123,215 and War Admiral with $90,840 trailed Stagehand for the year's money-winning honors. Seabiscuit's total earnings, however, rank second to Sun Beau's all-time mark of $376,744.

Other Entries

Dauber, owned by E. E. Fogelson, and Mrs. W. Plunkett Stewart's Pasteurized accounted for the important 3-year-old honors that Lawrin and Stagehand failed to take. Dauber romped off with the Pimlico Preakness and Pasteurized won the Belmont Stakes.

In addition, the entries included Ligaroti, owned by Bing Crosby and Linn Howard; Calumet Farm's Bull Lea, winner of five stakes and Conqueror of Stagehand; Maxwell Howard's The Chief, which triumphed in the Brooklyn Handicap, Dwyer Stakes and Derby Trial Stakes.

Other notable nominees were Edward Friendly's Jacola, rated the champion 3-year-old filly; Louis B. Mayer's Magic Hour, Townsend B. Martin's Cravat, Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt's Heelfly, B. F. Whitaker's Mythical King and the Saratoga Stable's Volitant.

Nominations were made by some of the most important racing stables, including those of John Hay Whitney, Mrs. Parker Corning, Marshall Field, William duPont, Mrs. Payne Whitney, Dewitt Page, Mrs. Henry C. Phipps, George H. Bull and John A. Morris.

Although 78 horses have been nominated for the mile-and-a-quarter test, the starting field probably will be pared down to 20 or less. The imposts will be announced January 4.

The list of nominations was announced by Racing Secretary Charles J. McLennan.

N.B.A. Rankings To Be Released Here December 18

Shakeups in several divisions that will drop many high ranking fighters to lower standings, and vice versa, were in prospect yesterday as Heine Miller, chairman of the National Boxing Association's ratings committee sounded the call for a committee meeting in Washington December 18.

Miller had no comment to make on the ratings yesterday beyond saying that reports on all fighters—a working sheet, had been mailed to committee members to augment their own records. The report will be the annual quarterly rating list issued by the N. B. A.

Committee members include John J. Ahearn, former N. B. A. president and chairman of the Minnesota commission; Charles F. Reynolds, president of the N. B. A. and chairman of the Rhode Island commission; Edward W. Bohn, State Senator and member of the Colorado commission; Samuel A. Murbarger, Indiana's one-man commission; Fred J. Saddy, secretary of the Wisconsin commission; James A. Blake, of the Virginia commission; Joseph Maloney, secretary of the New Jersey commission and former N. B. A. prexy; Joseph Triner, chairman of the Illinois commission; Edward O. Fostor, N. B. A. secretary and former president and a member of the Rhode Island commission, and Miller.

Dear Al:

Jockey Noboy Jacobs was not fooled by the rout of the Redskins. He was aboard the special train headed for New York and decided that the game wouldn't be worth seeing, so he got off at Baltimore and came back to Washington.

The projector for the photo finishes was put in action yesterday and the pictures looked good. So far the camera has jibed with the press box decisions.

Full sisters ran on yesterday's program. Fernbrake, a 2-year-old, is a sister of Leah Fern. Both are by Mowlee out of Royal Fern. Ann Mowlee, another filly sired by Mowlee, won the second race. All three were bred by Alan Clarke, of Clarkesville, Md. Full brothers were in action in the same race here last Saturday. Ocean Roll was first and Landlubber last. Both are by Strolling Player out of Rough Sea.

The boys around the track say there was "comeback money" for the Redskins. Maybe they just needed the game.

Jockey Lou Machado is in rare form these days. He rides as if his very life depended on the outcome of each race and he has proven absolutely fearless of the rough, tough tracks hereabouts. He gives them all the same hustling, pushing rides.

While betting fell off yesterday, it was still enough to allow the track to show a profit on the day.

Gaby, turf editor for the Baltimore News Post who is vacationing, took a fireman's holiday by visiting the track yesterday. He will be Florida bound in a couple of days.

Last Friday, the coldest day of the meeting so far, the press box boys opened the windows so they could see the races and then sang "In the Good Old Summer Time."

Despite the fact that they are getting good service, the dining car patrons on the race special miss Brother Davis who has been in charge in other years. BILL.

First race—James Pal appears to be the right one in the day's opener. He has good races to recommend him and I see no reason for mistakes. Pandoramint, among the also eligibles, will be dangerous if in action. Gons Baby should like the going. Clocker Mike is around with Quick Vine.

Second race—Kissin Kid turned in a neat first-time start here on opening day and may show enough improvement to turn back this field. Game Chaser has a lot of speed as evidenced at Pimlico and should be a keen contender. Accidental will be close of in action.

Third race—Rough Buddy has enough early foot to be a threat in company of this sort and I'm going to string along. Canteret has handled as good as these on occasions and is due respect. Summer Hail had early speed on the milers.

Fourth race—Early Broom has a good figure and with the right ride he will take care of this gang. Goantell and Square Play will be hard to keep out of the pay circle.

Fifth race—Unheralded is the natural choice in this field; finished close up to Conquer at Bowie and needs only to run his real race. Landlubber slipped and slid around the course the other day as if needing a change of shoes. Can better that effort considerably. Star Mint and Flying Vim are cheap but they are front runners and can't be overlooked entirely.

Sixth race—Big Bud turned in a fair effort at Bowie and may take the purse if sent back. Penway was left standing flat-footed and finished second last out. Gets in this with a feather. Tommy Rose for the show end.

Seventh race—Trostar would win this if in action but is far down the list. Last Scamp is a fair sort and may be the right one if the top fellow fails to go postward. Sea Boy for the show.

Eighth race (substitute)—Ivonia loves the going and may be the winner if this race is used. Nebraska City and Sheriff Eugene for the other positions.

Best bet—Unheralded.

Down In Front

By Richards Vidmer

Try, Try Again

New York, Dec. 5.—There still is a lot of unfinished business in connection with the fading football season judging by the conversation in the byways and bistros of this, our town. One of the matters currently under discussion is which coach did the best job. And there are varied votes being cast.

VIDMER.

Some hail Wallace Wade, pointing out that he brought his Duke team through the season undefeated, untied, not even scored on, and faced his toughest test in the final game with Pittsburgh, yet managed to preserve the record and achieve whatever honor there is in the Rose Bowl bid.

Others are chanting paeans of praise for Dick Harlow, calling attention to the way he brought his team up slowly, yet surely, for after losing the first four games on the schedule the Crimson reached its peak at the proper time and won the last four.

There is another school which feels Howard Jones, of Southern California, deserves the palms and plaudits for the way he maintained the morale of his team after it had clinched its place in the Rose Bowl, and sent it out on the field last Saturday sufficiently keyed up to beat Notre Dame and smash a perfect record.

But there's another coach, almost overlooked in the shuffle, who deserves a place at the peak in my humble estimation. Possibly because I know that his accomplishment was an old ambition, an ancient prediction and fulfillment of a dim dream.

Covered Wide Field

One winter day, many years ago, I sat in a room of North Barracks at West Point, chatting with a handsome young cadet who lay sprawled on a bed. Even then we were talking about football, for the lad had made the varsity squad a few months before as a plebe. He hadn't made his letter, because that fall the Army was blessed with a whole bunch of fine ends, including Louis Merrilat and John Markoe. But he had made the squad and I suggested that he might make his "A" the next year.

He looked up in surprise and for a moment his eyes flashed under his black brows. Then his face softened and he sat up.

"Listen," he said in a confident tone. "I'll make the football team next year and the year after and the year after that. I'll be a regular end for three seasons. Furthermore I'll pitch on the baseball team this spring and I'll pitch against the Navy. I'll pitch against the Navy four years and they'll never beat me. I'll make the basketball team and I'll win the heavyweight boxing championship of the corps."

This seemed, to put it mildly, a rather broad prediction. My cadet friend seemed to be covering a great deal of territory in the sphere of sports, especially as I knew him only as a plebe end who had managed to make the varsity squad. But there was something in his tone that made me remember.

Check and Double Check

And as the years went on, I checked off his exploits one by one. He did pitch against the Navy four times and they never beat him. He did become a varsity end the next year and held his position until he graduated. And he made the basketball team and won the heavyweight championship of the corps, just as he had said he would.

So when I saw him in the years that followed I listened attentively to any of his predictions. There weren't many, for he had turned his talents to coaching and coaches don't make predictions if they can help it. They seem to understand too well the fickleness of fortune in football. They know too well that the difference between victory and defeat, success and failure, so frequently depends on a fumbled punt, an intercepted pass, a blocked kick, even the interpretation of a rule.

So this coach made few predictions. For a while he served as an assistant at West Point. Then he was sent to duty in the South and coupled coaching with his military duties. He had signal success with his Southern team. He brought it up from obscurity, where it was beating only Emory and Henry, Maryville and Carson-Newman, and losing to Mississippi A. and M., Georgia, Tulane, Centre and Kentucky. He brought it up quickly to where it was beating the best that the South had to offer.

In his first year as coach, his team lost only to Vanderbilt. In his second it didn't lose to anybody and was tied only by Vanderbilt. In his third it was again unbeaten but was tied by Kentucky. The next year the same thing happened. And the following season it lost only to Alabama.

That's the way it went. One defeat here, one tie there, never quite a perfect campaign. And, meeting my old friend in Detroit, I offered my sympathy for his inability to produce a perfect record when he had come so close so often.

"Listen," he said. "I'll turn out a team that's undefeated and untied yet. Wait and see."

And so I remembered and waited. And when you consider how very few major teams in any section manage to complete a season without a defeat or tie, you realize what the percentage was against him for fulfilling this prediction.

But among this year's unbeaten, untied teams is the University of Tennessee. Bob Neyland, former Army officer, made good his words again.

Green Bay Packers, at Full Strength, Seek Fifth Pro Title

Don Hutson Is Back, Isbell, Hinkle Ready for New York Game on Sunday

By the Associated Press.

Green Bay, Wis., Dec. 5.—For the first time in several weeks, the Green Bay Packers, who, alternately have blown hot and cold all season, will be at full strength when they meet the Giants in New York Sunday for the National Professional Football League championship.

"We not only will be in top shape," declared E. L. (Curly) Lambeau, coach of the Western division title winners today, "we'll be hot. If ever a team looked right, we do now. We were not in top shape when we pushed the Giants all over the field a few weeks ago, yet lost to them. We will be for this one."

Hutson in Shape

Don Hutson, the team's leading scorer and one of the best ends in the business, who has been out of service since November 13 with a leg injury, will be in shape to play, the coach said. Bob Monnett, one of the best passers in the circuit, who has been out since November 6 with a similar injury, also has recovered. The team has not played a game since November 20 and several other men who were battered and bruised in the late weeks of the campaign have recovered fully.

In some games this year the Packer team looked like one of the greatest ball clubs in professional history, rolling along like an Army tank. In others it sputtered and backfired.

Against the Chicago Cardinals at Buffalo, the Packers won by 2 points on breaks—against a team that won only two league games this year. They beat the Chicago Bears by 7 points, but didn't look any too good doing it. Detroit came to Green Bay early in the season and the Packers looked like chumps as they lost. Green Bay went to Detroit in November and looked like champs as they won, 28 to 7.

Isbell Is Spark

Unquestionably Cecil Isbell has provided the spark which has kept the team rolling. The one-man chain gang from Purdue has been the key man in the team's high-gear offense, figuring prominently in nearly every win. He is the league's outstanding freshman back, despite the handicap of a chain he wears to keep a shoulder in place.

Also in the Bay offensive spotlight have been Clarke Hinkle, the rough and rugged fullback who came up from Bucknell seven years ago and is having one of his greatest years, and Hutson, the most feared pass receiver in the circuit.

The Packers, a community-owned club, had their best financial season in their history in 1938, playing before some 243,000 fans in 11 league games. They will be seeking their fifth National League title. They won crowns in 1929, 1930, 1931 and 1936.

Norwegian dinner." None of his friends saw his face again. I used to associate the famed golden dome of Notre Dame with Rockne. After his passing, somehow, I couldn't look at the golden dome again.

Gomez Was Funniest

Funniest hero—Lefty Gomez, only pitcher to win six World Series games, gets the nomination. The good senor is worth a laugh a minute with his cracks. One of his best: When Howard Hughes flew around the world in 3 days and 19 hours, the senor said: "That's my idea of an aviator. I could fly around the world with him without even missing my regular turn on the mound."

All-around hero—Sports will never produce a greater hero or nicer man than Bobby Jones. Also his boswell, O. B. Keeler.

Greatest opposites in sports writing—Grantland Rice, who won fame saying only good things about sports heroes; Westbrook Pegler, the game's greatest satirist. Zuppke once introduced Pegler to a football coaches' meeting as follows: "You all hate him when he writes about you and love him when he writes about somebody else."

Saddest figure: Babe Ruth. He's been offered 1,000 jobs since he quit playing baseball, but wants only a baseball assignment. Also fighters who ran through their money and now are trying to come back.

Greatest fellows: It isn't even close. They are newspaper copy readers, who gave an ex-country boy a break.

N. Y. U. Picks 4 Rams On All-Opponent Club

New York, Dec. 5 (AP).—Four Fordham players and three from North Carolina today were named to the All-Opponent team selected by the New York University football team.

The team: Ends, Paul Severin, N. C., and Henry Jacunski, Fordham; tackles, Steve Maronic, N. C., and Paul Berezney, Fordham; guards, Michael Kochel, Fordham, and Victor Marino, Ohio State; center, John Quigg, Lafayette; backs, George Stirnweiss, N. C.; Michael Kabealo, Ohio State; Dom Principe, Fordham, and Walter Davis, Colgate.

Georgetown Five Plays

Hoyas Meet Green Terrors Thursday at Tech High Gym

With the addition of four husky football players who reported for their first practice yesterday, Coach Elmer Ripley stepped up preparations of the Georgetown U. courtmen for the opening game with the veteran Western Maryland quintet at Tech High gymnasium on Thursday evening at 8:30.

The four gridders turned basketeers are Joe McFadden, sophomore quarterback; Al Matuza, center; Bob Kercher, lanky end whose pass receiving won a number of games for the Hoyas, and Francis "Reds" Daly, veteran end. Matuza is out for the pivot position, while Kercher, Daly and McFadden are candidates for guard positions.

Daly, former Central High star, is starting on his second year, having won his letter last year. Of the four, Daly is most likely to win a place in the starting line-up.

The following worked out with the possible starting team: Ed Kurtyka and Johnny Schmitt at forward; Johnny McGowan at center; Joe Murphy and Rizzi at guard. Those who looked especially well are Johnny Riches, a senior; George Pajak, a sophomore, and Daly.

The Western Maryland five, which opens the Hoya hoop schedule every year, boasts a veteran team. Only two men were lost to the squad by graduation. The returning veterans are Capt. John Tomichek, Bon Stropp, Emil Edmund, Don Honeman, Joe Drugash, Charlie Wallace, Carroll Maddox and Bob Sherman. Coming up from the freshman team are Kenny Billsand, Vic Imperciato, a pair of fine guards.

son, Hal Bradley, Clem Stralka and Bill Hartman will be better football players next year. We will part with none of them.

"Each club will be permitted to carry 30 players next season instead of 25 and we will carry the limit. We will claim at least ten college men in the draft. We will put in bids for Hale, the T. C. U. tackle; Coon, a tackle from North Carolina State; Lumpkin, the Georgia center, and Aldrich the center from T. C. U.; Wysocki, the Villanova end, and Young, an end from Oklahoma.

"We'd like to come up with some backs also. On our list of possible claims will be Tony Holm, of Alabama; Bill Osmanski, of Holy Cross; Marshall Goldberg, of Pitt, and Howie Weiss, of Wisconsin."

Unverified are reports that Capt. Turk Edwards, all-league tackle for four seasons, would retire from professional football, but at least one Redskin will not return to the fold. He is Jay Turner, the George Washington product who made good this season in his maiden year in pro ranks as a blocking back. Turner's fierce play won him many assignments from Coach Flaherty. He has accepted a position with the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

The Redskins' defeat by the Giants may have cost the players additional earnings of approximately $1,000 each. Had they retained their Eastern title, they would have shared in the league play-off gate and in exhibition game gates at Chicago, Los Angeles and Dallas. As the second-place team in the Eastern division, they will draw approximately $75 each from the league play-off game.

Bethesda-C.C.High, Rockville Fives OpenSeasonToday

Bethesda-Chevy Chase High School opens its cage season today in Rockville, meeting the Rockville High five starting at 3:45.

A hard-fought contest is promised, considering that both teams are weak in experienced material.

Both squads are under the guidance of new coaches this season. Rockville's Ralph Keller, former Maryland University athlete, is a cousin of Charley Keller, slugging star of the Newark baseball team. Allen Vogt replaces Tony Kupka, Vogt coached the Bethesdans though the latter part of the season, when they ranked second in the district.

Three injuries during practice sessions forced Coach Vogt to shift his Bethesda line-up considerably. Pete Smith and Johnny Shumate, reserves last season, will not be able to play because of a charley horse and water on the knee, respectively. Russell Mizell, guard, fractured a finger recently, forcing him out. The line-up will feature only two lettermen of 1937, Guards Hughes and Hollis.

Rockville also has two lettermen ready for service. They are Dawson Wooten, center, and Dick Cleveland, guard. Ray, Slater and Lee are out for the cage team for the first time.

Probable line-ups:

B. C. C.		Rockville.
Kinsman	Forward	Ray
Barnesley	Forward	Slater
Whalen	Center	Wooten
Hughes	Guard	Cleveland
Hollis	Guard	Lee

Fitts Is Re-elected GreenkeeperPrexy

Special Dispatch to The Post

Baltimore, Dec. 5.—O. B. Fitts, Columbia Country Club greenkeeper, was re-elected president of the Midatlantic Association of Greenkeepers at the annual meeting here last night at the Southern Hotel.

Robert Scott, veteran Baltimore Country Club greenkeeper, was elected vice president, while C. A. Hook, Clifton Park, vice president last year, was elected secretary-treasurer, succeeding J. William Leverton, of the White Flint Club, near Rockville.

The University of Maryland short course, to be held January 25 through the 27 at College Park, for greenkeepers and others interested in turf maintenance, was discussed by the members.

'39 National Amateur To Glenview, Illinois

New York, Dec. 5 (AP).—The United States Golf Association announced today it would hold its 1939 amateur championship at the North Shore Country Club, Glenview, Ill., September 11-16.

The association fixed August 21-26 for the women's title event over the Wee Burn Club course at Noroton, Conn.

Duke Starts Bowl Drills

'Blue Devil' Special Will Head Coastward December 24

Durham, N. C., Dec. 5 (AP).—Duke's unbeaten, untied and unscored-on Blue Devils, who broke training November 26 after trouncing mighty Pitt, 7 to 0, in the last game of their regular schedule, were called back to the practice field today to get ready for their Rose Bowl game with Southern California.

The Dukes have about two weeks in which to practice here for the classic, to be played at Pasadena, Calif., on January 2. The "Blue Devil Special," carrying the Duke team, officials and supporters, to the Rose Bowl, will pull out of Durham on December 20, arriving in Pasadena December 24.

For the next few days the practice will probably be light. Coach Wallace Wade has not outlined a definite program, awaiting the return, probably tomorrow, of Duke scouts who watched Southern California topple over the mighty Irish of Notre Dame, 13 to 0, Saturday.

Bolling Field, FBI, Win in Gov't League

Led by Dopey Dean, former Eastern star, the FBI five opened its season in the U. S. Government League by trimming the General Accounting Office team, 53 to 26, last night at Bolling Field gym. FBI showed the way at the half, 21 to 5, and was never threatened.

Getting off to a 21-to-16 advantage in the opening half, the Bolling Field quintet turned back the Bureau of Engraving and Printing five in the second game of the twin bill.

Waco, Tex., Dec. 5 (AP).—The Waco High School Athletic Council today approved a postseason football game between the Waco High School Tigers and the Fenger High team, of Chicago, here December 26.

Pitt's Head Insists Upon Simon-Pures

'Strictly Amateur' Policy Defended By Dr. Bowman; Asks for Help

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, Dec. 5.—Chancellor John G. Bowman, defending his "strictly amateur" athletic policy at the University of Pittsburgh, told 350 alumni and athletes tonight he wanted "a football team above criticism."

The chancellor pleaded with the alumni to go ahead with him "in one direction and find the answer to the real question," which he defined as:

"'Are we to do our part along with the leading colleges of the East and West to save football as a wholesome sport?'"

Freshmen Listen

In the listening group was more than a score of freshmen football players who had been informed earlier tonight they would have to pay for their tuition and room and board, but that the school would arrange it so they could earn sufficient money in after-class jobs for that.

Dr. Bowman said:

"You want good football. So do I. You want Dr. Sutherland (Coach John Bain Sutherland) here and so do I, because he knows his stuff and is a great teacher and gentleman.

"We are going straight ahead with straight football at Pitt."

There had been a myriad of rumors that the canny Scotsman coach will not return next year to Pitt, all of which he has cast aside with the statement he "knows nothing" about them.

Just prior to Dr. Bowman's appearance and speech, Dr. Norman C. Ochenshirt, president of the Pitt Lettermen's Club, begged the freshmen athletes to "stick with the ship."

"Give us time to work things out," said Ochenshirt. "Pitt football will never go on the rocks."

Sutherland Speaks

Then turning abruptly to Coach Sutherland, the speaker said:

"Jock, no matter what decision you make you carry our affection with you."

In his brief talk Sutherland did not refer to the freshmen question, nor to his own position with the university. (His contract is virtually a perpetual one, calling for two years' notification by either side in event of desire to terminate.)

He did say, however:

"I do hope football will never get to be such a wishy-washy thing that nobody cares. In that case I hope it will be abandoned entirely."

Treasury Meets Victory Post

Treasury Department and Victory Post of the American Legion meet tonight in the first game of a Community Center Indoor Softball League double-header at 7 o'clock at Tech gymnasium. Victory Post's last effort was an upset loss, 2-1, at the hands of Community Center All-Stars.

Orren Shanks is expected to toe the mound for the Treasury men, while either Harold Steffes or "Tarzan" Webb will hurl for the Servicemen.

The second game, at 8:30, will be between the Unknowns and Procurement Division. It will be the latter's second start in the league.

Walt Disney Heads Hollywood Gardens; Will Seat 41,000

By the United Press.

Hollywood, Dec. 5.—Hollywood took a long stride toward its goal of securing the top fixtures in American sports today when 100 gilt-edged film and business leaders, headed by Walt Disney and Bing Crosby, disclosed plans for a $1,500,000 project to be known as Hollywood gardens, the "Madison Square Garden of the West."

Disney, president of the group, said that the building, which will have "elastic walls," has been privately financed and that construction will begin in three months for an opening next September. No stock will be sold to the public. The gardens will have a two-fold purpose, including an auditorium with top seating capacity for 41,000 persons, and a recreational center for skating, dancing, miniature golf, ping pong, tennis, badminton and other light sports.

The main arena will have permanent facilities for 25,500 spectators and will offer indoor track and football, boxing, wrestling, major league ice-hockey, polo and jai alai. It will be opened with a championship boxing match already promised by Mike Jacobs, the New York promoter. Within two years, the group said, the annual American Bowling Congress also will be brought West. Forty-two alleys will be built, the largest number west of Chicago.

The gardens will be built on a 35-acre tract in Southwest Hollywood near Gilmore Stadium, and will provide sufficient space to make such ventures as big league hockey, jai alai, rodeos and stock shows profitable.

The main arena will be so designed that secondary walls can be closed in to provide any size amphitheater desired. Thus, on a small show, spectators will not be forced to sit in an auditorium with only one-fourth or less of the seats filled.

PGA Seniors Elect Head

George Sergeant Atlanta Pro, Is New President of Group

By the Associated Press.

Augusta, Ga., Dec. 5.—The Senior's Association of the Professional Golfers Association elected George Sergeant, of Atlanta, its first president today and voted to postpone its annual tournament one day, playing Wednesday and Thursday over the Augusta National Course.

The postponement of the $2,000 event which is open only to professionals over 50 years of age was decided upon after rain prevented a preliminary four-ball event today.

The Seniors tournament was reduced from 54 to 36 holes although the prize money was not affected.

The four-ball best ball matches will hold the Seniors' attention tomorrow, after which the field of more than 40, grouped in three classifications, will set out in quest of titles now held by Jock Hutchison, of Golf, Ill.; David Ogilvie, sr., of Augusta, and George Low, of Philadelphia. Low did not return this year.

Other officers elected to serve their first terms in the Seniors' organization are David Ogilvie, of Augusta, vice president, and Capt. Charles R. Clarke, of Willoughby, Ohio, secretary. Val Flood, of New Britain, Conn., who served as honorary president at the inaugural tournament here last year, was given a like position in the new setup.

President Sergeant won the United States Open in 1909, the Canadian Open in 1912 and served as president of the P. G. A. from 1920 through 1927.

Stadium Committee Holds Open Meeting

Representatives of all Washington civic organizations will gather in the gold room of the Hamilton Hotel tonight at 8 o'clock to further plans for the erection of a municipal coliseum. A report will be heard from the fact-finding committee, appointed at the first meeting, which will outline the various types of coliseums, cost of erection and operating methods now in use in various cities throughout the country.

The Junior Chamber of Commerce, Board of Trade, Rotary, Kiwanis and various neighborhood associations are expected to send representatives. Citizens interested in the movement are invited to attend. J. Leighton Cornwell, acting chairman of the general committee, will preside.

Gloves Card Tomorrow

Fifteen Bouts on Program at Turners In Quarterfinals

Fifteen bristling bouts will be offered at Joe Turner's Arena tomorrow night when novices advance to the quarterfinals round in the third consecutive week of Golden Gloves warfare.

Making the first defense of the 135-pound title he won after a series of upsets in last year's tourney, Carroll Wright, boxing under the sponsorship of National Boxing Club, makes his 1938 debut against Marion Pulzone, rugged Alexandria Terminal star.

In a 147-pound senior number Lewis Stea (unattached) is pitted against Norbert Lehrner (Merrick Boys' Club).

Harry Raskin, trainer, has volunteered and had his services accepted as a roving second among the novices. In other words Raskin will handle any novice desiring his services and assist in any other way possible.

Pairings for tomorrow night:

NOVICE CLASS—112-pound class—Eddie Stoneman (National Boxing Club) vs. Billy Miller (Merrick Boys Club). 118-pound class—Joe Vernon (No. 4 Police Boys Club) vs. Leonard Lehrner (Merrick Boys Club). 126-pound class—Billy Colbert (Washington Boys Club) vs. Dan Pilkington (unattached); Joe Lewis (Colmar Manor American Legion) vs. Bernard Daly (Fort Myer), and Stanley Stephenson (D. C. National Guard) vs. Kenn Swann (Merrick Boys Club). 135-pound class—Mike O'Brien (D. C. National Guard) vs. Howard Biafkin (unattached); Bobby Hockenberry (National Boxing Club) vs. Ben Abernathy (Merrick Boys Club); Tony Olaifaro (No. 5 Police) vs. Willie Sheehi (unattached), and Ronald Ashen (Merrick Boys Club) vs. Clyde Hayes (Washington Boys Club). 147-pound class—Johnny Mancini (Pete's A. C.) vs. Don Tucker (D. C. National Guard; Harvey Schweir (Colmar Manor American Legion) vs. Alex Glendenning (Alexandria Boys Club), and Henry Johnson (unattached) vs. Nick Mancini (Pete's A. C.). Heavyweight class—Basil Harris (Georgetown University) vs. Clarence Irwin (Pete's A. C.).

BUY NO ANTI-FREEZE
...until you read these facts about Du Pont "Zerone"*

A FRIENDLY WARNING: You cannot be sure of getting the best value in anti-freeze until you know what Du Pont has to offer in "Zerone."

First, extraordinary anti-freeze protection. Scientific tests prove that "Zerone" would keep water from freezing solid even at 215° below zero. You'll never encounter temperatures like that, so you can be sure "Zerone" used in accordance with directions will protect your car in the coldest weather you'll ever experience.

The materials from which "Zerone" is made are so effective you need comparatively little "Zerone" to achieve protection. That's economy. Properly used, replacements of "Zerone" are little indeed—and that's economy, too.

Furthermore, scientific tests prove that the mixture of "Zerone" and water passes off engine heat better than water alone. That improves engine performance.

"Zerone" in a clean cooling system prevents formation of rust and corrosion—avoids power losses, helps save fuel and oil. Those are the facts, so ask your dealer to protect your radiator with "Zerone" today. It's only $1.00 a gallon. Du Pont, "Zerone" Division, Wilmington, Delaware.

Nelson B. Bell About the Showshops

The Outlook Is Bright For Show-Shopping

Loew Interests Announce Midwinter Films; 'Pins and Needles' Sponsors Feted Today; This, That and the Other in the Theater

WITH the spirit of Yuletide giving gradually dominating the thought and action of all and sundry, it is Master J. Raypun Bell—no relation—of the Loew organization, who "gives out" with the information that regardless of the number of shopping days left before Christmas, showshopping at the Capital, Palace and Columbia theaters will be profitable throughout the months of December and January. He even submits some documentary evidence to indicate, if not to prove, it.

BELL

For example, considerable stress is laid upon the superiority of "The Citadel," costarring Robert Donat and Rosalind Russell, and "Dramatic School," starring Luise Rainer, with Alan Marshall, Paulette Goddard, Ann Rutherford, Lana Turner and numerous others, the incoming attractions at the Palace and Capitol, respectively. For half of these we already can vouch, having previewed "The Citadel," but not "Dramatic School." That is an item down for unspooling today at 1:30. "The Citadel," as has been chronicled here previously, is an excellent can of celluloid.

After these two have come and gone, the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios will supply the Loew houses with a succession of new releases comprised of "Out West With the Hardys," with Lewis S. Stone, Mickey Rooney and all the rest of the Hardy family; Reginald Owen, Terry Kilburn, that remarkable youngster who made his bow to American audiences in "Lord Jeff," in Dickens' "A Christmas Carol;" Franciska Gaal, Franchot Tone, Walter Connolly and Rita Johnson in "The Awakening of Katrina" and Jeanette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy, reunited in Technicolor, under the direction of Woody S. Van Dyke, in "Sweethearts."

In the meantime, United Artists will be sending along a group of new footages including "The Young in Heart," with Janet Gaynor, Douglas Fairbanks, jr., Roland Young, Billie Burke, Minnie Dupree, Paulette Goddard and Richard Carlson, already celebrated here; Gary Cooper, Merle Oberon, Patsy Kelly and Walter Brennan in "The Cowboy and the Lady," and Fredric March and Joan Bennett in "Trade Winds."

Not to be left out of the running, Twentieth Century-Fox will come through with Shirley Temple in "The Little Princess," Adolphe Menjou, Jack Oakie, Arleen Whelan and Jack Haley in "Thanks for Everything;" Loretta Young and Richard Greene in the Technicolor production of "Kentucky;" Alice Faye, Constance Bennett, Jane Wyman and Charles Farrell in "Tail Spin," and "Up the River," with Tony Martin, Phyllis Brooks, Preston Foster, Arthur Treacher, Alan Dinehart, Slim Summerville and Jane Darwell.

All these will be augmented by several as yet undetermined productions from the Paramount studios, always divided on a 50-50 basis, under existing contracts, between the Loew and Warner Brothers' first-run outlets in the Capital.

The procedure in this instance, needless to say, is not to hang up your stockings, but to get into them and come on downtown.

Speaking of Arleen Whelan, as we were somewhere back there in connection with "Thanks for Everything," this fortnight's visitor in Washington from Hollywood goes on to New York this morning. After a week or so in Gotham, she will return to this city briefly and then hie, or fly, her back to the West Coast for more flicker-making. The Twentieth Century-Fox executives in New York are wasting no time in getting Miss Whelan's entertainment under way. Arriving there early today—if the ships are flying—she will be entertained this afternoon at a cocktail party at the Stork Club. It is also highly probable that she will make personal appearances in conjunction with the New York premiere of "Thanks for Everything"—although that will not come under the head of entertainment, for her. Arleen has had fun in Washington. That's why she is dropping off here for another day or two, en route back to the mines.

Yesterday's Variety Club luncheon at the Willard, in honor of A. Julian Brylawski, was a double-barreled affair. It not only bade him godspeed at the end of his year's term as chief barker of the club, but also celebrated his birthday. His place of honor on the dais was shared by his mother and his wife. The senior Mrs. Brylawski is "mother" of Variety in Washington.

The entire board of governors were "kings for the day," with active duties delegated to John J. Payette, Variety's first chief barker, and Carter Barron, immediately preceding Mr. Brylawski in the same high post, and Attorney Alvin L. Newmyer serving as toastmaster. Felicitous speeches were made by Dr. Abram Simon and Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen, to which Mr. Brylawski replied in kind.

As a combination retiring and birthday gift, the guest of honor was presented with a handsome radio-phonograph by the club membership.

October seems to have been a pretty good month in the estimation of the Nation's screen-gazers. The Motion Picture Herald's recapitulation of key-city box-office statements for the tenth month turned up seven feature releases attracting sufficient patronage to justify their listing as the "Box-Office Champions of October." Washington has seen and approved all seven of the champs. They are: "The Arkansas Traveler," "Boys Town," "Drums," now on view at the Capitol; "Stablemates," "That Certain Age," "Too Hot to Handle" and "You Can't Take It With You." Not much to quibble about there. You can't quibble much when money talks, anyhow. So what?

Since a long male cast is necessary for the enactment of the play, open tryouts for "Ceiling Zero," second production of the Pierce Hall Players' season, will be held in Pierce Hall, Fifteenth and Harvard streets northwest, tomorrow night at 8 o'clock.

This is the play of commercial aviation given its premiere in the National Theater a few seasons ago, with the late Osgood Perkins and John Litel in the principal roles, and later made into a picture by the Warner Brothers, with Pat O'Brien and James Cagney costarred. The Pierce Hall production will be directed by Howard F. Wentworth.

Pierce Hall being a spacious establishment, the "Ceiling Zero" tryouts will not interfere with the screening of "The Big Parade" by the Film Society of Washington, scheduled for the main auditorium tomorrow night at 8:30. Especially written as a screen play by Laurence Stallings and produced in 1925, "The Big Parade" took immediate rank as one of the great pictures of all time. It was directed by King Vidor and projected John Gilbert, Renee Adoree, Karl Dane—all three since deceased—Hobart Bosworth and numerous others into the top flight of film players. This will mark the second of the Film Society's Wednesday evening events of the season and is made possible through the co-operation of the Museum of Modern Art Film Library of New York.

"Wings of the Morning," the foreign-made Technicolor production which introduced Annabella to American audiences, will be presented tomorrow and Thursday as chief feature of the International Cinema Festival program at the Little Theater. Henry Fonda, Leslie Banks, and the great tenor, John McCormack, have the foremost roles in this exciting story.

The carefully selected and skillfully co-ordinated festival programs, incidentally, have attracted unusual crowds to the Little since their inauguration ten days ago with first Washington presentations of "Janosik." Grapevine reports have it that business has been almost doubled. Stop me if I'm wrong.

The 28 members of the International Ladies Garment Workers Union who brought their revue, "Pins and Needles" to the National Theater last night for a week's engagement, are being entertained at a series of teas today by members of the Washington League of Women Shoppers, a consumer organization which has interested itself in improving the conditions of labor by "using its buying power for justice." The league is sponsoring the Friday night performance of the revue to raise funds for its winter program. The teas this afternoon are being held in the homes of Mrs. Emily Newell Blair, Alexandria, Va.; Mrs. William O. Douglas, Silver Spring, Md.; Mrs. Donald Richberg, Mrs. Ernest Gruening and Mrs. Ernest K. Lindley, five sponsors of the league, of which Mrs. Mordecai Ezekiel is president.

A department scout, in the person of Richard L. Coe—with whom you will become increasingly acquainted as time goes on—reports after previewing "Professor Mamlock," at the Rialto Theater yesterday morning, that here is an intensely controversial film of such vivid action as to tear an audience right out of its collective seat. It is, says he, a gripping story, thrillingly told.

As a play by Friedrich Wolfe, it was performed with practically no success by the WPA Federal Theater in New York several seasons ago. As a film, it has one great difficulty to overcome. While it could be democracy's sweeping indictment of the Nazi dictatorship, it actually stems from the Lenfilm Studios in Leningrad, where the philosophy of government is subject to almost equal distrust. Apart from any international or political implication, "Professor Mamlock" is exciting entertainment. It will be presented in the Rialto Theater, beginning on Friday of this week. More later.

Preserving-the-Eternal-Unities Note

You should have held those "Ceiling Zero" tryouts yesterday, Mr. Wentworth. It was a perfect day for it.

New York, Dec. 5.

THE NEW publication, U. S. Camera Magazine, announced that the editors intend to be the first to publish the work of Cecil Beaton since Vogue's lamentable experience with him. Contrary to the announcement, however, Beaton's photos won't appear in the next issue. There were too many protests . . . Jack Pearl, who has been absent from the Broadway stage for more than six years, will return next month—to head the Casa Manana show . . . Bernard Baruch is considering taking a Government job—as an official of a new War Plan Board.

ELMER RICE, author of "American Landscape," was discussing its Civil War touches with Maxwell Anderson and Robert E. Sherwood . . . "My grandfather was drafted in the Civil War," Rice stated, "but put up the money required by law to have somebody else go in his stead" . . . "My grandfather," Anderson informed, "did the same thing. He put up the money for somebody to fight in his stead, too" . . . "My grandfather was different," Sherwood confessed. "He put up the necessary money, too" . . . "What was so different about it?" the others asked . . . "Well," Sherwood replied, "in his case there was some question—as to how he got the money."

WALTER O'HARA ex-managing director of the Narragansett racetrack, has settled his income tax difficulties and will leave for Hollywood tomorrow to confer with H. B. Mayer regarding racing in California . . . Ira Gershwin and Jerome Kern, who formed a new song-writing team, have completed nine songs for their new show and are waiting for a suitable story . . . Friends of Alexis Bolan, who portrays a foreign minister in "Leave It to Me," insists that he really is Prince Alexis Obolensky, sr.—and was ousted from his Russian Nobility Club, because he accepted such work.

NICK THE GREEK, who has been in Hollywood for almost two years, still is refusing all offers to write his story for the movies and to appear in the biographic film. The last offer made to the famous gambler was one for $20,000 . . . "You're foolish if you turn it down," the producer advised him. "After all, Nick, $20,000 is a lot of money" . . . "Sure it is," Nick agreed, "but I'm not an actor" . . . He proffered a pack of cards. Here—cut . . . High card—for $20,000."

THE LEONIDOFF deal to produce the next show at the International Casino hit a snag yesterday. The Rockefellers, who employ Leonidoff, are objecting. There will be only two free guests at the Financial Writers' Association show—President Martin of the Stock Exchange and Bill Douglas, head of the Securities and Exchange Commission.

ORSON WELLES was supervising the removal of the scenery used in his recent production, "Danton's Death" . . . The stage manager packed the cyclorama which was used—consisting of 10,000 Halloween masks formed into one backdrop . . . "What'll we do with this?" Welles was asked . . . "We'll take it with us when we start touring with 'Henry IV,'" he replied . . . "But in all those theaters?" the stage manager persisted. "Where would we need to hang it?" . . . "In the orchestra," Welles sighed, "just behind the seventh row."

WHEN AMBASSADOR Joe Kennedy returns for his annual vacation, Washington expects him to bring back another plan for settling the British war debts . . . By all means read Hendrik Willem Van Loon's "Our Battle." . . . On the set where "Son of Frankenstein" is being screened, Donnie Dunnigan, who appears in the picture, saw Boris Karloff and started to introduce him to Donnie's six-year-old visitor. "Oh, I know him," the visitor greeted. "I was a movie star before he was." . . . "Really?" asked Karloff. . . . "Yeah," the lad identified. "I used to be Baby Le Roy.

MAYOR LaGUARDIA met Arturo Toscanini last week and discussed present conditions. "It should be so simple," the maestro sighed. "For instance, I like certain food, and I eat it" . . . "Yes," returned the Mayor, "but suppose the fish don't like you" . . . "All right, then," replied Toscanini. "So I'm happy—and the fish is happy. But I don't eat it."

THE NATIVES of Pineville, Mo., who appeared in the film, "Jesse James," required movie doubles—because they can't ride horses . . . Sightseers, who came to see the movie being made, left $300,000 in purchases. The town's population is 473 . . . Leo Deslys, who became a band leader at Le Mirage, has a 65 per cent interest in the place during his stay . . . Robert Irwin, now in Sing Sing, sent for Warden Lawes to help him "visualize" by posing for a portrait.

Toy Matinees Planned by Lust Theaters

The five Maryland theaters directed by Sidney Lust will play Santa Claus to needy children of Montgomery and Prince Georges counties by presenting toy matinees on Monday afternoon, December 19, at 4 p. m., at which thousands of playthings will be collected to brighten the lives of underprivileged youngsters during Christmas.

The lobbies of the theaters will be appropriately decorated for the occasion. There will be large, elaborately decorated Christmas trees. A Santa Claus will greet the children at each theater.

Special film programs are being arranged for the occasion, and the only admission price will be a toy, article of clothing or foodstuff, which will be distributed by various charitable organizations.

In Bethesda, the Boro Theater is presenting its matinee with the co-operation of the Bethesda Volunteer Fire Department and the Bethesda-Chevy Chase Tribune.

The Milo Theater, in Rockville, is co-operating with the Holiday Exchange and the Montgomery Sentinel.

The Cameo Theater, in Mount Rainier, is working with Charles F. Huntemann Post, American Legion, and the Prince Georgean.

In Hyattsville, the Arcade Theater has the co-operation of the Kiwanis Club, Social Service League and the Hyattsville Independent.

The Marlboro Theater, in Upper Marlboro, is co-operating with the Lions Club and the Enquirer-Gazette.

Rome; sketches by Arthur Arent, Marc Blitzstein, Emanuel Eisenberg, Charles Friedman, Harold J. Rome and David Gregory. Production designed by S. Syrjala; costumes by S. Syrjala and Norma Fuller. Dance direction by Adele Jerome; choreography by Benjamin Zemach. Staged by Charles Friedman. At the National Theater.

A large audience, obviously in sympathy with the viewpoint and aspirations of Labor Stage, Inc., last evening accorded the International Ladies Garment Workers Union Players' performance of "Pins and Needles" a rousing reception at the National Theater.

There were those in the audience, no doubt, who were unaware that the I. L. G. W. U. Players actually are workers on a tuneful and spirited vacation from their workrooms and shops and not professional actors and actresses attempting a garish and gaudy revue in the manner of the Ziegfelds, the Carrolls and the Whites. They may have experienced some early difficulty in orienting themselves to the purpose and temper of the plain but pungent sketches and the simply staged and unpretentiously executed musical numbers that flashed by in the two acts and 19 scenes of a revue that cuts a new pattern in musical entertainment. As the evening wore on, however, they found themselves more and more surrendering to the sincerity, the spontaneity and the capability of those engaged in their first adventure of this sort on the stage. The evening wound up at 10:45 in more or less of a blaze of glory for the enthusiastic and energetic young people behind the footlights.

"Pins and Needles" dedicates itself, first and foremost, to items of "social significance" as they pertain to the problems of Labor. It is not above an occasional fling at the "favored few" and pays its respects also to international figures conspicuously identified with the world's present state of unrest. Not always too deftly written or too transparently clarified, its many skits are notable for a high content of satiric humor and its songs for lyrical expressiveness that frequently outweighs their melody..

Deficient in Voices

If the cast betrays any flagrant deficiency, it is in the lack of first-grade solo voices. The solo numbers for the most part are better than their rendition. The ensembles are sprightly and vigorous and such dances as are attempted are adequate to meet the revue's requirements.

Of the 11 sketches in the first act, the one of greatest revue potentialities is "Sunday in the Park," a hymn to the laboring man's outing on his one day of rest. Many characters are involved in this typical glimpse of metropolitan life and they are well impersonated by Fred Licciardi, Adele Diamond, Ruth Rubinstein, Nettie Harary, Orrin Jannings, Eugene Goldstein, Nat Lehman, Irene Fox, Enzo Grassi, Harold Clark, Sidney Rothfeld, Joe Alfasa, Sol Israel and Carl Milletaire. The song of the title was marred by the evening's single instance of painfully off-key singing by Mr. Licciardi and Miss Diamond.

Next in first-act effectiveness were the "Mussolini Handicap," the most daring bit of travesty in the piece; "The General Is Unveiled," a slightly obscure interval of choreography; "The Little Red School House" and "Economics I."

Some Fine Recitatives

The second act, in its eight devisions, outpoints the first in both substance and wit. "Lesson in Etiquette," with Ella Gerber as the expert; "F. T. P. Plowed Under," a keen burlesque of the Federal Theater Project, with Harold Clark, Ethel Kushner, Sol Israel, Orrin Jannings and Sidney Rothfeld in the cast; "One Big Union for Two," a tuneful ensemble; "Four Little Angels of Peace," with Harold Clark, Joe Alfasa, Sidney Rothfeld and Orrin Jannings as Mussolini, a Japanese, Hitler and Chamberlain, and "Slumming Party," featuring Ethel Kushner and Nettie Harary, all are cogent, if not continuously convulsing.

There are four splendidly conceived topical songs scattered through the two acts—two to each. "Public Enemy No. 1," an aftermath of the "Mussolini Handicap" burlesque maternity marathon—a trifle raucous as to lyrics—and "Vassar Girl Finds a Job" are beautifully done by Ruth Rubinstein; "Dear Beatrice Fairfax"—also a bit risque by Millie Weitz, and "What Good Is Love?" by Nettie Harary.

The music by Harold J. Rome is tricky throughout and lyricized with exceptional skill. It is instrumentally interpreted for the singers' accompaniment by beautiful performances by George Reiser and Al Geroux at two grand pianos. There is no orchestra and none is needed.

The settings and costumes essay no spectacular lavishness, but contribute, nevertheless, to the even balance and sustained tone of an offering that is unique among modern musical entertainments.

Herb Smith, Jack Sorian, Kendall Cole and numerous others in lesser parts do yoeman's service during the evening, under the swift direction of Charles Friedman.

"Pins and Needles," in short, is an interesting and diverting innovation that betrays a keen sense of theater on the part of Labor Stage, Inc., in general, and the I. L. G. W. U. Players, in particular, provided it can be accepted in the spirit in which it was created and is so ebulliently executed. Secretary Ickes, President William Green of the A. F. L. and other high functionaries of Government and labor were present in last night's audience.

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., Dec. 5.—Are Madeleine Carroll and Shirley Ross feuding on the "Cafe Society" set? As though two girls couldn't arrange their own fight—this time the writer did it for them.

HEDDA HOPPER

It starts with Shirley throwing a glass of champagne in Madeleine's face, which she didn't want to do. But Director Ed Griffith said, "Go on, give it to her—in the puss." She did. Madeleine's beauty was marred in one take!

Shirley felt so sorry about it she started to bawl, but Madeleine said, "Wait a minute. As long as you began it, I'll finish it." And with that she let go the seltzer and—squish, but Madeleine's aim wasn't so good. They had to repeat it 12 times. Shirley wasn't crying then—she was hoping. "If I'd known what you were going to do," she snapped, "I'd have given you more, baby." However, the girls walked off the set arm in arm.

Her studio is evidently trying to trump up some added interest between Merle Oberon and David Niven. But that shy, blue-eyed, brown-haired English girl, Jackie Dyer, who isn't yet 21 and is here with her grandmother, just smiles like the Mona Lisa. You see, in most circles, an engagement is announced by the girl's parents—not by the boy's enemies. Miss Dyer goes back to England the first of January to settle her estate, but she'll be back. And is David beaming!

Dorothy Appleby, who plays the femme lead opposite Doug Corrigan in "The Flying Irishman," ha-ha's the rumor that Doug is girlshy. Dainty Dotty, who used to croon with Rudy Vallee's orchestra (you know, one of the girls Vallee discovers and the studio rediscovers), is having planey of laughs. The other day during a process shot when lights went out, Dot said, "Don't do that, Doug." When lights came up, Doug turned to her and said, "You're a little devil." And for the first time laughed out loud. Which should mean something—though I don't quite know what.

Irene Dunne told me there was a pause on the "Love Affair" picture because Delmar Daves, who recently married, was writing another romantic sequence. He got pretty hot in the midst of it, for over the phone came the news that his house had just burned down.

Freddie Bartholomew has returned from his tour with a major general in tow. Aunt "Sissie" was afraid he was losing his British accent. Hence the switch from the American boy who's been with him ever since he arrived here.

Freddie's hoping for a dressing room on the men's side. He's sick of being in with all the girls

While our sophisticated stars go "Western," Buck Jones slips off his horse and into the drawing room for "Me and My Girl," with Helen Twelvetrees—and not a horse in sight.

It's Brian Donlevy who's taking the beating from that bull whip in Akin Tamiroff's hands in "Union Pacific." Charlie Bickford and J. Carrol Naish both turned it down. I don't blame them. If Akim missed by a quarter of an inch, he'd take a face with him—and all because Brian smokes in the presence of a lady—meaning Barbara Stanwyck.

Doris Kenyon and husband Albert Lasker arrive middle of the month and move into a hotel bungalow while the house she's worked so hard to save is being torn down—and completely rebuilt.

The first night after Myrna Loy had engaged a new French chef, she ordered a New England boiled dinner. He'd never heard of it. Myrna did the cooking herself.

Hedy Lamarr shot out a concession at Ocean Park the other evening and passed unrecognized by

Norma Kranna has a bad case of telephonitis—Kitty Carlisle in New York is the cause of it.

Now Dick Powell has a mad on at Slapsie Maxie, because he's nicknamed Dick "Palooka." Dick returns the compliment by using Slapsie's middle name—Everett—which Maxie's tried to keep a deep, dark secret. Now I ask you—Everett Rosenbloom.

Building Boom Now Starting, Architect Says

Open Money Market Seen by Underwood; Looks Into Future

By Thomas M. Cahill.

Opinion that the country is at the beginning of a healthy building boom was expressed yesterday by Gilbert Stanley Underwood, noted West Coast architect, and a consulting architect for the Treasury Department, in an address before members of Washington Building Congress at the Lafayette Hotel. Reminding the assembly that outside of Government subsidized construction no important projects have gone ahead since the banks stopped loaning money, he reassured it with the statement that there is now a definite opening of the money market.

Mr. Underwood spoke on architecture of the future as well as the national building outlook, and dealing with the first division of his subject, said that in America the coming architecture will be modern, but the man who can define its style and its characteristics is a seer far beyond the forecasting powers of the ordinary person.

It will abhor, he predicted, and profitably, he believes, the tin cornice, the meaningless column and entablature, the art for art's sake alone type of design. It will be materialism and realism, and in time, out of these elements will grow a beauty that will be worthy and understandable. It will be function clearly expressed, clearly understood, dressed in the garment of sincerity. So much for the spiritual quality that must always be a part of any good piece of art or of architecture.

"In materials," Mr. Underwood prophesied, "one cannot begin to dream of the changes that will come. It is certain that the cumbersome and heavy methods of construction will go. Perhaps half the weight of our present structures will be saved and the new structures will consist largely of just two elements, insulation and metal. Stone, brick, concrete—most of these will pass. High test steel will build our frames. Insulating slabs covered with nonferrous metals will form our walls. Light metal shapes will form our floors, and plastics, in one form or another, will make the surfaces to walk upon."

Change Under Way

He emphasized, however, that no layman of the day can observe public prints, magazines, movies, without realizing that a definite change is taking place in architecture and that we are going modern, whether we want to or not. "Modern" architecture is not yet a style that can be classified, unless we say that it is simply something that is not classical. Originally it came as a postwar effort to biuld essentials at lowest possible cost. It was an architecture of poverty. Its start was in Germany and France and it spread quickly to the Nordic countries where today it probably is finding its best expression.

"Whether we like it or not," he argued, "we Americans are great borrowers and copyists. We ape anything that has the flavor or the taint of the European, but we give our borrowings a twist and an ex-

Cotton Rally Follows Drop

New York, Dec. 5 (AP).—Cotton recovered from early losses of 9 to 13 points on active foreign liquidation today and closed unchanged to 3 points net higher. March advanced from 8.03 to 8.17 and closed at 8.15.

The market opened 5 to 8 points lower in sympathy with continued easiness at Liverpool. Prices encountered momentary resistance as scale down orders were uncovered, but renewed December liquidation carried that delivery down to 8¼ cents. When pressure from abroad let up, prices responded to trade and local buying. Trading, however, quieted. Prices closed close to the best levels for the day.

Cottonseed Oil

Cottonseed oil was lower today under liquidation and local selling promoted by the decline in lard and hogs and lower crude oil. Final prices were 4 to 7 points net lower. Sales, 142 contracts. December closed 7.33, January, 7.36, March 7.50, May 7.58, July 7.67.

World Consumption Of Coffee Expands

New York, Dec. 5.—Consumption of coffee in the United States was 1,081,887 bags or 24 per cent higher for the five months of the coffee crop year, July through November, 1938, than during the similar period of 1937, while in Europe deliveries rose by 516,000 bags or 11.7 per cent and in other parts of the world the gain was 100,000 bags or 21.6 per cent.

World consumption, therefore, shows an increase of 1,697,887 bags or 18.1 per cent, the New York Coffee and Sugar Exchange revealed today.

C. & O. Ry. Plans $30,000,000 Issue

By the Associated Press.

The Chesapeake & Ohio Railway Co. asked the Interstate Commerce Commission yesterday for permission to issue and sell $30,000,000 principal amount refunding and improvement 3½ per cent bonds. Funds from the issue would go to retire a like amount of first consolidated 5 per cent bonds due May 1, 1939. The application said it was proposed to sell the issue to Halsey, Stuart & Co., Inc., and Otis & Co. at par and accrued interest.

As a part of the financing of the issue the C. & O. proposes to issue conditionally and pledge under its refunding and improvement mortgage $30,000,000 principal amount of general mortgage 4½ per cent bonds.

Winter Wheat Areas Report Lack of Rain

Prices Up 1¼ Cents Visible Supply Less Corn Also Higher

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Dec. 5.—Prospects that unofficial reports tomorrow would emphasize widespread moisture deficiency in domestic winter crop areas did much to hoist Chicago wheat values 1¼ cents today.

A substantial decrease of 1,379,000 bushels in the United States wheat visible supply total was also a factor. In addition, export sales of about 750,000 bushels of Canadian wheat furnished stimulus.

Corn rose with wheat and as a result of 1⅝ to 2 cents upturn of Argentine corn quotations. Export business in United States corn was believed to be considerably more than the amount acknowledged, 250,000 bushels.

At the close, Chicago wheat futures were ½ to 1¼ cents higher compared with Saturday's finish, December, 64⅛@64¼; May, 66⅜@66⅞. Corn, ¾ to 1¼ up; December, 48; May, 51⅜@51½. Oats, ⅛ to ⅞ advanced, rye showing ⅜ to ½ bulge, and provisions varying from 15 cents drop to a gain of 2 cents.

Bulgaria to Increase Payments on Bonds

New York, Dec. 5 (AP).—Bankers informed the holders today that the Bulgarian government has agreed to increase its payments in foreign exchange next year on the Kingdom of Bulgaria 7 per cent settlement loan of 1926 and the 7½ per cent stabilization loan of 1928.

After January 1, it was announced, the payment in exchange would be increased from 32½ per cent of the coupon to 36½ for the first half of 1939 and to 40 per cent for the second half.

Stocks Recede as Uncertainty Rules Steel Shares Rally in Final Trading Sugar Futures Break on 1939 Quotas

New York, Dec. 5.—Security markets got nowhere today and on the big board trading in stocks was the dullest since September 22. Uncertainty over the immediate course of business and the international poker game abroad are the most noticeable causes of the hesitation in domestic security trading and at the moment there is no indication of when this condition will be changed. Consequently stocks followed a course similar to that of the two preceding days.

Judged by the composite average there was a net decline of 0.21 point, with the steels making a partially successful effort to stand out against the trend but other groups showing minor losses. Bethlehem was a leader, gaining 1¼ points. It was one of the few active stocks that ended the day as much as a point away from Saturday's close. United States Steel was up ⅝, but Republic eased.

Sperry staged another demonstration in the aviation division, closing up 2½ points at a new high. Small advances were made by North American Aviation, Glenn Martin and Boeing. The steels and aircrafts both revived on the renewed talk of Federal spending for armaments. New York Shipbuilding preferred, which pranced along last week on this stimulant, added another 4½ points to a new high, but the common eased.

Far more sensational than the day's meaningless gyrations in stocks was the break in sugar futures on announcement of the 1939 production quota. The estimate for the year was placed by the AAA at 6,832,157 tons, whereas the trade had been looking for something between 200,000 and 300,000 tons less than this. The thing that upset the trade particularly was that the Federal agency did not include the year's carryover of sugar in reaching its 1939 quota figure. They did not take kindly to this particular bit of planning in Washington.

Sugar Breaks 25 Points

The result was that sugar futures broke the limit of 25 points. As a contract in sugar is relatively more expensive than those in other commodities, this meant a break of $280 per contract. The close was not quite at the lows of the day, a modest rally leaving futures off 22 to 24 points for the session.

Events abroad did not appear to have any influence in price trends. Fear of before the week-end that a war might develop between France and Italy were dissipated by the flat assertion of Premier Daladier that France has no intention of giving up any territory. Contrary to expectations, President Roosevelt, in his speech at Chapel Hill, N. C., made no reference to the international situation, although it is the most pressing problem at the present time. The Chief Executive appeared to be far more concerned with the results of the election of a month ago and to persuading his listeners that he did not regard it as a body blow.

Steel Outlook

In domestic business affairs, the weekly report on steel operations was accepted as bullish even though there was a reduction in the rate from last week. The American Iron and Steel Institute placed the figure at 59.9 per cent of capacity, a drop of 0.8 point or 1.3 per cent. This was smaller than had been anticipated and the trade has been expecting some tapering off for the balance of the year. Moreover the announcement of some sizeable orders during the day was a help to sentiment.

Commodities other than sugar moved in an orderly manner today. Prospects that tomorrow's private estimates will stress moisture deficiencies in winter wheat led to buying which was accelerated by a substantial decrease in the United States visible supply. Wheat futures rose 1¼ cents a bushel and closed up ½ to 1¼ cents. Cotton rallied after losses of 9 to 13 points on pressure from abroad to close unchanged to up 3 points.

Treasury Bonds Firm

Listed bonds drifted irregularly lower in another dull session today. The Treasury list acted well, under the impact of $700,000,000 of new securities and $942,000,000 of refunding. Speculative bonds moved lower, save for a few issues subject to special considerations. Foreign dollar issues also were soft. Turnover in all bonds was only $5,970,000.

Shorter Treasury bonds advanced 1/32 to 6/32 point on the financing announcement. The longer bonds, which will be affected price-wise by the new 2¾s, drifted lower to an equal extent. Guaranteed issues of the Farm and Home Corporations were dull. Best grade corporate bonds were idle, and usually off a small fraction.

Secondary railroad obligations drifted downward, with a few issues showing losses of a point or more. Borderline rails and default obligations likewise were soft. Rail holding bonds were down, while some of the utility holding issues improved. The communications group advanced. Local tractions gave way, but the variations were in small fractions.

Italian bonds dipped slightly, in response to the fresh agitation in Europe, and German bonds also lost ground. The Japanese group held steady. Small declines were the rule among best rated foreigns. Latin-American default securities were irregular, notwithstanding the interest aroused in such bonds by the impending Lima conference.

Government Takes Fourth Of All Income

Borrows 25 Billion In Past Seven Years; Relief Rolls Near Top

Boston, Dec. 5.—"The rising tide of governmental expenditures is absorbing an increasing proportion of national income," says the First National Bank of Boston today in its monthly letter. "Estimated governmental costs of all kinds—Federal, State and local—in 1937 aggregated approximately $17,000,000,000, or the equivalent of about one-fourth of the entire accountable income of all the people in this country.

"This means that if all governmental expenses were currently met, the American people on the average would work three months out of the year for the Government. Instead of paying all the bills, the Federal Government has borrowed about $25,000,000,000 since 1931. Yet in spite of the vast outlay of public funds the number of individuals on the relief roll is at nearly the record high level.

Who Pays the Bills

"Until recently the average person in this country has not been much concerned about public finance. Somehow or other he has felt that the bills will be paid by the wealthy. Recent data published by the commissioner of internal revenue dispel this illusion. These figures show that Federal expenditures alone, excluding debt payments and tax refunds, in 1929 were about the equivalent of the aggregate net income of all individuals receiving more than $150,000 a year.

"But the figures for 1936, the latest data available, show that Federal expenditures alone were almost identical with the aggregate taxable income, before exemptions and credits for dependents and earned income, of all individuals receiving more than $5,000 a year.

"To pay governmental expenses of all political units in this country would take more than 90 per cent of the entire net income of all individuals who render returns to the commissioner of internal revenue. Since 1929, the exemption of a single individual has been lowered from a minimum of $1,500 to $1,000, and a married person from $3,500 to $2,500. In consequence of this provision, the number of persons rendering taxable returns to the Federal Government increased by nearly one-third during this period."

First Dividend In 18 Years

New York, Dec. 5 (AP).—Directors of Superior Oil Corporation today declared a dividend of 10 cents a share on the common stock, payable December 28 to stock of record December 16. It was the first dividend the company, which has producing properties in Kansas, Texas, Oklahoma and Louisiana, has paid since 1920 when a total of $2 a share was disbursed in the year.

Universal Leaf Extra

Directors of Universal Leaf Tobacco Co. today declared an extra dividend of $2 a share on the common stock and lifted the quarterly raté to $1 a share from 75 cents previously paid. The extra is payable December 23 to stock of record December 13 and the quarterly disbursement will be made February 1 to stock of record January 17.

Mother Lode 50 Cents

Directors of Mother Lode Coalition Mines Co. declared a cash distribution of 30 cents a share on capital stock, payable December 23 to holders of record December 7. Last year at this time a distribution of 45 cents a share was made.

C. B. & Q. $2

St. Paul, Dec. 5 (AP).—Directors of Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad today declared a dividend of $2 a share on common stock, payable December 27 to holders of record December 17. A similar amount was paid at the end of last year. Today's dividend means income of approximately $1,700,000 each to the Great Northern and Northern Pacific railways, which jointly own all but a small proportion of the outstanding stock of the Burlington.

Steel Operations Dip to 59.9 Per Cent

New York, Dec. 5 (AP).—The American Iron & Steel Institute announced today operations in the Nation's steel plants this week were scheduled at 59.9 per cent of capacity, a decline of .8 of a point from the previous week's 60.7.

A month ago operations were 60.0 per cent and a year ago, 27.5.

pression that is essentially our own. Throughout the land now, one may see as many odd and peculiar evidences of modern architecture as he sees freaks in a sideshow. In the hands of an unrained and unskilled designer, the style becomes an effort to do it differently, to do it oddly, for that very reason alone. Our little villages and towns that copy the great metropolitan cities, are eruptions of an effort to go modern. To my own mind, however, they are no more ugly than the drab pressed brick fronts that were a standard expression of every Main street in America."

A. I. B. Dance

The annual winter subscription dance of Washington Chapter, American Institute of Banking, has been announced by George M. Rowzee, jr., Lincoln National Bank, who is acting as chairman of the chapter's entertainment committee this year. It will be held in the large ballroom of the Willard Hotel, December 10, from 10 until 1 p. m. Music will again be furnished by Don Lane's Orchestra.

Mr. Rowzee is being assisted in arrangements by the following committee: James Bruen, W. B. Hibbs & Co.; Harry Bergman, Riggs National Bank; Lloyd Carey, Washington Loan & Trust Co.; Richard Ehlis, American Security & Trust Co.; George Galleher, Lincoln National Bank; Donald Hollingsworth, Second National Bank; John E. Wilson, Morris Plan Bank, and Neal Wells, National Savings & Trust Co.

Shucker Strike Imperils D. C. Oyster Supply

225 Workers Quit on Western Shore Over 25 Pct. Cut in Wages

The oyster industry along the western shore of Maryland yesterday was forced to suspend operations as 255 shuckers in four large packing houses walked out, protesting they would not accept a wage cut with Christmas only three weeks away.

Warren Denton, owner of a packing house on Brooms Island, where the walkout began, said he had talked with owners of the other three plants and that the workers had been given until Wednesday to return to their jobs.

"Unless they return we will close down for the remainder of the season and throw all the oysters we have overboard," Denton said.

Should the strikers persist, a serious shortage in the oyster supply for the Washington-Baltimore area and points as far south as Atlanta and westward to Texas may occur, it was said. The output of the affected plants has averaged 25,000 gallons of oysters a week.

The workers left their jobs in protest of a reduction from 30 cents a gallon for shucking the oysters from their shells to 25 cents, it was said.

One Man Arrested

"To meet the competition on the Eastern Shore, where wages were cut to 25 cents per gallon last month, we had to do the same," Denton said. "The oyster business hasn't been so good lately because of the warm weather."

A colored man, listed by Maryland State police as Ed Dorsey, 26, was arrested on a charge of unauthorized use of an automobile after he transported workers from the Denton plant to the Woodburn Packing House at Solomon's Island, police said.

States Attorney Arthur Dowell, Prince Frederick, Md., where Dorsey was jailed, said there were reports the workers at the Woodburn plant had been threatened with harm if they continued work.

Four Maryland State troopers, two from Waldorf and two from Prince Frederick, and Sheriff Morris Buckler, of Prince Frederick, were summoned to the Woodburn plant to disperse the strikers. Police said there was no violence. The oyster shuckers gathered in small groups to discuss the walkout.

Four Firms Affected

There was no picketing by the strikers, a nonunion group. Denton said the men, all colored, had been earning from $16 to $25 a week under the old rate. The workers were paid at the 25-cent-per-gallon rate through Thanksgiving week and earned from $12 to $16, he said.

The workers told the packing house operators they would be willing to accept the 5-cent cut in wages after Christmas, but they needed the money to insure plenty in their homes for the holidays.

The shucking season runs from September 15 to March 15. Packing houses affected were the Warren Denton Co., where 100 walked out; the J. C. Lore Co., on Solomons Island, with 60 out; the Woodburn Co., with 60 out, and the Dowell & Sallers Co., at St. Leonard's Creek, with 35 out.

Funeral to Start At 10 A. M. Today For Morton Luchs

Final rites will be held today for Morton J. Luchs, prominent District realtor and civic leader, who died Sunday after a two-week illness. He was 54.

Weaver, Charles A. Jones, Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen, John Poole, Henry L. Kaufman, Simon Lyon and E. I. Kaufmann.

Vice president of Shannon & Luchs Co., realtors, Mr. Luchs was a founder and past president of the Washington Real Estate Board. He was a life-long resident of the District.

Tokyo Threatens Soviet on Treaty

Tokyo (Tuesday), Dec. 6 (U.P.).—The foreign office today forwarded to Moscow a sharp demand that Russia conclude a fisheries convention with Japan as "essential to the peace of East Asia."

The two countries have quarreled about fishing rights for years. Indicating the stern nature of Japan's new approach to the problem, a spokesman said Japan would never tolerate nullification of her fishing rights and "settlement of the question is most essential for the preservation of normal Russo-Japanese relations and consequently the peace of East Asia."

Rifle Association Held Subject to D. C. Taxation

The District Commissioners obtained one more source of revenue yesterday when the Court of Appeals held that the National Rifle Association of America, Inc., is subject to local taxation.

Reversing a decision of the lower court, Associate Justice Justin Miller held that the association is engaged in business. It cannot gain tax exemption through its educational work, he said, asserting that "at most, the educational phase of its activities is incidental to the social, recreational, promotional and propaganda phases which constitute the major reasons for its existence."

The court observed that "teaching the youth of the Nation to shoot" might, under certain conditions, result in an increase in the burden of crime control. Besides Justice Miller, Chief Justice D. Lawrence Groner and Associate Justice Harold M. Stephens heard the case.

P.-T. A. to Hear Ballou Tonight

The financial status of District public schools, operating this year under a stringent economy program, will be outlined tonight at 8 p. m. to members of the Petworth Parent-Teacher Association and the Petworth Civic Association by Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schools, in the auditorium of the Petworth School, Eighth and Shepherd streets northwest.

Dr. Ballou is expected to discuss the schools' progress in keeping within reduced appropriations for the 1938-39 school year for fuel, gas and ettectricity.

The schools were allotted $300,000 by Congress for the current year for heat and light. School officials have expressed fear that the expense of providing heat and light will rise above the $326,962 appropriation allowed for the 1937-38 school year.

Ihlder to Address Welfare Council In Montgomery

John Ihlder, head of the Alley Dwelling Authority, will address the Montgomery County Social Welfare Council tonight at the annual dinner of the organization at the Manor Country Club, Norbeck, beginning at 6:30 p. m.

The council, parent body of all social welfare groups in the county, is headed by Mrs. Minier Hostetler, who will preside at the dinner.

Plans for the affair are in charge of the council's hospitality committee, of which Mrs. Mahlon Kirk 4th is chairman. Other members include Mrs. Hattie Griffith, Mrs. Martha Fry, Mrs. Barbara Leech and Mrs. Dorothy Allan.

Martin Wins Medal In G. U. Debate

Richard K. Martin, of Taunton, Mass., was awarded the Merrick medal for being outstanding speaker in the annual Georgetown University debate contest held last night in Gaston Hall.

The question, argued by two teams from the Philodemic Society, 108-year-old debating club, was: "Resolver, That the Federal Government should cease spending money to stimulate business." The negative won.

The teams were composed of William J. Driscoll, jr., of Lawrence, Mass., and John T. Flynn, of Washington, for the affirmative, and William K. English, of Troy, N. Y., and Martin, for the negative. Judges were the Rev. Wilfrid Parsons, S. J., the Rev. Philip Clarke, S. J., and Francis I. Brady.

Dr. Plecker Fears Alexandria's Rise As a Gretna Green

Richmond, Va., Dec. 5 (AP).—Dr. W. A. Plecker, director of the State bureau of vital statistics, said today he feared Alexandria would attempt to attract marriage business which has formerly gone to Elkton, Md.

He referred to a recent New York Times article in which it was stated that "when Elkton, Md., ends its history as a Gretna Green next Thursday, the town that saw much of George Washington expects to fatten its economy on the romantic business that long has fed cab drivers and ministers in the Chesapeake Bay village.

Dr. Plecker said he received recently an order from Alexandria for 1,000 marriage license blanks, four times as many as the city usually asks.

(Clerk of the Court Elliot F. Hoffman has declared that Alexandria has no intention whatsoever of taking over Elkton's marrying trade. The Alexandria Ministerial Association has already taken action to discourage any move to make the city a new Gretna Green.)

Secondary Airport At College Park For District Urged

The Prince Georges County Chamber of Commerce will seek a secondary airport for Washington at College Park, Md., to supplement the Gravelly Point Port, it was reported yesterday.

The plans developed following a talk before the chamber by Sidney Mashbir, president of the Washington Institute of Technology, who said the growth of air transportation would make it feasible to have a secondary airport in the Washington vicinity.

The present College Park Airport was the first Government airport in the world, and was considered for development as Washington's main airport.

Virginia Governor's Mansion 'John Smith' Portrait a Hoax

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Dec. 5.—For 15 years, it appears, a portrait of Peter John Potemkin, Russian ambassador to the Court of St. James in 1862, has hung in the Virginia Governor's office as a portrait of Capt. John Smith, hero of the Jamestown colony.

The painting, for which between $1,100 and $1,500 was paid, was purchased in London and presented to the State in 1923 by 15 prominent Virginians. They had the report of London experts in Americana that it was "quite possibly" a picture of Smith and was 300 years old.

The Oriental garb of the subject led Alexander Weddell, United States Ambassador to Argentina and a citizen of Richmond, to investigate. In the National Portrait Gallery in London he found an engraving of an original Potemkin portrait by G. Kneller. From Russia he obtained a photograph of a similar portrait of the Muscovite envoy.

The three pictures have a wellnigh conclusive likeness. The whiskers, the Oriental headdress and robe, or coat, seem nearly the same.

H. M. Hake, director of the London Gallery, told Ambassador Weddell that Kneller, the painter, had a favorite engraver named "John Smith." It was the assumption that in this way the portrait somehow came to be known as Capt. Smith's.

Chandler's Rites In Arlington Today

Funeral services for Lieut. Comdr. Clarence A. Chandler, 63, Dental Corps, U. S. N., will be held at 11 a. m. today at Arlington National Cemetery.

A graduate of Georgetown University Dental School, he was commissioned in the Dental Corps in 1920. His last tour of duty was at the Washington Navy Yard. He died Friday at the Norfolk, Va., Naval Hospital.

Lieut. Comdr. Chandler is survived by his wife, Mrs. Havilene T. Chandler, of Norfolk.

Honorary pallbearers will be Commander A. H. Yando, Lieut. Comdr. A. R. Harris, Lieut. Comdr. T. D. Allan, Lieut. H. P. Riebe, Lieut. C. T. Logan and Lieut. L. D. Mitchell, all of the Dental Corps.

Mrs. Stettinius Dies; U. S. Steel Chairman's Mother

Locust Valley, N. Y., Dec. 5 (AP).—Mrs. Judith Carrington Stettinius, mother of Edward R. Stettinius, jr., chairman of the board of the United States Steel Corporation, died tonight at her home here.

A native of Richmond, Va., she was the widow of Edward R. Stettinius, former partner of J. P. Morgan, Assistant Secretary of War under President Wilson and director of Munitions during the World War.

She is survived by her son and two daughters, Mrs. John B. Marsh and Mrs. Juan T. Trippe, wife of the president of Pan-American Airways.

2 Safes Robbed, Waitress Held Up Over Week-End

Two safes were burgled and a 29-year-old waitress was assaulted and robbed in a series of crimes Sunday night and early yesterday.

Safes were opened in the Tate Drug Co., 1107 G street northwest, and the Charles G. Stott Paper Co., 804 Rhode Island avenue northeast.

No estimate could be obtained of the amount of money taken from the drug store. Raymond L. Sherberger, manager, said the strong box contained week-end receipts.

About $100 was taken from the paper company's safe, Mrs. Clayta Raney, a clerk, told police.

Mrs. Viola Rydberg, waitress in a restaurant in the 1300 block E street northwest, was assaulted by a colored man and robbed or her purse containing less than $1 early yesterday near the lunchroom. He was captured by two other colored men after a short chase.

Maryland Farms Once More Value Draft Horses

The roar of the motor is heard in country as well as town, but for all the evidences of the mechanical age, the fact remains that draft colts are kicking today on Maryland's hillsides, writes Ruth S. Hopkins in The Baltimore Sun. For the heavy horse is returning to the farm. At the latest State and county fairs, in farmboys' colt clubs, at sales, officials have noticed greatly quickened interest in the animal which had almost been outmoded by a gas-driven motor and a war.

The pinch of a national farm problem has made more effective the influence of the University of Maryland and the Maryland Horse Breeders' Association, which preach the economic wisdom of using drafters to balance farm income with farm output, and our bluegrass countries' natural advantages for raising horses.

Bluegrass country begins in northern New Jersey, swings down in a long, gentle curve through Maryland, the Virginias and Kentucky. The horses' own terrain, its lush pastures and mineral streams become rich blood and hard, strong bones; its rolling hills develop the heart, lungs and muscles of a young horse.

4 Bolivians Here To Study Schools

Four Bolivian educators arrived in Washington yesterday for week's visit in Washington during which they plan to inspect the District schools.

The visitors are Max A. Bairon, inspector general of Indian and rural education; Ernesto Vaca Guzman, member of the ministry of education; Leonidas Calvimontes and Carlos Calazar, normal school professors.

Leaders in the educational reform movement in Bolivia, the delegation has spent a year studying the educational program of Mexico. Their visit to the United States was arranged by the Pan American Union in co-operation with the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, Dr. Ellery C. Stosell, of American University, and Mrs. Edward Loring Thomas, of New York.

Two Closed Banks To Begin Paying Dividends Today

A dividend amounting to $200,000 will be paid to depositors of the closed Franklin National Bank beginning today, it has been announced.

Payments will be made in the bank building, 945 Pennsylvania avenue northwest, starting at 9 a. m. Depositors have been requested to bring their certificates of participation.

Checks amounting to $162,000 will be paid by the Potomac Savings Bank beginning today to 8,300 depositors bringing their notification cards to the office of Receiver Justus S. Wardell, 1406 G street northwest.

P.U.C. Again Asked For Taxi Hearing

Leaders of the A. F. L. Taxi Drivers' Local 447 yesterday asked the District Public Utitlities Commission to hold a hearing on higher rates and revised zones for taxicabs.

Anthony Barry, president, and Edward Kidney, secretary treasurer of the local, told the Commission the request for a hearing had received indorsement of 1,500 cab drivers.

'Sniper' Suspect Held for Further Quizzing by Police

Montgomery County police last night were holding their latest "sniper" suspect, a young colored man arrested Sunday, for further questioning at the Silver Spring Police Station.

Early in the day police said the tectives assigned to track down the man would be released. Later desniper who has killed two Washington men called the station and ordered the suspect held.

The man was seized after he was reported spying on two women whose automobile had stalled on Grubb road near the point where Peter F. Murray was slain two weeks ago. Arrested once before as a sniper suspect, the man was later released when police said they had determined he could not have been at the scene when Murray was killed.

Edgerton Funeral To Be Held Today

James Arthur Edgerton, 69, once a candidate for President, will be buried at Cedar Hill Cemetery today after funeral services at All Souls' Unitarian Church, at Sixteenth and Harvard streets northwest, at 1 p. m. He will be eulogized by Dr. Emmet Fox, New York, an associate in the New Thought Movement. Dr. Ulysses G. B. Grant, minister of All Souls, also will take part in the rites.

Mr. Edgerton was the nominee of the Prohibition-Labor Party in 1928. He once was president of the International New Thought Alliance and was active in cultural work for half a century. He died at his home, 3008 Virginia boulevard, Beverly Hills, Va., Saturday.

Masonic rites will be held at the cemetery. The honorary pallbeafers will include Secretary Roper, former Representative W. D. Jamieson, Huston Thompson, former special assistant to the Attorney General; Elmer E. Rogers, aide to the Supreme Council of the Scottish Rite; Robert S. Regar, former First Assistant Postmaster General; Ben McKelway, managing editor of the Evening Star; Strickland Gillian, Dr. William L. Robins, Charles F. Anderson and Harry Gaze.

Treasury Reports On Giannini Banks Aid SEC Inquiry

Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau revealed yesterday that copies of reports of national bank examiners on the Bank of America National Trust & Savings Association, San Francisco, had been furnished the Securities and Exchange Commission for use in the action against Transamerica Corporation, Giannini-controlled bank holding company.

This was done, Treasury officials said, after Herman Oliphant, Treasury general counsel, had ruled that the SEC was entitled under the law to use parts of the reports regarded as pertinent in the stock delisting proceeding against Transamerica.

The reports, it is understood, cover the period from 1931 to 1938 inclusive. Special regulations, it was recalled, permit use by other Government agencies of Treasury records if the secretary rules that the agencies are entitled to them.

Printers Reject New Work Week

Indianapolis, Dec. 5 (AP).—Woodruff Randolph, secretary treasurer of the International Typographical Union, announced here tonight members in a referendum November 23 had rejected a proposal to change union laws on the work week.

The vote on the work week proposition was 16,345 for and 31,303 against. Union laws provide for a maximum eight-hour day and maximum five-day week. Under the defeated proposition, a local union of the printers' organization could have contracted for a six-day week or a four-day week under certain conditions.

Suicide Suggests Free Gas Chambers

Sacramento, Calif., Dec. 5 (U.P.).—Ralph G. Clifford, 45, a farm hand, ill and idle, killed himself today after writing a note suggesting free public lethal gas chambers be placed in principal cities for the convenience of those who wanted "to terminate their misery."

Clifford, ill and unemployed, stuffed cracks in his hotel room with newspapers and killed himself with gas fumes

Bob Burns Says—

I haven't got anything against spiritualism but my suspicious nature keeps askin' why these manifestations never take place in the daytime. I suppose they jest naturally show up better at night.

One dark night a brakeman was signalin' the engineer when he dropped his lantern and it fell from the boxcar to the ground. A man passin' by picked the lantern up and tossed it back to him. Pretty soon, the engineer came runnin' up the tracks and he looked up at the brakeman and says: "Let me see you do that again." The brakeman says: "Do what?" And the engineer says: "Let me see you jump from the top of that car to the ground and then jump back up again!"
